THE ALBION.

Established in 1822.

A WEEKLY NEWSPAPER, published every Saturday Morning, in the City of New York, and devoted to News, Politics and General Literature. This old-established and popular Periodical is now supplied to the public at the rate of

THREE DOLLARS PER ANNUM,

OR SIX CENTS WEEKLY.

The Albion has been widely known for forty years throughout the United States and British North America. Thoroughly independent in tone, it will be found to combine all the elements of Home Journalism, with due attention to every American incident that is likely to bear on British interests.

The Literary Department will be enriched as heretofore, with the cream of English Literature. In connection with Art the ablest criticism will continue to be published in its columns. To these are added such Editorial Notices of current events as are deemed to be of interest to a circle of intelligent readers, whether British or American. The Albion furnishes, it is believed, a valuable weekly budget of Information and entertainment.

THE ALBION ENGRAVINGS.

We have on hand copies of the Albion Engravings and subscribers and others can be furnished with them—at $2 each to subscribers and $3 to non-subscribers. A few proof copies of the Florence Nightingale print on India paper may be had. The following engravings are also on hand:

Chalon's Queen Victoria, Luca's Prince Albert, Allan's Sir Walter Scott, Stuart's Washington, Matteson's Benjamin Franklin, Cope's First Trial by Jury, Buckler's St. Paul's London, Portrait of General Havelock, Herring's Three Members of the Temperance Society, The Castle of Ischia from Stansfield's Picture, Wandesford's Mary Queen of Scots, Landseer's Return from Hawking, Landseer's Dignity and Impudence, Landseer's Deer Pass, Dr. Kane at the Graves of Sir John Franklin's Men, Wilkins, Columbus propounding his Theory of a New World, and the Falls of Niagara from an original drawing made for the Albion.

Engravings can be safely forwarded by mail or express, on paste-board roller, at a charge of a few cents.

Money may be transmitted in registered letters at the risk of the office.

Subscribers in Canada and the British Provinces have to pay 26 cents per annum for American Postage.

PROSPECTUS
OF THE TWELFTH VOLUME.

ATLANTIC MONTHLY.

The July number commences the Twelfth Volume of the Atlantic Monthly, and will contain such a list of contents as will entitle it to marked consideration. Nathaniel Hawthorn contributes for the first number of the new volume "Outside glimpses of English Poverty," one of the most interesting of his admirable English Sketches.—Oliver Wendell Holmes has written for it "The Doings of a Sun-Beam." Robert Dale Owen discusses "The Claims of Labor or Service," and presents some new views for the study of the people of America. Gail Hamilton continues her popular "Gala Days." Professor Agassiz offers another eloquent paper on mountains. And many other articles of equal value with the above, will be included in the forthcoming number.

Poetry.

For the Examiner.

Lines on the Death of my Little Boy.

Farewell! Farewell! sweet summer hours,
Thy beauties gone away;
We can't forget the many flowers,
So fair, so young, so gay.
The morning zephyr spread her wings
Out o'er the meadow's green,
The rising sun his glory brings;
While nature is serene.

Farewell! Farewell! sweet summer hours,
Thy joys have left us now:
The singing birds have fled their bowers,
And at thy sceptre bow.
No more amid the evening hours
We ramble through the dale;
But soon to nestle 'neath the cloak
Of Winter's chilling trail.

How glad thy sparkling sunbeams played
Upon each passing joy:
They played upon the rosy brow
Of my own cherub boy.
Now at thy lingering farewell hour,
A message sure has come;
It bids my cherub haste away
And reach a better home.

We laid him in the cold, cold grave
To moulder with the dust;
But oh! we know that he is gone
To mingle with the just.
No more thy sunny rays can heat
Or scorch his marble brow.
He rests in peace in better climes
Than we are passing through.

And when thy time is come again,
Thou may'st bring all thy joy;
They never can return to me
My darling little boy.
But when thou wilt, thou'rt sure to come,
Oh! bring thy happy hours,
And o'er his little grassy bed
Scatter well they flowers.

Oh! bring not pangs of anguish more,
Nor bring thy withering blast.
But let us back in thy own rays,
For golden rays thou hast.
Take not the bud that Spring has brought,
Nor yet the flower of May,
But bring with the thy golden mein,
To bless thy coming day.

LOUIS NAPOLEON.

From Kinglake's Crimean War.

The President of the republic was Prince Charles Louis Napoleon Bonaparte, the statutory heir of the first French emperor. The election which made him chief of the State had been conducted with perfect fairness and since it happened that in former years he had twice engaged in enterprises which aimed at the throne of France, he had good right to infere that the millions of citizens who elected him into the Presidency are willing to use his ambition as a means of restoring to France a monarchial form of government.

But if he had been open in disclosing the ambition which was almost cast upon him by the circumstances of his birth, he had been as successful as the first Brutus in passing for a man of poor intellect. Both in France and in England at the time men in general imagined him to be dull. When he talked the flow of his ideas was sluggish; his features were opaque; and, after years of dreary studies, the writings evolved by his thoughtful long-pondering mind had not shed much light on the world. Even the strange ventures in which he had engaged had failed to win toward him the interest which commonly attaches to enterprise. People in London, who were fond of having gatherings of celebrated characters never used to present him to their friends as a serious pretender to a throne, but rather as though he were a balloon man, who had twice had a fall from the skies, and was still in some measure alive. Yet the more men knew him in England the more they liked him. He entered into English pursuits and rode fairly to hounds. He was friendly social, good-humored, and willing enough to talk freely about his views upon the throne of France. The sayings he uttered about his "destiny" were addressed (apparently as a matter of policy) to casual acquaintance, but to his intimate friends he used the language of a calculating and practical aspirant to Empire.

The opinion which men had formed of his ability in the period of exile was not much altered by his return to France; for in the Assembly his apparent want of mental power caused the world to regard him as harmless, and in the chair of the President he commonly seemed to be torpid. But there were always a few who believed in his capacity, and observant men had latterly remarked that from time to time there appeared a state-paper, understood to be work of the President, which teemed with thought, and which showed that the writer, standing solitary and apart from the gregarious nation of which he was the chief, was able to complete it as something external to himself. His long, endless study of the First Napoleon had caused him to adopt and imitate the Emperor's habit of looking down upon the French people and treating the mighty nation as a substance to be studied and controlled by a foreign brain. Indeed, during the periods of his imprisonment and of his exile the relation between him and the France of his studies were very like the relations between an antagonist and a corpse. He lectured upon it; he dissected its fibres; he explained its function; he showed how beautifully Nature in her infinite wisdom had adapted it to the service of the Bonapartes; and how, without the fostering care of those same Bonapartes, the creature was doomed to degenerate, and to perish out of the world.

If his intellect was of a poorer quality than men supposed it to be at the time of the Anglo-French alliance, it was much above the low gauge which people used to assign to it in the earlier period which began in 1846 and ended at the close of 1851. That which had so long veiled his cleverness from the knowledge of mankind was the repulsive nature of the science in which he labored. Many men before him had suffered themselves to bring their talents to the politics. Many more, toiling in humbler grades, had applied their cunning skill to the conflicts which engage courts of law; but no living man perhaps, except Prince Louis Bonaparte, had passed the hours of a studious youth and the prime of a thoughtful manhood in contriving how to apply stratagem to the science of jurisprudence. It was not, perhaps, from natural baseness that his mind took this vent. The in lination to sit and sit planning for the attainment of some object of desire—this indeed was in his nature; but the inclination to labor at the task of making law an engine of deceit, this did not come perforce with his blood. Yet it came with its parentage. It is true he might have determined to reject the indication given him by the accident of his birth, and to remain a private citizen; but when once he resolved to become a pretender to the imperial throne, he of course had to try and see how it was possible—how it was possible in the midst of this century—that the coarse Bonaparte yoke of 1804 could be made to sit kindly upon the neck of France; and, France being a European nation, and the yoke being in substance a yoke such as Tartars make for Chinese, it followed that the accommodating of the one to the other was only to be effected by guile.

Therefore by the sheer exigencies of his inheritance, rather than by inborn wickedness, Prince Louis was driven to be a contriver, and to expect him to be loyal to France, without giving up his pretension altogether, would be as inconsistent as to say that the heir of the first Perkin might undertake to revive the fleeting glories to the House of Warbeck, and yet refrain from imposture.

For years the Prince pursued his strange calling; and by the time his studies were over he had became highly skilled. Long before the moment had come for bringing his crooked science into use, he had learned how to frame a Constitution which should seem to enact one thing and really enact another. He knew how to put the word "jury" in laws which robbed men of their freedom. He could set the snare which he called "universal suffrage." He knew how to strangle a nation in the night time with a thing he called a "Plebiscite."

The lawyer-like ingenuity which had thus been evoked for purposes of jurisprudence could, of course, be applied to the composition of state papers and to political writings of all kinds; and the older Prince Louis grew, the more this odd accomplishment of his was used to subserve his infirmities. It was his nature to remain long in suspense, not merely between similar, but even between opposite plans of action: this weakness grew upon him with his years; and, his conscience being used to stand neuter in these mental conflicts, he never doubted by seeing that one source was honest and true other not; so, in order to be able to linger in his suspense, he had to be always making resting-places upon which for a time he might be able to stand undecided. Just as the indolent man becomes clever in framing excuses for his delays, so Prince Louis, because he was so often hesitating between the right and the left, became highly skilled in contriving—not merely ambiguous phrases, but—ambiguous schemes of action.

Partly from habits acquired in the secret societies of the Italian Carbonari, partly from long years passed in prison, and partly, too, as he once said, from his intercourse with the calm, self-possessed men of the English turf, he had derived the power of keeping long silence; but he was not by nature a reserved nor a secret man. Toward foreigners especially toward the English, he was generally frank. He was reserved and wary with the French, but this was upon the principle which makes a sportsman reserved and wary with deer, and partridges, and trout. No doubt he was capable of dissembling, and continuing to dissemble through long periods of time; but it would seem that his faculty of keeping his intentions secret was very much aided by the fact that his judgment was often in real suspense, and that he had no secret to tell. His love of masks and disguises sprang more perhaps from the odd vanity and the theatric mania, which will be presently spoken of, than from a base love of deceit; for it is certain that the mystery in which he loved to wrap himself up was often contrived with a view to a melodramic surprise.

It is believed that men do him wrong who speak of him as void of all idea of truth. He understood truth, and in conversation he habitually preferred it to falsehood; but his truthfulness (though not perhaps contrived for such an end) sometimes became a means of deception, because after generating confidence it would suddenly break down under the presence of a strong motive. He could retain friendly relations with a man, and speak frankly and truthfully to him for seven years, and then suddenly deceive him. Of course men, finding themselves ensnared by what had appeared to be honesty in his character, were naturally inclined to believe that every semblance of a good quality was a mask; but it was more consistent with the principles of human nature to believe that a truthfulness of seven years was a genuine remnant of virtue, than that it was a mere preparation for falsehood. His doubting and undecided nature was a help to concealment; for men got so wearied by following the oscillations of his mind that their suspicions at times went to rest; and then, perhaps, when he saw that they were quite tired of predicting that he would do a thing, he gently stole out and did it.

He had boldness of the kind which is produced by reflection rather than that which is the result of temperament. In order to cope with the extraordinary perils into which he now and then thrust himself, and to cope with them decorously, there was wanted a fiery quality which nature had confined to the great bulk of mankind as well as to him. But it was only in exceptacles of a really trying sort, and in extreme instant physical danger, that his bold fell short. He had all the courage which would have enabled him in a private station of life to play through the part of a hero; but he had besides, now and then, a factious kind of audacity produced by long dreamy meditation; and when he had wrought himself into this state he was apt to expose his firmness to trials beyond his strength. The truth is, that his imagination had so great a sway over him as to make him love the idea of enterprises, but it had not strength enough to give him a foreknowledge of what his sensations would be in the hour of trial. So he was most venturesome in his schemes for action; and yet, when at last he stood face to face with the very danger which he had long been courting, he was liable to be scared by it, as though it were something new and strange.

The Wonders of the Port of London.

A recent number of Chambers Journal contains some facts and statistics with regard to the trade and commerce of London, which are so marvelous in appearance that they might be esteemed fabulous, were it not for the figures which accompany them, and the respectable source from which they emanate:

The custom house of port London extends from London bridge to the North Foreland on the Kent coast, and the Naze on the Essex coast including not only the Thames, but the wide estuary below the river. This mighty port has grown up gradually. There were no docks in London until the present century, which has witnessed the expenditure of twelve millions sterling in the construction of docks on either side of the Thames. Six thousand ships now enter three docks annually, and the cry is "still they come!" All the docks are filled, though some do not pay well.

There are shipped off now yearly from the port of London alone, commodities to the value of thirty millions sterling, beside those from the other ports of the United Kingdom, and there is imported still a larger quantity of colonial produce. The ships which actually belong to the port of London are not less than 3,000 in number, averaging at out 300 tons each, or 900,000 tons of commercial shipping in all—a stupendous quantity to enter and depart from one single river. It is a quarter of the total amount of the whole Kingdom. Five hundred of these are steamers, and one-half of all the mercantile steam navy of England belongs to and is registered in the Port of London. No less than 30,000 ships enter the port of London yearly—more than 80 per day! Some of these ships make many voyages, but there are 33,000 arrivals with 30,000 cargoes. The vessels average 200 tons each, giving us an aggregate of 6,000,000.

The coasting trade of London is most wonderful. Of the 30,000 vessels just named 18,000 bring cargoes from other British ports, and 9,000 of these go back empty, mostly to coal ports. Five million tons of coal are burned annually in the metropolis, and about 12,000 cargoes of coal are brought into the Thames annually—one every hour, and a land-some surplus over. The spread of railways from London has had very little effect in diminishing trade by other modes of conveyance. The canal boats carry more than before railways were constructed, and the number of carriages and horses employed in Great Britain, the use of which railways were designed to supersede, is greater than it was before those railways were made. But the grandeur of the foreign trade of London strikes the imagination still more forcibly.

All the corners of the earth seem to be brought to a focu by the river Thames. Twelve thousand ships now enter there yearly, bringing nearly 12,000 cargoes of all that the earth can produce of value and beauty. Every forty minutes during the year a ship passes Gravesend, bringing stores from some colonial or foreign clime, in many cases much more than London's own proportion. For instance: seven eighths of all the coffee brought to all the parts of the United Kingdom: seven-ninths of all the live stock; one-half of all the sugar, tobacco, wood, fruit, rice, hides and skins; nearly one-half of the bacon, ham barreled salt meat, butter, cheese, eggs and lard; five-sixths of all the spices, and no less than fifteen-sixteenths of all the tea. London consumes just as much of all this as she wants, and sends the rest into the provinces and abroad.

It is truly wonderful where all the commodities go to. 10,000 pounds of pepper every year—the sound of the words makes one sneeze—24,000,000 bushels of corn, 1,000,000 hundred weights of flour and meal, and more than 1,000,000 of oil and oil-cake, entered the Thames alone in one recent year. Two ships every day, or thereabouts, of the average capacity of 700 tons, enter the Thames from India and China alone. The export trade is enormous. No less than ten or eleven millions sterling are in the forms of clothing and materials for clothing; £1000,000 in boots and shoes; £1,000,000 in "millinery and haberdashery;" £1,000,000 for "apparel and slops," all go from one port in one year! Some of the items of imports are very curious. Think of whole ship loads of Dutch eels, in cargoes of 20,000 pounds each, coming to London; oxen fattened for the London market in Schleswig-Holstein; Ostend butter and Ostend rabbits, which are sure to find a market in spite of the home supply.

Two million empty oyster shells were once brought over to London in one ship for the sake of that beautiful lining which constitutes the mother-of-pearl used for many fancy and ornamental purposes. One fact most instructive is observable in this vast trade of the port of London, viz: whatever is brought over, in whatever ship, from whatever place, and by whatever persons, it is sure to find a market. The price may be beaten down if the demand is languid, but they never think of saying, "We don't want any."

Notwithstanding the vast commercial importance of London, the great American trade is mostly within the grasp of Liverpool, because the Mersey is nearer to America than the Thames, and cotton is most needed in Lancashire, and because the chief articles sold to America, such as metals, hardware, earthware, &c, are fabricated nearer to Liverpool than to London. In the trade with Australia, too, Liverpool beats London, as measured by the relative population of the two places.

THE ROCK SMITTEN IN HOREB.

(LETTER FROM MR. HUNTER OF SYRIAN MISSION.)

BEIRUT, Syria, May 23.

Having recently returned from a visit to Mount Sinia, I thought you would be interested in the discovery of a spring of water under the east side of Mount Horeb; which I cannot learn has been noticed by any traveler who has written on Sinia, but which is so striking, that had it been seen, it would certainly have been mentioned. In coming toward Mount Horeb, we took the road followed by Dr. Robinson, by Wadyer-Rahah. On page 89 of the first volume of his Researches, he says: "On the left of Horeb, a deep and narrow valley runs up, south-southeast, between lofty walls of rock, as if in continuation of the southeast corner of the plain. In this valley, at the distance of one by a mile from the plain, stands the convent."

On the east side of the valley, at its entrance, is a small hill separated from the mountain by a road about one hundred feet across, which travellers follow in going to the convent by Wadyer-Sheikh. while those who go to the convent by Wadyer-Rahah pass this hill. On the south side of this hill is the camping-ground, and in getting to it we made a short circuit of five minutes' ride to avoid a precipitous bank. On arriving at our camping-ground we requested our camelleers, before despercing to our homes, to fill their barrels with water. They said they would take two of them to a spring where there was a reservoir into which they would place them. They pointed out to us the direction, on the west side of the valley, under Horeb, and we perceived a few trees at that place. Toward evening I told my party I would go and see whether they had filled and sunk the barrels in the pool. The direction of the spring was straight across the camping-ground.

After leaving the tents, in about two minutes I ascended the ground where we made the circuit, then passed down a slight declivity, after which the ground gradually rose until I reached the spring, in about ten minutes, by a rugged path over large boulders of Sinite granite. Here I was surprised to find a fine spring of pure water issuing from a rent in the rock.—The rent was in an oblique direction, the highest part of it on the left, and sloping down toward the right. The lowest part of the fissure was as high as a man's head from the ground. The surrounding rock is the solid red granite of Sinai, smooth on the face, and unbroken by fissure of seam. The fissure is about six feet long, four inches deep at the bottom and twelve at the top, and runs down into the rock parallel with the perpendicular side of the mountain. The water seems to issue about two feet above the bottom of the rent, flowing over the lowest part of it in a stream about the thickness of a man's finger.

The reservoir is about twelve feet long by five in width, and four feet deep, and was nearly full when I reached the place. When full, the water is left off, to irrigate some twenty of more fruit trees. As I was the first (as far as I am aware) to observe this singular "rent" in the "Rock of Horeb," and am unable to find an allusion to it in the books of Burckhardt, Robinson, Stanley, or other travellers, I have thought it my duty to inform the public of the fact, in order that future travellers may not fail to see it. Could we suppose that Moses had a rod about six feet long, and that raising the lower end of it as high as his head, he struck it obliquely against the granite cliff, and that a wedge shaped cavity was thus miraculously formed, this rent would meet the conditions exactly.

I would simply state that I made the above discovery on the 26th of February.

THE UNION MOVEMENT AMONG ENGLISH PRESBYTERIANS.—The cool treatment which has been given to the English Presbyterian Church by the Committee of Conference of the great Scotch bodies, is keenly felt by the English, yet they have not abandoned the effort to obtain recognition and participation in the movement. It would be painful indeed were such a movement to assume a mere clannish rather than a comprehensive national aspect. The Presbytery of Birmingham, at a meeting held September 1st, on motion of Rev. Dr. Mackenzie, RESOLVED, unanimously, "that this Presbytery, hearing with thankfulness, observed the great amount of unanimity which attended the deliberations of the Free Church Assembly and the Synod of the United Presbyterian Church in Scotland on the subject of the union of these branches of the Presbyterian body, and being impressed with the greater desirableness of Presbyterian union in England, resolve to request the Moderator to call a pro re nata meeting of the Synod of this Church, that the subject may, by the Synod be fully and practically considered, that misunderstandings may be prevented, and a course of action befitting this church, in existing circumstances, may be formally indicated and cordially pursued." Rev. David King, L. L. D., of the U. P. Church, London, has just issued a pamphlet on the proposed union, in which, without dogmatizing on the subject, he expresses himself favorable to the scheme of a British Church, including the English Presbyterians.—English Paper.

Two members of a Smith family are now on exhibition in Halifax, one six years of age, weighing 200 lbs., and the other four years, weighing 120 lbs.

ALEX. GRAHAM.

Peterborough, October 14th, 1863.

WHAT? No. 2.

Now that the Session has closed, and the excitement, attendant upon it, somewhat softened down, it is, perhaps, worth a while, for a little, to enquire what good the Opponentionists did by their factious conduct; what end they accomplished; and what was their object? The first questions might be summarily answered by the monosylable nil; but the latter requires a little more attention and reflection. A moment to consideration of the leaders of the Opposition will show the vis that energised and directed the body of Corruptionists. Members of the old Coalition Ministry still rankling with memories of those days when they were lords paramount in Canada—with palms keenly itching to again handle the public money they squandered away in thousands—not, perhaps, to enrich themselves—but to gratify and attach their followers to themselves—resolved, if at all possible, to regain their former ascendancy in the councils of the Government. To effect this end, their course was to oppose everything that the Ministry did, and hold it up in such a light as to make it appear ridiculous, sectional, or altogether unadapted to the objects intended. Their "motley crowd" of followers acted to their masters' satisfaction, upon the hint given. So well so, that the leaders, like a General on a battle-field directing an army's manœuvres, were enabled to keep in the back ground. Every effort, too, was made; every available blandishment and wile used, to detach some of the Ministerialists from their allegiance to their party. The wildest and most unfounded rumours were set afloat to create divisions and personal animosities in the Reform ranks. One or two of its members, whose personal feelings or fancied grievances made them rather doubtful in their support of the Government, were, at first, plied with the largest promises—praised sky high—and then, because their principles proved stronger than their feelings, were denounced in the loudest maledictions, and sent untimely to the Tartarean regions far down below. One thing is certain, however, that the tactics of the Opposition, however skilful in their conception or masterly in their details, as far as the end contemplated to be subserved by them was concerned, i. e. the reinstatement of the CARTIER MACDONALD dynasty, utterly and signally failed. The old Coalition leaders are doomed to pine in obscurity; and all their attempts to clutch again the reins of power only eventuated in evincing their impotency, and in much waste of time and money; for though the Oppositionists are impotent for good they are not altogether so for evil. They had it much in their power to retard business and protract the length of the Session, and they did not fail to do so—hoping, no doubt, to throw the odium of this upon the Ministry; who, by their actions and general reticence, showed how much they deprecated the conduct of their opponents. The country will, no doubt, by this time, be able to realize who were the real authors of the vast unnecessary expense which the last Session has entailed upon the Province—already sufficiently loaded with debt. It is a thing that ought not to be forgotten. As a straw shows which way the wind blows, so this conduct upon the part of the Oppositionists proves in what way they would have acted if entrusted again with the reins of power. It proves that true to their old instincts, they would not have spared the public chest to keep themselves in power. Huge Railway and other corporations, because, wielding a certain amount of influence, would have been subsidized, and a certain class of religious institutions, for the same reason, fattened with public appropriations; and, in fact, every person and thing that money could procure to subserve their purposes would have been procured. Their present lines in hard places, instead of making them better, would have tended to make them more wary in their movements, but, at the same time, in their determination to maintain power, more unscrupulous as to the means by which this end would be accomplished. What then would the country have been bettered if the Opposition had succeeded in ousting the present Ministry? In no respect whatever; on the contrary, such an event would have been attended with the worst results to the Province, generally. It would have tended to throw public affairs in almost extricable confusion; or, at least, would so have disarranged and confused them that it would, judging from the past, have taken more genius and greater business talent than are at present to be found in the Opposition ranks, to take hold and manage them to the people's satisfaction. This, we think, will be conceded by all whose judgment is not warped by prejudice, or whose perceptions of truth are not clouded by political darkness. We think we may congratulate ourselves that we are as well off as we are. There is a prospect of a better state of things looming up before us in the future. If the present Ministry is only allowed to inaugurate and carry out the policy, which it professes to be its intention to do, we may indeed not only look for a financial regeneration as the London Times words it, but for a regeneration in many other essentials in which it so long has been wanted. The Coalition Ministry had years to show what it could do. If the country bore with it for so long a period before it declared it wanting, surely it is nothing but fair that the present Administration with its accumulated trials and difficulties should have a reasonable opportunity to demonstrate what it can do, and whether or not it is able to accomplish what its predecessor by the almost unanimous voice of the Upper Province was declared to be incompetent and his deputé for—to say nothing worse.

LANDS FOR SALE.—We would call the attention of Farmers and Capitalists to the sale of valuable Lands in Douro and Sommerville, to be held at the Court House, on Tuesday, the 3rd November, at 12 o'clock. We understand that satisfactory arrangements could be made regarding an extension of time for the whole or a portion of the purchase money.

THE CZAR.

The Emperor of all the Russias occupies an anomalous position in the eyes of the world. At one time and for a certain course of conduct, he is held up as the greatest philanthropist the world has ever seen; at another time and for another course of conduct, he is denounced as a monster of cruelty. It is evident, however, whatever reasons there may apparently exist to attach to him the odium of cruelty or tyranny, that in his character there are many points of interest, and that the charge must be referred to important state reasons, which have been allowed to overrule and subordinate his own private feelings and inclinations. One thing is clear, and that is that his career since his accession has shown him to be anxious for his people. And but last month we find him in person opening the Diet of Finland. There is more significance in this than at first sight appears to the superficial reader. The student of History will remember that Finland was wrested from Sweeden in 1809, and united to Russia. At its annexation, it is true, it was guaranteed its ancient rights, among which was a sort of Constitution; but these rights remained in abeyance, and the Constitution was practically ignored until the Czar opened the Diet, when he declared that in future the people would be allowed to manage their own affairs, and that he would maintain for Finland the principle of Constitutional Monarchy, which, in his opinion, was inherent in the Finnish people, and which all their laws and customs reflected. He also stated his intention of conferring upon the Diet greater privileges than it ever possessed. This act, taken in conjunction with what he has done for the honor and prosperity of his Empire in the emancipation of millions of a race that had for centuries been bound down in serfdom and the forming of them into an important class, reveals the Czar in an extremely favourable light, both as a national Reformer and as a practical, far-seeing Legislator. It proves that he entertains just and profund views of freedom, as well for its intrinsic importance as its value as a political lever. Already the good effects of the comprehensive policy induced by the Czar since his accession are making themselves seen and felt throughout the vast Empire over which he rules.—Education is making rapid progress, and financial and judicial reforms long much needed have been introduced. No doubt the great success attendant upon the transition of Austria from an absolute to a limited monarchy, has exerted a powerful influence over the mind of the Muscovite ruler. In Austria he has seen that change producing the most wonderful results, — in quickening the energies of the people, — in stimulating into unwonted activity all the industrial relations of the country, and in developing a depth of patriotic feeling and a strength of national character altogeter unexpected in an Empire that by many was looked upon as rapidly lapsing from its once high position, almost and ready through its inherent weakness to be disintegrated. Greatly strengthened in his resolves by his neighbors successful experiment, the Czar is evidently bending all his energies to gradually prepare his people for that freedom and those liberal institutions which alike form the foundation and superstructure of a nation's stability, happiness and prosperity. Were it not for the manner in which Poland is treated, the Russian Emperor would certainly be entitled to be considered the foremost man of his time in all those grand essentials of a great man, both in the conception of the mighty schemes that have been for years engaging his attention and the magnitude of interest they involve. But, unfortunately, that stain of Polish oppression is a dark one, and sadly mars a character so well worthy of contemplation and admiration.

THE LONDON "TIMES" ON CANADIAN FINANCES.

The Great Thunderer, in a late article, speaks in a highly laudatory manner of Mr. HOLTON, declaring him to be fully equal "to the occasion." The article enters into a detailed account of the Canadian debt—at least as nearly as it could be approximated to—and shows the difficulties the Finance Minister has had to contend against since his acceptance of office. It strongly praises Mr. HOLTON for the square and open manner in which he proposes to grapple with and dispose of those difficulties. It emphatically declares, with regard to the views enunciated by Mr. HOLTON in his late speech, "that nothing can be sounder than the principles thus expressed," and that "they have only to be carried out, and Canada will soon be in the way of a financial regeneration. The plan Mr. HOLTON proposes to meet the financial difficulties of the Province is analysed and strongly commended for the sound judgment and statesmanlike views it indicates. It shows that the conduct of the Oppositionists in assailing Mr. HOLTON in not bringing in a full scheme of financial policy before he had time or opportunity to do so, to be factious and reprehensible in the extreme. Mr. PEEL, it shows, though he accepted office in 1841 did not inaugurate his financial policy till '42. It augurs the most successful results of Mr. HOLTON'S mission to England, and concludes its masterly retrospect by saying that "of course everything has yet to be done, but it is no slight advantage to find a Minister of Finance who can look affairs boldly in the face and tell the representatives of the people what it behoves them to do. Especially, too, must we mark the deference to Imperial opinion which was openly acknowledged. Mr. HOLTON plainly asserted that in the matters of national defences and protective tariffs something was due to the known desires of the mother country, and he urged upon his hearers that as England showed respect to the opinions of her colonists, so colonists should show respect to the opinion of England. We are very glad to find an important dependency entering upon a policy so reasonable. If the Canadians will only carry out such views as these, they may rely on a fair reciprocation from this country. We are gratified with their allegiance and anxious for their prosperity. The former they will not find cumbered with any unjust or disproportionate burdens; the latter they cannot establish more securely than by such a reform in their financial policy as is now recommended for their adoption."

OUR TOWN ELECTION.

The time is fast approaching when the rate-payers of the Town of Peterborough will be called upon to elect a Mayor and twelve men from among themselves to represent their interests in the Town Council. We are lead to speak upon this subject thus soon from the fact that in times past too much indifference has, apparently, been manifested by the electors in making choice of their representatives. Too often has it been the case that from some cause or other persons have been elected to fill the position of Municipal Councillors without a regard to their business qualifications. We hold that this is a most important consideration. We have naught to say against the gentlemen who at present fill the office of Councillors. Of their capabilities we will not presume to judge. But as it is not improbable that at the election in January there will be some change, we wish to suggest that if the electors would have their interests well looked after, if they would have the affairs of the town managed in a proper and business-like manner, they should at once give the subject their serious attention. There is nothing to gain by procrastination, but there may be much to loose. It is not exactly the thing to calmly wait until within a day or two of the time for the election, and then quietly take up with any thirteen men who may feel inclined to offer themselves. Neither should the rate-payers imagine that it is not necessary for all of them to attend the polls. They should remember that it is the duty of each elector to see that the right men are appointed. They should bear in mind that the Town Council requires men to transact its affairs whose knowledge of financial and general business is such as will fit them for successfully disposing of all matters relating to the proper government of the Town as may be from time to time brought under their notice. Having these considerations in view, then we trust that every voter in the Municipality will feel it incumbent upon him to weigh carefully the qualifications of of the gentlemen who may offer themselves as candidates at the approaching election, that he will take his stand at the polls, and without fear or favor cast his vote for those who are, in his opinion, most likely faithfully and zealously to advance the interests of this growing Town. A word to the wise is sufficient.

EUROPEAN NEWS.

The Paris correspondent of the London Post asserts that France has no intention of recognizing the confederates. A guard of marines has been placed on board of the rams in the Mersey. The Times says that nothing is as yet certain in regard to the vessels, but they will not be allowed to slip off as the Alabama. Queen Victoria made her re-entry into public life at the inauguration of the Prince Albert statue in Aberdeen. The claims against the Great Eastern are to be paid off, and she is to be employed in the India or Australian trade. The Liverpool Emancipation Society have memorialized Earl RUSSELL to favor the detention of rebel vessels and applaud his late action. An English Government commission has just gone through France to Spain to buy curiosities, works of art, vertu, or any thing else Moorish or Spanish, worthy of the museums of London. The Polish question remained without change. The Spanish elections were in favor of the government. The Minister of Finance has resigned, on other than political grounds, it is said. Sweeden declines to sign a treaty of alliance with Denmark. M. A. E. FOCUL'S financial statement of the French Legislature is understood to have been already forwarded to the government printing office, the finishing touches having been supplied at NAPOLEON'S recent visit to Tarbes. The certainty of an over average in all the natural produce of the empire has been already discountenanced; but the stern fact of France finding herself involved in a perfect mass of political responsibilities can neither be shirked nor readily met with extenuating circumstances. The Emperor NAPOLEON presented the Archduke MAXIMILLIAN with an album containing photographic views and topographical plans taken by officers on the staff of the French army in Mexico.

A Russian Hampden, Herr JOHN REITENBACH, a landed proprietor in the province of Eastern Prussia, circulates the following declaration among his friends and acquaintances:—

To-day some officials appeared on my estate, taking away a number of moveables for arrears of taxes. To guard against erroneous and disagreeable rumors, I beg to inform my friends and acquaintances that, in accordance with a declaration made at the Gumbennen. I am determined to resist the present anti-constitutional system, and during the practical suspension of the charter to pay no taxes of my own accord.

Plucken, Sept 21, 1863.

SIR CHARLES ELLIOT, the Governor of St. Helena, has sent home to the Jamaica Cotton Company (of which he was a director) samples of cotton now growing in that Island with a view to ascertain its value in our market. There is a considerable tract of land assigned to the Governor, and as there are numbers of captured Africans frequently landed there, they might under skilful management be trained in cotton cultivation, and would thus become very valuable laborers in the West India colonies, to which they might afterwards be assigned.

MURDER IN OPS.

A most cruel and cold-blooded murder was perpetrated in Ops last week. The victim's name was DIAMOND. He lived with his family, it seems, in a shanty with another family named FLEMING. DIAMOND was jealous of his wife, and, if all reports are true, he had good cause. On the day in question they had both been attending a logging bee, and returned home considerably the worse of liquor. A quarrel arose during the night between the two men, when FLEMING so abused the other that he died before morning. FLEMING and the wife of the deceased were arrested and lodged in Lindsay to take their trial for murder at the next Assizes.

VOICES FROM THE HEARTH.

The above is the name of a small volume of Poetry which has made its way into our sanctum. From the cursory manner in which we have been able to look through it, we have formed a very favorable opinion of its merits. Its author ISIDORE ASCHER B.C.L. of Montreal seems to have the ring of the true poet about him. Some of the pieces are very touching and full of pathos. We will take another opportunity of giving our readers some of the passages that have particularly struck our attention. Mr. LOVELL of Montreal is the publisher; it can be obtained through the book stores of the Town.

AMERICAN NEWS.

General ROSECRANS has been relieved and has arrived in Cincinnati.

The changes thus far officially ascertained in the Army of the Cumberland are as follows: General ROSECRANS is relieved, General THOMAS assuming command. The departments of Generals BURNSIDE, THOMAS and HURLBUT are consolidated under General GRANT, whose headquarters will be in the field, for which he leaves to-day. General HOOKER and SHERMAN are to have command of corps, and McPHERSON'S department will extend from the department of the Gulf to Napoleon. The causes of General ROSECRANS'S removal are still matters of speculation.

Gen. HOOKER'S force has crossed the Tennessee River, and fighting was reported. The river is rising, and is several feet deep on the shoals.

There is no very particular news from the Potomac. The Confederates, however, had destroyed the Alexandria and Orange railroad. There were rumors of General MEADE being superseded, and General SICKLES and SEDGWICK were indicated as his successors, but these we believe are without foundation.

It is reported that the army of the Potomac will be unable to move for three weeks to come, on account of the destruction of the railroad. General MEADE returned to the front yesterday, after a consultation with the President.

On the 24th, the Confederate's infantry re-crossed the Rappahannock River on upon two pontoon bridges, near the Orange and Alexandria Railroad bridge, and driving back GREGG'S cavalry division, which lost heavily, had a short engagement with two brigades of Federal infantry, one belonging to the 2nd corps, the other to the 3rd corps. The Confederates now occupy the line on the left of which rests near Bevely Ford, crossing the railroad near Bolton Station and extending toward Stafford Court House.

Operations are still proceeding against Charleston, but the progress is slow. It is said that PARROTT, the celebrated inventor of the ordnance called after him, is there to give his assistance. The Federals are apparently as confident as ever of ultimately taking the city. The Confederates are just as confident they will not.

A skirmish took place on the Big Black River, 18 miles below Vicksburg, between the Federal forces and two hundred Confederate cavalry. The latter were driven beyond Port Gibson. A Vicksburg letter of the 13th says that a provisional government will be established in Mississippi in two or three weeks, Colonel MARKLAND, of Kentuky being spoken of for governor. The letter adds that important movements are on foot and in two weeks there will be no armed foe on the soil of Mississippi.

The Tribune's Washington dispatch of the 26th says there are various signs that the federal armies are about to assume the offensive along the whole line, and there are good grounds for the hope that the campaign soon to commence will not close till large accessions has been made to the territory under the national flag. General GRANT has assumed personal command of the veteran army at Chattanooga. General MEADE has been assured that the army of the Potomac must find a fight; if not under his command, under that of some other General. General BURNSIDE is in a position in which he can assist either of these two great armies, and he has recently shown how effectually he can cooperate. Gen. Foster is the man to make Richmond tremble before a movement up the Peninsula. Similar activity prevails at all parts where our forces are stationed.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Monday, October 26th, 1863.

All the Councillors were present.

A communication was read from the Catholic School Trustees, asking the Council to have the Collector of the Town collect the Taxes for their School.

Mr. WM. O'DONNELL made application for the appointment of Collector.

Mr. BURNHAM'S motion, ordering the Treasurer to pay upon the orders of the committee appointed for the erection of the Lock-up, the amount required under the contract, for the erection and completion of the same, was lost on the following division:—

Yeas—Messrs. TOOLE, LAWSON, RYAN, LUNDY and BURNHAM.

Nays—Messrs. CARLILE, ORMOND, DICKSON, NICHOLLS, CLUXTON, DOUGLAS and FRY.

The Finance Committee recommended the payment of several accounts.

A By-law was passed appointing Mr. D. HOPKINS Collector for the present year.

Mr. CLUXTON introduced a By-law, prohibiting the erection of wooden building in certain parts of the Town.

A special committee was appointed on behalf of the Council, to enquire into the management of the Peterborough and Monaghan Gravel Road.

Twenty dollars was placed at the disposal of the Charities committee.

The Street and Bridge committee were ordered to complete the grading on Water and Murray Streets.

The Council adjourned for two weeks.

NEW BOOK STORE.

In another column will be found the advertisement of COX and DAVIDSON who have succeded Mr. R. WHITE in the book and stationery business. They are determined to keep on hand a large and well assorted stock, and from Mr. DAVIDSONS experience in the business, and from the facilities the firm have at hand we are sure satisfaction will be given to those who patronise them. Particular inducements are held out to clergymen, teachers and country dealers. Give them a call.

DISMISSAL OF BRITISH CONSULS.

The Richmond (confederate) Sentinel of the 13th inst. says:—We understand that in consequence of the action of the British Consuls relative to foreigners enlisted in the Confederate service, the President has felt it his duty to dismiss them all from the Confederacy. We shall to-morrow lay before the country the official correspondence, in which the action of the executive is made known, and the reasons of it explained.

The Nevada Standard states that the population of California is decreasing. In the towns and cities a number of business houses are closed, and the property has greatly declined in value. The discovery of silver and gold mines outside the State is one of the reasons given for the loss of population. The hope of California is said to be in the demand for her agricultural products, which must become of increasing value.

Gen. NEAL DOW, of Maine, who was made prisoner some months ago and confined at Richmond, has been transferred to Mobile, under a requisition from the Governor of Alabama; the charges against him being that he had stolen a piano and a service of plate, whilst exercising military authority in that State,—Mr. Dow's teetotal and abolition views, it is said, render him particularly unpopular in the South.

A FORTUNATE CANADIAN.—Among the Canadians who made the first overland journey to British Columbia in search of gold was Mr. WATTY of Elgin, in the county of Huntingdon, C. E.—a respectable young farmer who had some experience in mining in California. After his arrival he prospected the country, and this spring took up a claim of 100 feet near the Cameron claim, which he worked in a conjunction with a few others. We learn from a late arrival that Mr. WATTY'S claim is worked out, having yielded $160,000, and that he is about returning to Canada quite satisfied with the result of his year in the gold-diggings of British Columbia.

MISERY IN LONDON.—The Registrar General of London states, officially, that in London, with its three millions of inhabitants, one in every six persons who are there die in the public institutions; that is, in the workhouses, hospitals, asylums or prisons. Nearly one in every sixth person dies a pauper or a criminal! It is stated that of the eight thousand convicts, in institutions, near London, one thousand, that is, one eighth of the whole, were born in affluence, and had received a classical education!

A HISTRIONIC ENTERTAINMENT will be given in Coulter & Stevenson's New Hall, on the evening of Tuesday next, in aid of the Skating Rink funds, which in consequence of the expenses to which the Club have gone, in fitting up the Rink, &c., are not in a very flourishing condition. The Committee are tired of raising money by subscription, and as the Dramatic Society have kindly offered their services to put things right, they hope there will be a good turn out to witness their performances. The following are the pieces which the Society intend bringing before the public: "Loan of a Lover," "Bombastes Furioso," and "The Omnibus."

GRANT OF LANDS IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.—By Direction of His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, a general order to the army, signed by the Adjutant General, has been promulgated, specifying the terms and conditions under which grants of land may be obtained by the officers of the army in the settlement of British Columbia. In future all field officers of 21 years' service will be granted 600 acres of land; field officers of 20 years' service, 500 acres; and field officers of 15 years' service, as well as captains of 20 years' service, 400 acres; captains of 15 years' service will be granted 300 acres; and subalterns of seven years' service 200 acres.

PRINCE ALFRED.—H. R. H. Prince ALFRED spent some time on Saturday, 10th October, at the meeting of the Social Congress, appearing to take much interest in the various papers which were read. When about to leave, he rose and bowed to the audience, which was the signal for an enthusiastic outburst of cheering. Before leaving the hall, His Royal Highness shook hands cordially with Lord BROUGHAM, an incident which elicited the greatest enthusiasm from the audience, who rose en masse and waved their hats. After His Royal Highness had left the hall, Lord BROUGHAM said—He is only a young man, but he is as worthy a Prince as ever was in the world. (Loud and prolonged cheers.)

NEW APPOINTMENTS.—The Times, of Oct. 10, has the following:—"The late Governor of Nova Scotia, the present Marquis of Normandy, arrived in England by the last Cunard steamer. We believe we are correct in naming the Hon. ARTHUR GORDON, at present Governor of New Brunswick, as the noble Marquis's successor, and the Hon. JOHN ROSE, of Montreal, as the newly appointed Governor of New Brunswick. We learn also that Captain KENNEDY has been appointed Governor of Vancouver's Island, vice Governor DOUGLAS."

CRITICAL STATE OF SOCIETY.—A gentleman, says the Kingston American, who has made the tour of Wolfe Island, is astonished at the increase of population by American emigration—that class having occupied the Island to such an extent that it is difficult to determine whether the balance of power rests with the native or foreign element. Three dollars per month is the standard of wages for farm hands, and many do not demand so high a figure.

ORCHARDS, &c.—Those who have not got their orchards planted, should without further delay, call at the HASTING'S Hotel, and see the handsome Fruit Trees, which Mr. GARDNER has brought from Dr. BEADLE'S Nurseries, at St. Catharines. He intends canvassing the County during the coming winter, when every one should give him an order, especially when he is to be relied upon and what you order you are sure to get.

EMIGRATION OF HANDLOOM WEAVERS.—On Thursday night another batch of emigrants was despatched from the Citadel station, Carlisle, on their way to New Zealand. This draught consisted of three families, the heads of whom are THOS. MAIN, THOMAS HUGHES and JOHN WALKER. They were sent out under the auspices of the Carlisle Emigration Society. Since the last party of emigrants left the number of looms destroyed has been seven, making a total destruction of 44 of those machines that have so long perpetuated the now miserable trade of handloom weaving.—Carlisle Journal.

SCHOLARSHIPS FOR FEMALE STUDENTS.—The Committee of Council on Education purposes, with the sanction of the Treasury, to establishing two scholar-ships, to be held by the two most eminent female students of the schools of art throughout the country. The endowments for the proposed scholarships have been provided for by the fees taken at the exhibiton of the wedding presents of their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales at the South Kensington Museum in May last.

AGRICULTURAL STATISTICS, IRELAND.—In Ireland last year there were 2,553,481 acres of cereal crops, while this year there are 144,719 acres less. The net decrease of green crops this year is 19,358 acres. It is estimated that there are at present in Ireland 579,179 horses, 3,138,275 cattle, 3,303,931 sheep, and 1,064,802 pigs, the total value of which is £29,997,546, as compared with £31,224,587 in 1862.

THE CULTIVATION OF COTTON in the southern province of Italy has been attended with gratifying success. The crop this year has been twice as large as that of 1862, and the quality is excellent. And as it is much in demand, and fetches a high price, more than double the quantity will probably be sown for next year.

THE CIRCULATION of the EXAMINER is rapidly increasing. It enters almost every house and is read by almost everybody in Peterborough; and those, therefore, having anything they wish to dispose of, will find it to their advantage to advertise in its columns. Yearly advertisers liberally dealt with.

ROYAL MARRIAGE.—It is expected that the marriage of Princess Helena, the Queen's third daughter with the Prince of Orange, will take place next spring. The Princess Helena was born in May, 1846.

A COMMUNICATION on the Bible Christian Sabbath School tea party in Smith, Northeys neighborhood, was received, but too late for insertion this week.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

MR. EDITOR,—I see be your remarks in the EXAMINER, that you, as well as others, have been deceived by the course which Mr. CONGER has thought fit to pursue since his election as our representative. In my opinion the conduct of Mr. CONGER has been rather strange, considering the promises he made. When Col. HAULTAIN declined running for the County, and Mr. DENNISTOUN when he came out, having proved so very anti-ministerial in his address and speeches, parties called on Mr. CONGER, to see how he would act provided the Reform Party would support him; indeed, I myself called upon him, when, after some talk upon public matters, I told him plain and plump that unless he would agree to support the present Ministry that we would run an outside candidate and that we could easily find one to defeat him. I then asked him if he would, if elected, support the present Ministry; at the same time, reminding him of his short comings when he was our member before. He told me that he would vote for the Ministerial candidate for Speaker; that he would give the Ministry a liberal support; and that he would, on no account, try to injure them. I then said, your Address is rather non-committal: you should have worded it to show that you are a Ministerial candidate. He answered, he would have done so only he feared that Mr. DENNISTOUN'S party would bring an outside candidate from Toronto and give him some trouble; but that he would act to our satisfaction!—averring that he was always a Reformer; that he was still one; and that the EXAMINER, the Government organ of the County, was supporting him, as were nearly all the leading reformers.

Now, I ask, how has he kept all his promises? It is true, he voted for Mr. WALLBRIDGE for Speaker; but what has he done since? When Mr. SCOTT moved an amendment to the Address, and Mr. COCKBURN his non-confidence motion, we find Mr. CONGER voting against those he agreed to support. His, surely, is a liberal support with a vengeance! I am afraid that it will take a great many such votes before Mr. CONGER gets a ship Canal up the Otonabee or any other great river—that Col. Strickland will look a long time before he sees the white sails of vessels from Glasgow or Liverpool passing by Lakefield on their road to great far West. When you meet Captain Sutherland in the street, he hangs his head to hide the blush of shame that mantles his cheeks, for the man he seconded and was willing to expect something from. He feels (as is really the case) that he has been completely "sold". Well might Mr. CONGER'S old political friends in Cobourg say that he will sell Peterborough again. It is asked sometimes, how did Mr. CONGER get elected by acclamation? The solution is easy. The people knew that Mr. CONGER wanted very badly to get into Parliament, and sympathizing for his bad health and other troubles—that I need not allude to, they, after taking all things into consideration, resolved to overlook his past failings and give him another trial—vainly hoping that the lesson he received in being twice rejected at the polls would prove salutary. In vain, we say, for they have been greatly mistaken in their man. Perhaps, before he left here, he meant to keep his promises; but when that fit couple CARTIER and MACDONALD got hold of him, he was no longer his own master or a free agent. Was it so? I suppose it is necessary for leaders to have a few vain, shallow men to use at will.

I would advise Mr. CONGER, unless he repents right early and right earnestly, to put his house in order, for he will never be sent back again to betray this fine County of ours—eyes, betray!—strange as the word may appear. The Conservatives hate him for his treachery, and the Reformers, can they respect or admire him?

I remain,
Your obed't servant,
JAMES MILLER.

HORRIBLE MASSACRE BY A MANIAC.—The Quebec Chronicle of Thursday relates the following:—"A person arrived in town yesterday from the country of Megantic, places us in possession of a few details of a sickening massacre perpetrated by an insane woman named Clarke—the victims being her own children. It would appear, according to the statement made, that this woman is a farmer's wife residing in the township of New Ireland, and that she has already been deranged to such an extent as to necessitate her confinement in the lunatic asylum for a time. She had, however, returned to her family, but had recently manifested symptoms of a violent outbreak of her mental ailment. On Monday night, in a terrible fit of frenzy, she destroyed her four children—two girls said to have aged respectively fifteen and thirteen, a little boy considerable younger, and an infant some two or three months. It is surmised, from the circumstances, that she despatched the two eldest with an axe, and the younger children with a razor. The unfortunate maniac after this terrible deed attempted to cut off her hand at the wrist with a razor, and also made a desperate attempt to serve her foot at the ankle with an axe, inflicting fearful wounds upon her person in these attempts. This shocking occurrence bears a striking resemblence in its sickening details to the Arthabaska tragedy of last year, when another insane woman killed her seven children, and then put end to her own existence."

TWO YOUNG LADIES DROWNED.—It comes our painful duty to narrate the circumstances connected with the lamentable death of two estimable young ladies, one a Miss Theresa Millar, daughter of the late Dr. Millar, and the other a Miss Jane Millar, aged 20 and 16 years respectively, who were drowned in the River Sydenham, about 3 miles below Dresden, on the 10th inst., by the upsetting of a small boat in which they were crossing that stream. It seems that Miss Jane Millar was on the north bank of the river, and hailed Miss Theresa Millar, who was on the opposite bank where there was a little boat, to bring her across, with which request she attempted to comply, first however, safely bringing over a young girl, a daughter of Mr. H. Wells. Upon attempting to cross the second time, now with Miss Jane Millar in the boat, it was found when about the middle of the river was reached, that the boat was too small for their safe conveyance, and Miss Jane Miller becoming alarmed, caught hold of her companion, when the frail craft capsized, precipitating both the females into the water. Before any assistance could be rendered, the two young ladies in the bloom of health sank to a watery grave, having struggled in the stream for fully five minutes before they went down.—Chatham Planet.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK,

For 1864.

GREAT LITERARY & PICTORIAL YEAR.

THE PUBLISHER of Godey's Lady's Book, thankful to that public which has enabled him to publish a Magazine for the last thirty-four years of a larger circulation than any in America, has made an arrangement with the most popular authoress in this country—

MARION HARLAND,

Authoress of "Alone," "Hidden Path," "Miriam," "Moss Side," and "Nemesis,"

Who will furnish Stories for the Lady's Book for 1864. This alone will place the Lady's Book in a literary point of view fare ahead of any other Magazine. Our other favourite writers will all continue to furnish articles throughout the year.

The best Lady's Magazine in the world and the Cheapest.

THE LITERATURE

Is of that kind that can be read aloud in the family circle, and the clergy in immense numbers are subscribers for the Book.

THE MUSIC

Is all original, and would cost 25 cents, (the price of the Book) in the music stores; but most of it is copyrighted, and cannot be obtained except in Godey.

OUR STEEL ENGRAVINGS,

All efforts to rival us in this have ceased, and we now stand alone in this department, giving as we do many more and infinitely better engravings than are published in any other work. Godey's immense double sheet Fashion-Plates, containing from five to seven full length colored Fashions on each plate—other Magazines give only two—are far ahead of any Fashions in Europe or America. The publication of these Plates cost $40,000 more than the Fashion Plates of the old style, and nothing but our wonderfully large circulation enables us to give them. Other Magazines cannot afford it. We never spare money when the public can be benefited.

These Fashions may be relied on. Dresses may be made after them, and the wearer will not subject herself to ridicule, as she would be if she visited the large cities dressed after the style of the plates in some of our so-called Fashion Magazines.

OUR WOOD ENGRAVINGS,

Of which we give twice or three times as many as any other Magazine, are often mistaken for steel; they are so far superior to any others.

IMITATIONS.

Beware of them. Remember that the Lady's Book is the original publication and the cheapest. If you take Godey, you want no other Magazine. Everything that is useful or ornamental in a house will be found in Godey.

DRAWING LESSONS.

No other Magazine gives them, and we have given enough to fill several large volumes.

OUR RECEIPTS

Are such as can be found nowhere else. Cooking in all its varieties—Confectionary—the Nursery—the Toilet—the Laundry—the Kitchen Receipts upon all subjects are to be found in the pages of the Lady's Book. We originally started this department, and have peculiar facilities for making it most perfect. This department alone is worth the price of the book.

LADIES' WORK TABLE.

This department comprises engravings and descriptions of every article that a lady wears.

MODEL COTTAGES.

No other Magazine has this department.

Terms to Subscribers in the British Provinces:

One copy one year, $3; two copies one year, $5; three copies one year, $7.

Five copies one year, and an extra copy to the person sending the club, making six copies for $11.50.

Special Clubbing with other Magazines.

Godey's Lady's Book and Arthur's Magazine, one year, $4.

Godey and Harper, one year, $3.

Godey, Harper, and Arthur, one year, $7.

At these prices subscribers in the Provinces will have only the British postage to pay.

Treasury notes and notes of all solvent banks taken at par.

Be careful and pay the postage on your letter.

SOLDIERS in the ARMY!

AND OUR PEOPLE AT HOME,

Are now offered an opportunity by which they can obtain a

GOOD AND DURABLE TIME-PIECE,

At a very Low Figure.

OUR WATCHES are warranted to keep time one year, and the buyer is allowed the privilege of examination before the payment is required.

Improved Duplex in full Ruby Actions.

A first-class Hunting Time-Piece of silver material, over which is electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, most durably wrought, making the imitation so faultless that it cannot be detected from the solid material by the most experienced Judges; acids will not affect it. London made movement. Improved Duplex in full Ruby Actions has sweep seconds, and is not to be excelled in general appearance. This decidedly the one of the best articles ever offered for traders and speculators. Engineers, emigrants and persons travelling will find them superior to any other, alteration of climate will not affect their accuracy. Price, packed in good shape and good running order, only $35, or case of 5 for $200.

Silver Double Time Hunting Levers,

Best quality silver cases, over which electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, similar to our Improved Duplex, and superior adjusted movements with "stop," to be used in timing horses, ect.; has four ludexes for Washington and Greenwich time, sweep second, and all the improvements. All in all, taking its beautiful and faultless appearance and its superior movement into consideration, we regard it as decidedly the cheapest article of the kind in the market. Price, in good running order, $35, or case of 6 for $200.

☞ We ask no pay in advance, but will forward either of them to responsible parties, to any part of the loyal States, with bill payable to the express-man when the Good are delivered, giving the buyer the privilege of examination, and, if not satisfactory, the watch can be returned at our expense.

The express companies refuse making collections on soldiers, and other parties in the disloyal States, consequently all such orders must be accompanied by the cash to insure attention. We make a deduction on either Watch when the payment is forwarded in advance.

Money may be sent by express at our expense.

COX & DAVIDSON

(Successors to Richard White,)

WOULD respectfully announce that they have succeeded Mr. Richard White in the Book and Stationery Business, formerly carried on by him, and intend carrying on that Business in their store, opposite Messrs. Nicholl's & Hall's, Simcoe Street, where, in addition to the Stock purchased from Mr. White, they are receiving a complete assortment of everything in the above line, and now offer a well selected stock of

SCHOOL BOOKS AND STATIONERY,

Every description of Blank & Account Books, Letter Books, Miscellaneous Books, Prayer Books, Bibles, Hymn Books, and all other articles usually found in a Book and Stationery Establishment. Particular attention paid to filling orders for any Books not in stock; weekly parcels will be received from New York, Montreal and Toronto. The most popular English and American Magazines and Periodicals received as soon as published and supplied at Publisher's Prices. We will sell all Goods at the lowest price, and from our experience in the trade we are satisfied that we can supply our customers on as good terms as any Book Store in the Canadas. Special inducements to School Teachers and Clergymen. Country Dealers supplied wholesale at very low rates. Persons who have been receiving Periodicals and Magazines from Mr. White will in future be supplied by us. In soliciting public patronage, we hope by strict attention to business and punctuality in filling all orders entrusted to us, to give satisfaction to all who may favor us with their support.

COX & DAVIDSON.

P. S.—The above business will be managed by Mr. Davidson, and in no way interferes with the Telegraph and Express Business, which will be attended to by me as heretofore.

BY-LAW NO. 20.

A BY-LAW to authorise the issue of Debentures for the sum of Fourteen Hundred and Five Dollars, for the erection and furnishing of a School House, in the Village of Ashburnham, and for other purposes.

WHEREAS, the Board of School Trustees of the Village of Ashburnham, have applied to the Corporation of the said Village, under the provisions of the Statute in that behalf, for authority to borrow the sum of money necessary for the erection of a School House, in the said Village, and for the purchase of Furniture therefor, and have furnished the said Corporation with an Estimate of the cost thereof, at the sum of Fourteen Hundred and Five Dollars, and have required the said Corporation to pass a By-Law authorising the issue of five Debentures for the following sums, and payable at the undermentioned dates:

One for $313.00,	payable	1st April, 1864.
One for 295.00,	"	1st April, 1865.
One for 280.00,	"	1st April, 1866.
One for 265.00,	"	1st April, 1867.
One for 253.00,	"	1st April, 1868.

With interest at the rate of six per cent., and providing and settling therein for levying an equal rate per annum, during each of such years, in addition to all other rates to be levied in each year, for the payment of the debt and interest; and that such Debentures shall be made payable to the said Board of School Trustees, or the bearer thereof, and be delivered to them for the purpose of and with authority to borrow thereon the necessary amount as aforesaid;

And Whereas, the total amount of the whole ratable property of the said Municipality, according to the last revised Assessment Roll, is One Hundred and Fifty-two Thousand and Ninety-five Dollars;

And Whereas, the total amount required to be raised annually by special rate, for paying the said debt and interest is the sum of Three Hundred and Twenty Dollars, in each of the years 1863, 1864, 1865, 1866 and 1867;

And Whereas, the annual special rate in the dollar for paying the interest and creating an equal yearly sinking fund for paying the principal of the said debt, according to law, is the sum of Four Cents and Three Mills in each of the said years 1863, 1864, 1865, 1866 and 1867;

And Whereas it is necessary and expedient to comply with the said application;

The Corporation of the Village of Ashburnham hereby enacts as follows:

I. That, for the purpose aforesaid, Five Debentures of the Corporation aforesaid, for the sums hereunder mentioned, and payable at the undermentioned dates, to the said Board of School Trustees, or bearer, with interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum:

One for $312,	payable 1st April,	1864.
One for 295,	" 1st April,	1865.
One for 280,	" 1st April,	1866.
One for 265,	" 1st April,	1867.
One for 253,	" 1st April,	1868.

be issued by this Corporation, all such Debentures to be made payable at the Office of the Treasurer in Ashburnham.

II. That the said Debentures, when issued, shall be sealed with the Seal of the said Corporation, and be signed by the head thereof.

III. That the said Debentures shall be delivered to the said Board of School Trustees, and disposed of by them for the purposes aforesaid, and for no other use or purpose whatever.

IV. That for paying the said debt and interest a special rate per annum of Four Cents and Three Mills in the Dollar, be raised, levied and collected, on the assessed annual value of the whole ratable property for the years 1863, 1864, 1865, 1866 and 1867, in addition to all other rates, and paid over to the said Treasurer

V. That this By-Law shall take effect upon and from the date of the final passing thereof.

VI. That a vote of the Municipal Electors be taken on the passing of the foregoing By law on Saturday, the 31st day of October instant, at the hour of Ten o'clock in the forenoon.

THE MAPLE.

BY THE REV. E. P. DARNELL, M. A.

All hail to the broad-leaved Maple!
With its fair and changeful dress—
A type of our youthful country
In its pride and loveliness;
Whether in Spring or Summer,
Or in the dreary Fall,
'Mid Nature's finest children,
She's fairest of them all!

Down sunny slopes and valleys
Her graceful form is seen,
Her wide, unbrageous branches
The sun-burned reaper screen;
'Mid the dark-browed firs and cedars
Her livelier colors shine,
Like the dawn of a brighter future
On the settler's hut of pine.

She crowns the pleasant hill top,
Whispers on breezy downs,
And casts refreshing shadows
O'er the street of our busy towns;
She gladdens the aching eye-ball,
Shelters the weary head,
And scatters her crimson glories
On the graves of the silent dead.

When Winter's frosts are yielding
To the sun's returning sway,
And merry groups are speeding
To sugar-woods away,
The sweet and welling juices,
Which from their welcome spoil,
Tell of the teeming plenty
Which here waits honest toil.

When sweet-voiced Spring, soft-breathing,
Breaks Nature's icy sleep,
And the forest boughs are swaying
Like the green waves of the deep;
In her fair and budding beauty
A fitting emblem she
Of this our land of promise,
Of hope, of liberty.

And when her leaves, all crimson,
Droop silently and fall,
Like drops of life-blood welling
From a warrior brave and tall,
They tell how fast and freely
Would her children's blood be shed
Ere the soil of our faith and freedom
Should echo a foeman's tread.

Then hail to the broad-leaved Maple!
With her fair and changeful dress—
A type of our youthful country
In its pride and loveliness;
Whether in Spring or Summer,
Or in the dreary Fall,
'Mid Nature's forest children
She's fairest of them all.

Varieties.

Mrs. Dawdiely says that one of her boys knows nothing, and the other does. The question is, which knows the most?

Dobbs thinks that instead of giving credit to whom credit is due, the cash had better be paid. Dobbs should not be impertinent.

Pat, if Mr. Jones comes before my return, tell him that I will meet him at two o'clock. Aye, aye, sir, but what shall I tell him if he don't come.

A silent, consistent life will speak, when the slanderer's tongue is silent in death, and the "busy-body" stands in awe before Him who said "judge not, that ye be not judged."

It is said that a girl in England was struck dumb by the firing of a cannon. Since then a number of married men have invited the artillery to come and practice on their premises.

"Why didn't you pocket some of those pears?" said one boy to another; "nobody was there to see you." "Yes, there was; I was there to see myself, and I never want to see myself do a mean thing."

A Chinaman in San Francisco inquired for a "consistency," in a jewelry store. Not being comprehended, he said it was some kind of a jewel. He was informed by the shop keeper that it was not to be found in the city.

STARS.—In the milky way, that grandest feature of the firmament, there are, according to the best observations, not less than 18,000,000 of stars, which advanced scients holds to be suns of remoter systems. It requires a period ranging from ten to a thousand years for their light to reach our earth.

THE WORKMAN AHEAD.

A good story is told of a certain prominent railroad gentleman of this city, who is equally renowned for his ability to make and take a joke. A railroad employee, whose home is in Avon, came on Saturday night to ask for a pass down to visit his family.

"You are in the employ of the railroad?" inquired the gentleman alluded to.

"Yes."

"You receive your pay regularly?"

"Yes."

"Well. Now suppose you were working for a farmer instead of a railroad, would you expect your employer to hitch up his team every Saturday night to carry you home?"

This seemed a poser, but it wasn't.

"No," said the man promptly "I wouldn't expect that; but if the farmer had his team hitched up, and was going my way, I should call him a darned mean man if he wouldn't let me ride."

Mr. Employee, came out three minutes afterwards with a pass, good for twelve months.—Buffalo Courier.

THE BETTER IN MANNERS.

The most characteristic instance of carrying politeness to an extreme, came off not long since at a Hiberman ball. As related to us by one of the sons of Erin, who keenly appreciates a good thing, it seems that one gay Lothario, in crossing the room to request Bridget's hand in the next reel, stumbled over Mr. Terrence O'Grady's outstretched foot. who promptly arose and in the politest manner said:—

"I beg your pardon, sir."

"No offence—no offence, sir, at all," responded the other, "it was my fault."

"I beg yer pardon, sir, it was intirely my fault," was the response, accompanied by a graceful bend of the body and wave of the hand.

"No sir," answered Mister O'Toole, "yer entirely in the wrong, sir, I tell ye it was altogether my fault."

"I tell ye it was not!" responded O'Grady; "do you mane to say I'd be telling a lie, sir!"

"Bad luck to ye, sir, d'ye mane I'd be after telling ye a lie, sir, when I tell ye it wasn't your fault!" responded O'Tool, quite wrothy.

"Bad luck to yer bad breeding, yer ignorant pelt roon! d'ye think y'ed be getting the better uv me in manners?" shouted Mr. O'Grady, as with a tip and blow he laid the unfortunate O'Toole as flat as a pancake!

The latter rallied, and a rough and tumble fight ensued, which ended in the expulsion of both gentlemen from the ball room.

MANHOOD

AND THE

VIGOR OF YOUTH RESTORED

IN FOUR WEEKS,

By Dr. Sicotte's Essence of Life.

DR. SICOTTE, (OF PARIS) after years of earnest solicitation, has at length acceded to the urgent request of the American public, and appointed an agent in Toronto for the sale of his valued and highly prized Essence of Life. This wonderful agent will restore Manhood to the most shattered constitutions, whether arising from excesses, the effects of climate, or natural causes. The time required to cure the most inveterate case is four weeks; and if used according to printed instructions, which are very simple, failure is impossible. This life-restoring remedy should be taken by all about to marry, as its effects are permanent. It is acknowledged by the medical press to be the greatest discovery ever made. Its developing powers are miraculous. Success in every case is as certain as that science overthrows ignorance.

Dr. Sicotte's Essence of Life is sold in cases, with full instructions for use, at $3, or four quantities in one for $9, and will be sent to any part, carefully packed, on receipt of remittance to his accred

Poetry.

THE FALL.

BY ISIDORE G. ASCHER, B.C.L.

I hear the sobbing rain,
As if the Heavens wept at Autumn's breath
I see the leaves of Summer fall again,
Their beauty changed in death.

The idle wind is still,
A spectral vapour haunts the barren earth;
Upon our teeming joys there comes a chill—
The chill of Winter's dearth.

What if the tinted woods
With outward loveliness are gay and fair,
As if around them blushing summer broods,
Yearning to linger there!

What if their beauteousness
At death's cold touch are strangely glorified?
Their leaves will crumble soon to nothingness
Or else be swept aside.

Their change is type of all,
Their hectic loveliness forebodes decay,
Steeped with a dying glow before they fall
To mingle with the clay.

All that we love and prize, [way;
Changeth like leaves upon the toilsome
Man's horded wealth, but dust before his eyes
Passing, life like, away.

O leaves and blossoms, fall!
An after life shall rise from out the gloom:
The Autumn mists are but the outward pall
That hides perennial gloom.

O children of decay!
Swept by the blast and trodden by the rain,
Thy scattered dust shall eloquently say,
That naught will fall in vain.

Miscellaneous News.

LOUIS NAPOLEON.

From Kinglake's Crimean War.

(CONCLUDED.)

He loved to contrive and brood over plots, and he had a great skill in managing the preparatory arrangements for bringing his schemes to ripeness: but his labors in this direction had a tendency to bring him into scenes for which by nature he was ill-fated, because, like most of the common herd of men, he was unable to command the presence of mind and the flush of animal spirits which are needed for the critical moments of a daring adventure. In short, he was a thoughtful, literary man, deliberately taking himself to venture into a desperate path, and going great lengths in that direction, but liable to find himself balked in the moment of trial by the sudden and chilling return of his good sense.

He was not by nature blood-thirsty nor cruel, and besides that in small matters he had kind and generous instincts, he was really so willing to act fairly until the motive for foul play was strong, that for months and months together he was able to live among English sporting men without incurring disgrace; and if he was not so constituted nor so disciplined as to be able to refrain from any object of eager desire merely upon the theory that what he sought to do was wicked, there is ground for inferring that his preception of the difference between right and wrong had been dimmed (as it naturally would be) by the habit of seeking the ideal of manly worth in a personage like the first Bonaparte. It would seem that (as a study, or out of curiosity, if not with a notion of being guided by it) he must have accustomed himself to hear sometimes what conscience had to say; for it is certain that, with a pen in his hand and with sufficient time for preparation, he could imitate very nearly the language of a man of honor.

What he always longed for was to be able to seize and draw upon himself the wondering attention of mankind and the accident of his birth having marked out for him the throne of the First Napoleon as an object upon which he might fasten a hope, his craving for conspicuousness, through it had risen its true root in vanity, soon came to resemble ambition; but the mental isolation in which he was kept by the nature of his aim and his studies, the seeming poverty of his intellect, his blank wooden looks, and above all the supposed remoteness of his chances of success, these sources of discouragement, contrasting with the grandeur of the object at which he aimed, caused his pretension to be looked upon as something merely comic and odd. Linked with this his passionate desire to attain to a height from which he might see the world gazing up at him, there was a strong and almost eccentric fondness for the artifices by which the framer of a melodrama, the stage-manager, and the stage here combined produce their effects; and so, by the blendid force of a fancy, he was impelled to be contriving scenic effects and surprises in which he himself was always to be the hero. This bent was so strong and dominent as to be not a mere taste for theatric arrangements, but rather what men call prosperity. Standing alone it would have done no more, perhaps, than govern the character of his amusements; but since his birth had made him a pretender to the throne of France, his desire to imitate and reproduce the Empire supplied a point of contrast between his theatric mania and what one may call his rational ambition; and the result was that so long as he was in exile, he was always filled with a desire to mimic Napoleon's return from Elba, and to do this in his own person and upon the stage of the actual world.

In some of its features his attempts at Strasburg in 1836 was a graver business than is commonly supposed. At that time he was twenty eight years old. He had gained over Vaudrey, the officer commanding a regiment of artillery which formed part of the garrison. Early in the morning of Sunday, the 30th of October, the movement began. By declaring that a revolution had broken out in Paris, and that the king had been deposed, Vaudrey persuaded his gunners to recognize the Prince as Napolon II. Vaudrey then caused detachments to march to the houses of the Prefect and of General Voirol, the General commanding the garrison, and made them both prisoners, placing centries at their doors. All this he achieved without alarming any of the other regiments.

Supposing that there really existed among the troops a deep attachment to the name and family of Bonaparte, little more seemed needed for winning over the whole garrison than that the heir of the great Empire should have the personal qualities requisite for the success of the enterprise. Prince Louis was brought into the presence of the captive General, and tried to gain him over, but was repulsed. Afterward the Prince, surrounded with men personating an imperial staff, was conducted to the barrick of the 46th regiment, and the men, taken entirely by surprise, were told that the person now introduced to them was their Emperor. What they saw was a young man with the bearing and countenance of a weaver; a weaver oppressed by long hours of momentous indoor work which makes the body stoop and keeps the eyes downcast; but all the while—and yet it was broad daylight—this young man, from hat to boot, was standing dressed up in the historic costume of the man of Austerlitz and Marengo. It seems that this painful exhibition began to undo the success which Vaudrey had achieved; but strange things had happened in Paris before, and the soldiery could not, with certainty, know that the young man might not be what they were told he was—Napoleon II., the new-made Emporer of the French. Their perplexity gave the Prince an opportunity of trying whether the sentiment of the Bonapartes were really existing or not, and, if it were, whether he was the man to kindle it.

But by-and-by Talandier, the Colonel of the regiment, having at length been apprised of what was going on, came into the yard. He instantly ordered the place to be closed, and then—fierce, angry, and scornful—went straight up to the spot where the proposed Emperor and his "Imperal Staff" were standing. Of course this apparation—the apparation of the indignant Colonel whose barrack had been invaded—was exactly what was to be expected, exactly what was to be combated; but yet, as though it were something monstrous and undreamed of, it came upon the Prince with a crushing power. To him, a literary man, standing in a barrack-yard, in the dress of a great conqueror, an angry Colenel, with authentic warrant to command, was something real, and therefore, it seems, dreadful. In a moment Prince Louis succumbed to him. Some thought, after what had been done that morning, the Prince owed it to the unfortunate Vaudrey (whom he had seduced into the plot) to take care not to let the enterprise collapse without testing his fortune to the utmost by a strenuous, not to say desperate resistance; but this view did not prevail. One of the ornaments which the Prince wore was a sword; yet without striking a blow he suffered himself to be publicly stripped of his grand cordon of the Legion of Honor and all his other decorations. According to one account the angry Colonel inflicted this dishonor with his own hands, and not only pulled the grand cordon from the Prince's bosom but tore off his epaulets, and trampled both epualets and grand cordon under foot. When he had been thus stripped the Prince was locked up. The decorated followers, who had been impersonating the Imperial Staff, underwent the same fate as their chief. Before judging the Prince for his conduct during these moments it would be fair to assume that, the Colonel having once been suffered to enter the yard, and to exert the ascendancy of his superior firmness, the danger of attempting resistance to him would have been great—would have been greater than any which the common herd of men are inclined to encounter. Besides, the mere fact that the Prince had wilfully brought himself into such a predicament, shows that, although it might fail him in very trying moments, he had extraordinary daring of a particular kind. It would be unjust to say, flatly, that a man so willing as he was to make approaches to dangers was timid. It would be fairer to say that his characteristic was a faltering boldness. He could not alter his nature, and his nature was to be resturesome before-hand, but to be so violently awkward and shocked by the actual contact of danger as to be left without the spirit, and seemingly without the wish or the motives, for going on any further with the part of a desperado. The truth is, that the source of his boldness were his vanity and his theatric bent; and these passions, though they had power to bring him to the verge of danger, were not robust enough to hold good against man's natural shrinking from the risk of being killed—being killed within the next minute. Conscious that in point of hat, and coat, and boots, he was the same as the Emperor Napoleon, he imagined that the great revoir of 1815, between the men and the man of a hundred fights, could be acted over again between modern French troops and himself; but it is plain that this belief had resulted from the audue mastery which he had allowed, for a time, to his ruling propensity, and not for any actual overthrow of the person; for when checked, he did not, like a madman or a dare-devil, try to carry his venture through; nor did he even, indeed, hold on long enough to try, and try fairly, whether the Bonaparte sentiment to which he wished to appeal were really existent or not: on the contrary, the moment he encountered the shock of the real world, he stopped dead; and becoming suddenly quiet, harmless, and obedient surrendered himself (as he always has done) to the first firm man who touched him. The change was like that seeming miracle which is wrought when a hysteric girl, who seems to be carried headlong by strange hallucinations, and to be clothed with the terrible power of madness, is suddenly cured and silenced by a rebuke and a sharp angry threat. Accepting a small sum of money from the sovereign whom he had been trying to dethrone, Prince Louis was shipped of to America by the good-natured King of the French.

But if he was wanting in the quality which enables a man to go well through with a venture, his ruling propensity had strength enough to make him try the same thing over and over again. His want of the personal qualifications for enterprises of this sort being now known in the French Army, and ridicule having fastened upon his name, he could not afterward seduce into his schemes any officer of higher rank than a lieutenant. Yet he did not desist. Before long he was planning another "return from Elba," but this time with new dresses and decorations. So long as he was preparing counterfeit flags and counterfeit generals, and counterfeit soldiers, and teaching a forlorn, London bird to play the part of an omen, and guede the destiny of France, he was perfectly at home in that kind of statesmanship; and the framing of the plebiscites and proclamations which formed a large part of his cargo was a business of which he was master; but if his arrangments should take effect, then what he had to look for was, that, at an early hour on a summer morning, he would find himself in a barrack-yard at Boulogne surrounded by a band of armed followers, and supported by one of the officers of the garrison whom he had previously gained over; but also having to do with a number of soldiery of whom some would be for him, and some inclining against him, and others confused and perplexed. Now, this was exactly what happened to him: his arrangements had been so skilful, and fortune had so far lured him on, that whether he meant to go, there he was at last, standing in the very circumstances which he had brought about with long design aforethought. But then his nature failed him. Becoming agitated, and losing his presence of mind, he could not govern the result of the struggle by the resources of his intellect; and being also without the fire and the joyfulness, which came to warlike men in moments of crisis and of danger, he was ill qualified to kindle the hearts of the bewildered soldiery. So, when at last a firm, angry officer made his way into the barrick-yard, he conquered the Prince almost instantly by the strength of a more resolute nature, and turned him out into the street, with all his fifty armed followers, with his flag and his eagle, and his counterfeit head-quarters Staff, as though he were dealing with a mere troop of strolling players. Yet only a few weeks afterward this same Prince Louis Napoleon was able to show by his demeanor before the Chamber of Peers that, where the occasion gave him leisure for thought, and for the exercise of mental control, he knew how to comport himself with dignity, and with a generous care for the safety and welfare of his followers.

It was natural that a man thus constituted should be much inclined to linger in the early stages of a plot. But since it chanced that by his birth and by his ambition Prince Louis Napoleon was put before the world as a pretender to the throne of France, he had always had around him a few keen adventurers who were willing to partake his fortunes; and if there were times when his personal wishes would have inclined him to choose repose or indefinite delay, he was too considerate in his fellings toward his little knot of followers to be capable of forgetting their needs.

In 1851 motives of this kind, joined with feelings of disappointment and of personal humiliation, were driving the President forward. He had always wished to bring about a change in the constitution, but, originally, he hoped to be able to do this with the aid and approval of some at least of the statesmen and eminent generals of the country; and the fact of his desiring such concurrence in his plans seems to show that he did not at first intend to trample upon France by subjecting her to a sheer Asiatic despotism, but rather to found such a monarchy as might have the support of men of station and character. But besides that few people believed him to be so able a man as he really was, there attached to him at this period a good deal of ridicule. So although there were members in France who would have been heartily glad to see the republic crushed by some able dictator, there were hardly any public men who believed that in the President of the Republic they would find the man they wanted. Therefore his overtures to the gentlemen of France were always rejected. Every statesman to whom he applied refused to entertain his proposals. Every general whom he urged always said that for whatever he did he must have "an order from the Minister of War."

The President being thus rebuffed, his plan of changing the form of government, with the assent of the leading statesmen and generals of the country, degenerated into schemes of a very different kind; and at length he fell into the hands of persons of the quality of Persigny, Morny, and Fleury. With these men he plotted, and strangely enough it happened that the character and the pressing wants of his associates gave strength and purpose to designs which without this stimulous might have long remained mere dreams. The President was easy and generous in the use of money, and he gave his followers all he could; but the checks created by the constitution of the Republic were so effective that beyond the narrow limit allowed by law he was without any command of the State resources. In their invaterate love of strong government, the Republicans had placed within reach of the Chief of the State ample means for overthrowing their whole structure, and yet they allowed him to remain subject to the same kind of anxiety and to be driven to the same kind of expedients as an embarrassed tradesman. This was the President's actual plight, and if he looked to the future as designed for him by the constitution he could see nothing but the prospect of having to step down on a day already fixed, and descend from a conspicuous station into poverty and darkness. He would have been content perhaps to get what he needed by fair means. In the beginning of the year he had tried hard to induce the Chambers to increase the funds placed at his disposal. He failed. From that moment it was to be expected that, even if he himself should still wish to keep his hands from the purse of France, his associates, becoming more impatient, and more and more practical in their views, would soon press their chief into action.

Roman Catholic Intolerance.

The following is an extract taken from a letter, published by Cavaliere Settembrini, in the Emancipatore Cattolico, Italy:—

"You have not chosen to renounce the King of Italy nor his Government. You say and you write that he who swears fidelity to his King is the enemy of God and of the Church. Forgetting the precept of Jesus Christ, who tells us to pray for friends and enemies, you prohibit us to pray for our King. You in Rome, under your own eyes, see brigands enrolled and dispatched to rob, murder, ravish, destroy your sheep, and you have not one word of regret for those who send them, to prevent the vain shedding of so much Christian blood. You do not blush to find yourself in the midst of so many malefactors who come from every country in Europe and assemble in Rome, and from Rome throw themselves upon us, to support a cause already condemned by God and by the world, and to instruct us in Catholic mortality by means of murders, rapes, and rapine. You love us much and you send us brigands. What would you do to us if you wished us ill? Have you compassion on our souls, and do you wish to convert us by these apostles? It is not true, your Eminence, it is not true that the faith has decreased among us. Those who believe in it formerly still believe in it; those who did not believe it, and were hypocrites from fear, have now taken off the mask. Nor will you believe that all that foul hypocrisy which in the times of the superstitious (pinzuchero) Bourbon was practised by the Minister down to the hangman was faith. Now we believe as reasonable Christians, and our faith is purer. Have we this great miracle of Italy before our eyes, and could we do otherwise than believe in God, who has wrought it and upholds it? In your letter you instruct us that God has not told us everything in the Bible and in the Gospel, but has revealed many things by His voice to the priests of the Catholic Church. Truly it appears to us rather strange that the most wise God should have forgotten to say everything, and should have told bit by bit whenever he chanced to remember. But so you instruct us, and we will believe it. How is it that the Roman Church says and does just the contrary of what is written in the Bible and the Gospel? Jesus Christ says, 'My kingdom is not of this world;' and the Pope is King in this world, aggregates to himself power over all the Kings of the world, curses and excommunicates him who does not acknowledge the Pope King. Jesus Christ said to Peter, 'Sell all that you have and give to the poor, and come and follow me.' And the successor of Peter, rich and a king, asks for an obolus from the poor. The Jesuits despoil widows and orphans, hunting after their inheritance; the priests and friars possess of three-fifths of the land; the bishops with baroons, have remained rich, and your eminence has 18,000 ducats a year. Jesus Christ says, "If any offend you, forgive him not seven times, but seven times seven.' And the Church of Rome pardons never; and the priest with the same hand which touches the consecrated host writes the sentence of death, burns the heretic, pays the brigand. Jesus Christ says, 'Call no man father—God; call no one master, for one is your master—Christ.' And your eminence tells us, as do the other Bishops, that you are master, pastor, judge, and father of your flock. And if you are what you say what is Jesus Christ over us? Jesus Christ blessed little little children; certain priests and friars are accustomed to bless them after the manner of Padre Theoger, of the Ignorantelli, and of the Canon Zampella (alluding to foul crimes lately discovered and brought before the courts). In brief, wherever we open the Gospel by accident we see that the doctrine and the holy life of Jesus Christ are just the opposite of the doctrine of the Roman Catholic Church and of the works of the priests. What are we to believe, then? That God has written one thing and said another? Never! The doctrine of the Roman Church, therefore, is anti-Christian doctrine, and the works of the priests are not the works of the ministers of God. He is not a Christian who exclaims 'Christ, Christ!' but he who fulfils the laws of love and lives after the example which our Divine Redeemer has left us. We believe in Jesus Christ, and we do not believe in you and others who call yourselves His ministers. We will read His holy Gospel and not listen to your lying words. We form a part of the Church which is the communion of all Christians, not a sect of priests and friars, who only pant after riches and lasciviousness, and who of the house of God have made a den thieves. We, Cardinal of Rome, are men made by God after his image and likeness, not sheep to be shorn and slaughtered as it pleaseth you. Remain still in Rome, where now are the enemys of Italy and humanity, and where Christ is sold, Christ is put to shame, Christ is blasphemed. Excommunicate us, too; interdict our churches, threaten us with the fires of Inquisition and of hell. We will not imitate your fury, but we will repeat the words of Jesus on the Cross—we will pray to God even for those who curse us. Interdict even all our churches; we have no need of you to become Christians; we have no need of Popes, and Bishops, and priests, and friars to pray to God, who is everywhere, and listens to all. In the high road we will plant the Cross, and around it we will every one of us say, 'O Jesus, save Italy, and make us all united and all good.'

"L. SETTEMBRINI."

APPLES keep best when left upon the trees until quite late in the season. A white frost, and even a slight freezing will not injure them. Pick carefully, and leave them in the orchard or out-house to sweat for a few days, and only take to a cool dry celler when their is danger of their being injured by hard frost.

A GOOD many men are in the best health when they are out of spirits!

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 5TH, 1863.

We are much obliged for the interest many of our friends have evinced in the EXAMINER, during the last two months, and for their approval of the manner in which it has been conducted. The way to have a good Journal, is to evince an interest in it and to patronise it. Our circulation, although, at present, comparatively large, might be doubled in a short time, if our friends would only make an effort. The profit made upon each paper is very small. It is not therefore so much in a pecuniary point of view we wish to see the circulation of the EXAMINER increased, as it is to have its sphere of usefulness enlarged, and the principles it advocates more widely made known and adopted. In our next, we intend to offer particular inducements to those sending us subscribers.

It is at times both politic and important to sit down and ask ourselves what our duties to our country are, what realization we have of them and how we discharge them? We are afraid that this is not sufficiently done. We very much fear that many persons of professed intelligence and high moral character, entertain but very imperfect views of what duties they owe their country, and of the manner in which these should be discharged. Such seem to consider these things of too small moment to attract any of the attention which they permit matters of a more purely selfish nature to absorb and engross. Nevertheless, these duties involve interests of vast importance and pregnant with momentous results, and can no more be legitimately ignored or shirked than can those universal moral obligations which the Supreme Intelligence has for his guidance and good imposed upon man. They are, therefore, worthy of our most serious consideration; and it should ever be our aim and effort to discharge them aright. What others do should not influence us—if what they do is not compatible with the principles here involved. If people would only think and act thus, how much better state of things would soon prevail than at present; in what better position would be our beloved country in all its relations. Why? Because the people, profoundly impressed with the solemn and responsible nature of the obligations which they, as citizens, sustained, would act accordingly—would be more influenced by principle than by party—and would always strive to elect as legislators the best men, irrespective of personal or other considerations. The consequence would rapidly begin to manifest itself in the higher tone of morality that would characterize our members of Legislature, and in the practical beneficial influence that these, by their example, would exert throughout the different official departments of government, as well as upon the various classes of community generally. This is all very well—exclaims some one—but such a state of things can never be. Why? Because—the answer is—the people will have their own way—will vote for their party candidate, be he good or bad—it has always been so and will always be so. This is the gist of the trouble; people are unfortunately, in many instances, more apt to draw bad precedents from the past, than to make good precedents for the future.

This is an age of progress and development, why should there not be improvement in this respect. There are not a few in every community who apprehend and are fully convinced that the views here enunciated and imperfectly touched upon, are the correct ones, and if adopted and acted out would be productive of much good. If these would only then take the initiative—ignoring rotten precedents of the past, and disregarding vulgar prejudices which still exist, and show by their acts that hereafter their ideas of politics were to be gauged by a higher standard of morality than in days gone by—that they intended to look upon the principles of morality and politics as in a certain degree identical, they would be taking first steps in the inauguration of a new and important era in the history of their country, for they would soon receive the countenance and support of thousands who think and feel as they now do, but who, with that feeling of unwillingness to begin anything which too often exists, only wait the first echo of the bugle note to rally around them. It is time that something of the kind was done, for it must be confessed that our best men, morally and intellectually considered, do not, as a general thing, fill the highest and most responsible positions in the land—where intellectual strength and high moral character are most needed. When men are judged by their worth and not by their party claims this will not be. It is a pity this is not the case now. It would tell our country much if it were. It is not, however, and with those professedly christian, we confess, we think, lies much of the blame why it has not; for so long as christian profession and political conduct are so inconsistent and so widely at variance, as they in many instances are, we cannot reasonably look for the initiative to be taken by others.

IS IT A SUPERSTITION?—A bridge broke down at Terre Haute, a few days since, drowning a number of persons. The Terre Haute EXPRESS says—One incident connected with the recovery of the bodies is worthy of general publicity. All had been found with the exception of that of Miss THRALLS, and the approaching night was about to compel the search to be abandoned, when some one suggested that by placing quicksilver in a loaf of bread and putting it in the water, it would stop directly over the body. Accordingly, a loaf was procured, and two ounces of quicksilver placed in it—then taken about fifty feet above the bridge, and thrown into the water. It floated down in the current, which is quite strong at that place, when suddenly it stopped, and circling around, was apparently about to sink, when a gentleman in a boat caught it, and grappling hooks being put down, the body was found directly beneath, in from eight to ten feet of water. We had read of this mode some years since, but, supposing it one of the many superstitions, had almost forgotten it. What the philosophy is we cannot tell. Will some one afford some light upon it?

REFORMERS OF THE COUNTY!

The long nights of winter are coming on, and these ought to be profitably employed. Reformers should take advantage of them to disseminate those noble principles which they profess to hold, and to strengthen that cause which they have battled for so long, and upon the success of which, they believe, depend to no small measure the future prosperity and honor of this Province. Their profession and profession should be in keeping. They should not profess cream and work skim-milk. Both should be cream. They always ought to be alive and ready for emergencies. This can only be done by systematic and effective organization. Organization to a party is what a General is to the army, or the mind to the body. Take away the General and the army is unwieldy, powerless; take away the intellect, and the body is but a poor piece of sensate clay—incapable of action. So it is with a party; deprive it of organization, and it will soon become disunited, and afford but a pitiable resistance to its more wary opponents. The lurch in which the last election left the county is proof positive of the truth of what we say. An emergency occurred. Reformers were taken unawares; they were totally unprovided for it, and the consequence was, they had to make the best shift they could. And a very poor shift, we think they will now confess, they made. This was owing to want of proper organization. Had proper organization existed, no unexpected action of a dozen men, much less of one, would have been able to leave them in the state of utter unpreparedness and helplessness they were. They were, so to speak, politically paralyzed. This is an important consideration, and worthy of serious reflection. There is no use of mincing matters; they have no one to blame but themselves for their present humiliating position. It may do good; a little wearing of sackcloth and ashes, at times, is not without its beneficial effects. A repetition of the penance is not unfrequently particularly and effectually guarded against. Hence, the clouded past, though it cannot be recalled, may be pregnant with important and salutary instruction. The past, to the Reformers of Peterborough, is pregnant with such instruction. Will they profit by it? We hope, we would fain believe they will. If so, it is time, even now, that steps were being taken with such an end in view. No one knows the day another emergency may arise. If to-day, if next month, would they, if something be not done, be any better prepared than for the last. The question implies doubt; is the implication justifiable? Let Reformers ponder the matter and talk it over with one another—weigh it in all its bearings and decide for themselves the correctness or incorrectness of our conclusions. We do not fear the result. Let them remember that more than once has this splendid county, which is, admittedly, Reform in its tendencies, been snatched from hands of Reformers through their own supineness, lack of interest, and want of organization—let them remember, that for the same reasons, they are to-day represented by one whom, up to the time of his election, they professed to distrust and have no confidence in, and whom the majority of them would have accepted on no conditions, if the force of circumstance had not been so strong that they were unable to resist it—let them remember these facts, and we are not afraid but they will, if true to themselves and their principles, heartily endorse our views, and fully agree with us when we say, that it is an imperative duty resting upon them at once to inaugurate such measures as will make them able on the first opportunity to redeem the county, and keep it redeemed.

Opening of a New Chapel at Lakefield.

A new brick Chapel was opened for divine worship by the Baptist denomination in this enterprising and rapidly increasing village, on Sunday, 25th October, when three appropriate and impressive sermons were preached: one in the morning by the Rev. J. GILMOUR, from Rom. I. 16; one in the afternoon by the Rev. J. M. ROGER, from Heb. X. 24; and one in the evening by the Rev. S. TARSCOTT, from Isa. LX. 7. The congregation which assembled in the afternoon, was too large to be accommodated in the new building, therefore the adjoining Wesleyan Chapel was occupied, and the Rev. S. TARSCOTT preached to an attentive audience.

On the afternoon of the following day 300 persons partook of a social banquet, which was sumptuously and gratuitously provided by the Ladies of the neighborhood; after which a public meeting was held in the commodious Presbyterian Chapel, kindly lent by the deacons for the occasion. After singing, prayer and a few opening remarks by the Rev. E. R. ROBERTS, who, (in the absence of Colonel STRICKLAND) presided, interesting and practical addresses were delivered by Colonel HAULTAIN, Mr. WILLIAM NICHOLS, and the Rev's J. GILMOUR, G. T. COLWELL, S. TARSCOTT and E. L. KOYLE. An excellent Choir, under the able management of Mr. G. CROOK, added much to the pleasure of the evening.

The proceeds of the opening services amounted to over $100.

This neat edifice, which has met with universal approbation, was designed and erected by Mr. BABB, of Peterborough, who has given entire satisfaction to the Committee, by his obliging manner and superior workmanship. It is another example of what may be done by the combined energy and pious zeal of a few individuals for the religious instruction and moral improvement of the people residing in their neighborhood. The idea of erecting it was first entertained last January, and since that period the work has been done without extravagance on the one hand, or parsimony on the other. There remains only a small debt, which, it is hoped, the benevolent Christian public will speedily enable the Committee to discharge. The prospects of usefulness are of the most cheering character.

DEFENCES.

We do not see so much now in the English papers about Canadian defences, as we did some time ago. We apprehend that they are by this time beginning to realise that we are not to be bullied into measures that we do not think expedient or worthy of adoption. No doubt the late Militia Bills which are now law—though not perfect in all respects, have had not a little to do in tranquilising the English mind. It is seen that Canadians understand the matter as well, if not better than their would be advisers, seated in their comfortable studies thousands of miles away. Indeed, the present Ministry, seems to be in a remarkable degree popular with the English people. The favorable contract it affords with its CARTIER-MACDONALD predecessors, has no doubt done much in producing this result.

EUROPEAN NEWS.

The Alabama, Georgia, and Tuscarora, rebel privateers, continued cruising around the Cape of Good Hope. The Vanderbilt had arrived at the Cape in pursuit of the first named vessel. It was said that Captain SEMMES would not seek an engagement, being of the opinion that the Vanderbilt was much faster than the Alabama.

The Confederate loan was quoted in England at 65@67. The Paris PAYS denies that France participated in the negotiations upon the Polish question, and states that Austria and England are endeavoring to come to an understanding on the subject of an identical note. The British admiralty had decided to construct a new squadron of iron gunboats. HENRY WARD BEECHER addressed immense meetings at London and Manchester and was enthusiastically received, notwithstanding the very unbecoming conduct on the part of some who profess to be friendly to the South.

A Paris letter to the London DAILY NEWS anticipates that the semi-official press of France will immediately receive orders to say that after all the Mexican people simply desire annexation to France.

The London Times publishes a letter from its well-known correspondent "HISTORICUS" commenting upon and showing the importance of the seizure of the steam rams on the Mersey, expressing the belief that the public will stand by the Government in their determination to defeat fraudulent contrivers.

MR. LAIRD had been speaking at Birkenhead, defending his course in the matter of the Alabama &c.,

The Emperor Napoleon had received and congratulated the Mexican deputation on their success.

St. Petersburg accounts say it is the belief that there will be a diplomatic rupture between Russia and the Western powers before Christmas. There were rumours of a threatening situation between Russia and Turkey.

The Times has an editorial holding up, in moving terms, the threatening position of affairs throughout the world, and urging that it is the plain duty of England to seize and use all the opportunities of her position, and, as arbitrator, make and keep peace while she can.

The ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE considers the southern cause more hopeful than for some time past, and thinks that if similar apathy, or non-success on the part of the Federals should mark the close of the year, there will be a great chance of the South obtaining an armistice, and that armistice will lead to an adjustment of the present deplorable difficulty.

AMERICAN NEWS.

The army of the Potomac are at present at a stand still. MEADE and LEE appear to be manœuvring for favorable positions. There was a report of an onward movement of an important character on the part of the Federals. It is thought by some that the late movements of Lee were feints to cover his weakness caused by sending reinforcements to BRAGG.

Official dispatches from Gen THOMAS announce that at midnight on the 29th General HOOKER was attacked at Brown's ferry, on the Tennessee, Chattanooga, and a severe fight ensued. The engagement lasted two hours, and was followed by skirmishing which continued till 4 o'clock in the morning. The Confederates were repulsed in every position they assailed. On the 27th a movement was executed by General Smith, chief of engineers in the Department of the Cumberland, by which two wagon-roads and the use of the river as lines for supplies were gained for our army, thus adding greatly to the advantages of General THOMAS's position. Late private advices from Chattanooga state that a temporary solution of the difficulty in regard to supplies had been found previous to the recent victories, by the building of a railroad from Bridgeport to Jasper, a little village about twelve miles to the northwest, the bed for the road having been graded some years since. There seems to be no prospect of an immediate grand movement, Gen. Bragg being in no condition after his recent reverses, to make any serious attempt to improve his position.

The Federals are actively engaged pushing the siege at Charleston. On the 29th the batteries, Gregg and Wagner, opened fire at 11 o'clock that morning with seven guns from the former and four from the latter. The fire was principally directed against forts Sumter and Johnson. Two monitors were also engaged. The firing ceased at dusk. One hundred shots were thrown from Morris Island, and one hundred and seventy from the monitors During the following two days a tremendous bombardment was kept up, but apparently with but little result as the Confederates do not seem to have noticed it.

The squadron of Hilton Head is said to have been largely augmented.

Texas papers state that Sabine Pass was rapidly being put into a condition to receive the Federal attack. The gunboat Clifton, recently captured, had been put in fighting trim and was to be used against them. An agent just from Richmond, says that the Confederate Government is seizing all the boots and shoes in that city for the use of LEE's army, which is almost barefoot

Major General BUTLER has been assigned to the command of the 18th army corps, department of Virginia and North Carolina, in place of Gen. Foster, who is ordered to report here to the adjutant General. Circumstances indicate that Gen. FOSTER will have command of the defences of Washington.

NEW ZEALAND.

Hostilities still continue in New Zealand. The natives have committed all sorts of outrages, their determination being evidently to expel the whites from their shores. Quite a number of whites have been killed. The Government are preparing for war upon a large scale. In addition to the regulars the militia to the number of 4,000, in one province, have been called out. The drill is going on everywhere. Large reinforcements were expected from England. It is hoped, therfore, that the troubles will soon be put an end to, and tranquility and prosperity restored. The English speaking population of the islands now is about 40,000.

VANCOUVERS ISLAND.

The Governor of Vancouver's Island in a late address to parliament submitted, a report which showed that the revenue of the half year ending June 1863, was $31,717 above that of the corresponding time of 1862, the receipts in the former case being $61,280, and in the latter $29,583. Half of this increase however accrued from land sales.

Meeting of Trustees.

The regular meeting of the Board of School Trustees, was held on Tuesday evening last. A large number of the members were present.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from the Principal, MR. DUNN, resigning his position—the resignation to take place on the 1st of February next.

A resolution was passed, that the Secretary should advertise for a Principal, in the local newspapers and Daily Globe, up to 20th December next.

No other business being on hand the meeting adjourned.

AMERICAN ELECTIONS.

On Tuesday last elections took place in New York, Massachusetts, and other States. They have resulted generally in immense gains to the party supporting the Administration, and for a vigorous prosecution of the war. This emphatically shows that the North are determined no means shall be left untried to put down the Rebellion. The Democrats were confident of carrying New York; but they have been wofully mistaken in their calculations.

POLAND.

Things seem to be coming to a terrible pass in Poland. The Russians are carrying out their plans of vengeance with the utmost rigor. The gibbet stands ready for victims everywhere. Every one thought in the slightest degree favorable to the National Government is arrested. The slightest pretexts are considered sufficient to inflict the most barbarous punishments. The Poles, however, are as determined as ever, and bands of them are harrassing the Russians in all accessible quarters.

St. DOMINGO.

The war is still raging in this Island. The Spaniards pillaged the town of Santiago de Cuballo, the whole town except the Wesleyan mission house having been burnt. The island is in a most deplorable condition—Spaniards and Dominicians alternately plundering and ruining its finest parts. The British, American and other Consuls had arrived at Grand Trunk.

WAR WITH INDIA.

England seems again threatened with war in India. The sons of Dost Mahammed have invaded the Punjaub with an army of some 7000 men. It is greatly feared that this force is but the vanguard of a larger army. The authorities are, however, taking such steps as will no doubt effectually check the invaders and preserve the tranquility of the British dominions in India. Further intelligence is anxiously waited for in England.

We are requested to state, that the monthly meeting of the Fire Company, was adjourned from last Tuesday evening to Tuesday evening next, when a full meeting is requested, as business of importance will be brought up.

CANADIAN SECURITIES.

The opposition papers eager to seize at anything calculated to damage the Ministry, have of late been endeavouring to show that the Canadian Securities have declined in value, and that is owing to the general distrust that the people of England have in the present Government. Truth is always however best, and mis-statements generally redound to the discredit and damage of their promulgators. The fact is, that there has been quite an advance in these securities on the whole. In the fives it is true, there has been a slight decline, owing to a panic caused by over speculation in foreign bonds; but this has been more than amply compensated for, by the advance in the sixes. The latest account show, that the closing prices of Canadian six per cents interest, payable half yearly, were 103 to 105, and five per cents. 92 to 94.

DAY OF THANKSGIVING.

A Proclamation has been issued by the Governor setting apart Wednesday, the 11th instant, as a day of general thanksgiving throughout the Province, for the manifold blessings which we owe to Almighty God, and especially for the abundant harvest and the continuance of peace with which he has blessed our said Province during the past year.

THE TRIAL OF GREENWOOD.

The trial of Greenwood for the murder of Catherine Walsh has been going on in Toronto before Mr. Justice Wilson, for the last few days. The evidence is nearly the same as that given at the inquest. Mr. Richard, Q. C., conducts the prosecution, and Mr. M. Cameron, is the prisoner's counsel.

The proprietors of some papers have got cnsciences—and some have not. He of the Toronto Freeman, seems to be of the latter class.

This paper has come out against the Government—cause why?—the Government refused to give him as much "pap" as he wanted. The proprietor but a few days ago sent the very modest bill appended to the Premier, for payment, which he very properly rejected and would not allow to be paid. Hence the Freeman's very virtuous indignation against the corruption, &c., of the Ministry. Had his bill been paid,—how blind he would have been? This is his bill:

	Times	Lines	$	Cts.
To advertising 'The paper currency of the United States and the Customs of Canada,' &c.	42	70	91	00
To advertising 'Quartine" regulations	57	270	599	40
			$690	40

We think we should be grateful that we have a government that intends watching the public chest, and not to allow it to be plundered by unscrupulous adventurers, as in the palmy days when the corruptionists reigned supreme.

CANADA LIFE ASSURANCE CO.—From the Hamilton Evening Times we learn that the annual meeting of the shareholders of the above-named Company took place in that city on Tuesday, the 27th ult. The report which was read upon the occasion is far too lengthy to give in detail; but we gather the following information from it, with reference to the business of the company during the past year, which seems to be of a satisfactory nature:—that three hundred and four new assurances, for the sum of $409, 166 have been effected. At the 30th of April, Company enjoyed an annual premium income on its policies of $101,731. The claims by death during the year amounted to $31, 300, being $20,000 less than what was calculated on. The rate of interest on investments has improved, having exceeded six per cent.; and on the 30th April a dividend of five per cent. to the shareholders was declared. These favorable facts speak highly in favor of the management of the institution.

HENRY ECCLES, Esq., the eminent Barrister, died in Toronto, on the 2nd inst. He was still in the prime of life, but had earned for himself by his talents, a provincial reputation. Born in England in 1817,—after living for some time with his father, Captain ECCLES, in Niagara—he settled in Toronto, where he soon attained a leading position at the Bar, which he kept up to the time of his death.

Mr. ECCLES leaves his widow and one son to deplore his loss.

In another column will be found a letter of Mr. O'HALLORAN, who has recently formed the staple of so much abuse to the opposition press. It we think, effectually disposes of the charges that have been made against him. The conduct of corruptionist papers against MR. O'HALLORAN, has been unfair, and ungentlemanly in the extreme.

POLAND.—The Journal de Posen speaking of the progress of the insurrection, says —"New bodies of insurgents spring up in every direction. In the palatinate of Lublin alone there are 10,000 well armed men, and many fresh corps are being organized in Plock and Kalish. The cruelties of Russia in Warsaw, far from diminishing the insurrection, are the great causes of its strength and vitality. The insurgents are more resolute than ever, and both sides are preparing for a winter campaign." The Minister MOURAVOFF has just carried out the horrible of sentence of banishing to Siberia the entire population of three small towns in Poland, and has bestowed the land upon Russians. Three Polish nobles and the wife of one have just been shot by the Russians.

We see the Montreal Witness intends returning to its old price—a half-penny. By raising the paper to a penny, it was found that the circulation decreased some 2,300 in the course of a couple of weeks—and this among the working class—to reach whom, the proprietor says, has been the chief object of the Witness from the beginning. The Witness deserves success. It is one of the ablest and most independent papers in the Province.

We see by the Montreal correspondent of the Globe, that the infamous MDLLE. BISSIONETTE, who, in that city, treated with the most outrageous cruelty such poor girls as she could entrapp into her house, is to be tried on 1st December. The woman who preferred the charge on which BISSIONETTE was arrested had been tampered with, and wished to withdraw it, but the police magistrate refused to allow her. The accused is out on bail.

ARMY FRAUDS are now common in the States. It appears that some very bad ones have recently been exposed by which the occupants of the Confederate camp have been made to suffer, and the Government heavily swindled. At the camp, the breakfast rations issued were four ounces of bread and one ounce of meat, dinner rations, four ounces of bread and half a pint of rice soup; supper rations, same as breakfast. Two rations of potatoes only were served in ten days. It is stated that the coffee, after having hot water poured over it, was taken out and dried, and barralled, and sold for $14 per barrel, when it was probably resold to the Government. The teamsters have been supplied with putrid meats and short rations, the good meat being sold by those in charge of the teams. It is reported high officers are implicated in in this fraud, and the investigation now going on will bring the offenders to justice.

GEN. ROSECRANS was received at Cincinnatti on Monday morning, and addressed the citizens, remarking that he was willing to leave the future to judge of him. He denied the reports as to his health and the use of opium, and declared that the President had written him a letter approving his actions at the battle of Chickamauy, and that Gens McCOOK and CRITTENDEN had said that the reports of charges to be preferred by them were false.

TELEGRAPHIC.—A convention of telegraph operators connected with the New York and Boston and other principle offices along the intervening rout was held on Tuesday evening. Gentlemen at different stations made speeches, offered resolutions, nominated delegates, and applauded good hits, all by telegraph, and the best order was maintained. They are to have a general convention next month, when they meet bodily.

MR. DUNN, the Principal of the Grammar and Union School, sent in his resignation at the last meeting of the Board. Business engagements, into which he has entered, have induced this step.

THE INTERCOLONIAL RAILWAY—The Lower Provinces refuse to appoint an Engineer to proceed with the preliminary survey of the Intercolonial Railway, as agreed to by Messrs. Tilley and Tupper, when in Quebec last Session.

We call the attention of the members of the Peterborough St. Andrew's Society, to the Annual Meeting for the election of Officers, and which will be held in the American Hotel, on Thursday the 12th inst. Let there be a good turn out.

There will be a Meeting of the Members of the Curling Club at McGregor's Hotel, on Monday next. A full attendance is particularly requested.

We call attention to D. LEMAY's advertisement of good things, in another column.

MR. O'HALLORAN'S LETTER.

To the Editor of the Mercury.

SIR:—My professional engagements compelled me to leave Quebec before the close of the session, and although your contemporaries, the Chronicle and Journal de Quebec, are famous in their locality, they are strangers here. I learn through a friend that, in my absence, both have been busy in the use of my name. Of course my vote and my public conduct are fair game, but surely some little semblance of truth and decency should characterise the attacks even of a partisan press. To say nothing of the cowardly act of attacking me behind my back, with the probability of my never hearing of the accusation, what shall be said when that accusation proves entirely false. I have not seen either paper, but am told that it is asserted I promised to vote for Mr. Galt's motion, and actually made up a division list, with my name among the yeas. There is not one word of truth in either assertion. I have not had a division list in my hand during the session, and the only one made up in my presence was one drawn up by Mr. Wright of East York, who will recollect the circumstance, and in this division, I think, he placed the names of Mr. Foley and myself among the YEAS. Of course the circumstance is of the smallest possible consequence, but it only serves to illustrate the malignity of a party that can resort to such petty falsehoods to annoy an opponent.

I am very truly yours,
JAS. O'HALLORAN.
Cowansville, Missisquoi, Oct. 19, 1863.

UNITED STATES NATIONAL DEBT.

The following curious facts and figures in relation to the national debt of the United States, will be found interesting at the present time. The national debt of the United States, according to a late estimate, was two thousand one hundred and twenty-five millions of dollars. This debt to be paid in silver, would require sixty-two thousand and five hundred tons of silver coin. To transport this amount of silver coin in waggons, allowing two thousand pounds to the waggon and each waggon to occupy a space of two rods, would require a train of waggons three hundred and ninty miles long. To pay this debt in gold would require three thousand six hundred and seventeen tons of gold coin, and a train of waggons twenty two miles in length to haul it. The interest on this, at six per cent per annum, about the average rate, would amount to one hundred and twenty-seven millions five hundred thousand dollars per annum, to pay which would require three thousand seven hundred and fifty tons of silver, or two hundred and twenty tons of gold coin per annum. These figures may serve to give the reader some conception of the vastness of the war debt of the United States, and also serve as an argument for or against annexation with a nation sporting such a magnificent debt. These figures do not include the indebtedness of the individual States, which forms another vast amount.

EXPLORATIONS IN AFRICA.

THE OGO-WAI RIVER.

The October number of the Revue Maritime Coloniale of France contains an account of the exploration of the Ogo-Wai, a river on the western coast of Africa, in July and August, 1862, by MM. Griffon du Bellay and Breval, of the French navy. This river, which has an average breadth of two and a half kilometres, (a mile and a half) is formed at a distance of sixty leagues from its mouth by the juction of two large rivers, the Okanda and the O'Gounyai, the sources of which are still unknown, although the latter seems to follow the general direction of the Ogo-Wai with a slight inclination to the South, and the direction of the Okanda is northeasterly, which would lead to the supposition that its origin is not far distantant from Lake Tshad.

Its banks are peopled by tribes known under the collective name of Oshebas, which comprises those of the Hahouins, Shakis and Ornbets, some of which trade with the tribes of Gaboon. The tribes which inhabit the river N'Gounyai are the Ashiras and Chimbas. The people of these regions are inhabited by certain savages whom they call Pahdie, and described as having wings and and antelopes' feet; but they know nothing of a negro race provided with tails or of amphibious negros; there is discrimination in their credulity. From the junction of the two above above mentioned rivers the country may be divided into two district regions—the highlands of Lake Iouanga, and the marshy country of Lake Anenghe. The former, consisting of limestone formations and clay, is thickly wooded and inhabited by the Elengas, who are allied to the Galloix. The marshy country is inhabited by the Ev-ike, Bacammas and Orcoungois, and is highly insalubrious; the highlands, on the contrary, are healthy, as might be expected. M. Du Chaillu praises Lake Anenghe with a vast multitude of crocodiles; our travellers, on the contrary, hardly found any there. The tribes only manufacture mats and pottery for their own use; but, on the other hand, the country is rich in palm oil, india rubber, ivory, ebony and concrete vegetable fat; the two latter are the chief produce of the highlands. European produce reaches these countries in exchange for slaves.

THE CHAUDIERE GOLD MINES.—The Quebec MERCURY, of Friday last, says:—"We learn from these persons who have just returned from the mines that the speculative fever continues to spread in that locality. It is stated that a systematic attempt is in progress to persuade all visitors that the region is auriferous, with a view to the furtherance of speculating schemes; and that representations are made by interested parties which independent scrutiny shows to be gross exaggeration. Those who have taken any trouble to watch the operations of mining, and to collate facts to the bona fide yield, appear to arrive at a conclusion for which the official report of Mr. Judah must have prepared the public mind. It is that though gold is obtainable, the average productiveness is by no means large—certainly not sufficiently large to justify a wild rush to the mines, or the investment of heavy sums in the acquisition of mining privileges. The action of the Crown Lands Department is looked forward to with much interest, not unmixed with anxiety, as upon it to a large extent depends the healty development of the Chaudiere District. The experience of Australia shows the necessity of extreme caution in the organization of any licensing system; whilst the testimony of the United States' authorities is averse to the throwing open of gold-producing lands without something from them some substantial tribute to the State. The old tax in the form of a royalty is susceptible of many objections, though perhaps the previous metals would form a reasonable exception to the rule against royalties, in cases where large tracts of land are bought in fee for speculative purposes. The public interest undoubtedly points to the discouragement of such sales, and the encouragement, by a liberal system of licenses, of a working population. So far as the most widely known portion of the Chaudiere region is concerned, we apprehend that the first point to be decided is the validity or nonvalidity of the De Lery patent, which we believe covers all, or nearly all, of the mines now worked. This disposed of, the duty of the Government will be to render available, by license, all adjacent auriferous lands yet possessed by the Crown, as well as lands which may have passed into private hands, with the usual reservation of the rights of the Crown in respect of gold and silver."

OBITUARY.—The Paris Church bells tolled yesterday in commemoration of the death of Miss Mary Ann Margaret Lennox, daughter of Major the Earl of Lennox, who died last Monday morning. Miss Lennox, by her father, was a grand-daughter of the Duke of Lennox and Richmond in the peerage of Great Britain, Duke of Aubigny in that of France, and Earl of March in that of United Kingdom. By her mother she was a descendant of the Lacorne family, a race which is eminent in the early history of Canada for its services to the State, and as such was related to the DeBouchervilles, DeLanaudieres, Dnchesnays, and other ancient Canadian families. Her sister Miss Charlotte Lennox died about two months ago. The funeral service was held yesterday, when her remains were placed in the vaults of the Church of Notre Dame de-Toutes Graces' at Coteau St. Luc.—Montreal GAZETTE, Oct. 23rd.

GOLD AND SILVER DISCOVERIES IN HASTINGS.—Mr. W. Atkins, writing from the Township of Tyendinaga to the Belleville Intelligencer says:—"I take great pleasure in forwarding you a sample of silver quartz found by me along Parks' creek in the Township of Tyendinaga. Having for several weeks searched for both gold and silver with great diligence in this section, I have been rewarded for my assiduity, and am convinced that it is as good as has yet been discovered in any other part of Canada. I am also of opinion that there is gold here in abundance—from the vast deposits of quarts together with my own mineralogical observations. After tracing its dips, angles and spurs, I find it concentrates into one grand bed, and varies from two to four feet in width being cased on both sides by two ledges of limestone. Upon testing the ore, I can safely say it pays 43 per cent with traces of gold. I have likewise discovered gold bearing quartz in considerable quantities, and am of opinion that it requires but perseverance, energy and some capital to make it as paying as the mines of Washoe, Cal. My experience in the various gold regions of California, Mexico and Pike's Peak leads me to think that this, if worked, will be equally paying and remunerative. The facilities for working are good, plenty of wood and water, and only three miles east of the gravel road at Latta's mills."

For the Examiner.

On some of those Qualities of Character which Adorn Human Life.

MR. EDITOR,—Man's well-being is much in his own power. Every day's experience testifies to the truth of this. If, for instance we violate Nature's laws regarding the health of the body, Nature inflicts the due penalty for the offence; and this is equally true with regard to the Mind: if we violate God's moral law, the stain is thereafter part of the life, for the consciousness of the crime remains so long as memory endures. Frequency of violation may often stamp the countenance with villany. If we do what is wrong, we necessarily destroy our own comfort and happiness; while, if we do what is right, even in the doing we find a reward. The greatest slave is not he who is ruled by a despot, but rather he who is governed by his own evil spirit within—he who is the thrall of his own ignorance, selfishness and vice. Much of our own happiness depends entirely on ourselves. EXCELLENCE and INDOLENCE are antagonistic—the former is above and beyond the reach of the latter. This law is always operative and of great benefit; for, endowed as we are with the power of working, it incites us to action. All history teaches us that heaven lavish of her gifts Nature [illegible] every [illegible] roots [illegible] excellence is the fruit of [illegible] "What is the qualities [illegible] life, and how are they to be [illegible]

To do so, a knowledge of truth is necessary, and every opportunity of acquiring that knowledge should be eagerly embraced.—Truths rightly received into the understanding and fixedly rooted, becomes part of the very nature of the individual—enobles his being, tends to lift him up from moral degradation and moulds his conduct powerfully and irresistibly.

Some may, perhaps, ask, "Can a man have just principles of action, and yet have no religion in his heart?" I answer, No! but suppose a man MAY act justly from a sense of moral right within him, and yet be destitute of piety, it amounts to this: there is a man who wears the garment of Religion and yet is not pious; who borrows the mantle of religion, and says: "This is sufficient for me!" Forgetting that the mantle is powerless, he also forgets to thank the lender, for God's revealed law is, to all, the source of moral right, and by the light of revealed truth and by the help of it, although a respectable character, yet in presence of true piety he dwindles into insignificance. The want of it is the cause of all the dishonesty, crime and falsehood existing, and is the cause of all the records of war, plunder, desolation and bloodshed which stain the pages of history.

There are, however, several special qualities which distinguish the possessor in the world's eye. One of these is Application. This leads often to success in the world—as success follows him who works with a true spirit, and who is the most persistent in his efforts. The world, certainly, admires that quality, and, finally, makes room for the possessor, though at first but little disposed disposed to do so. Fortune will favor the industrious and persevering, as the winds and waves favor the skilful mariner. Some have called this quality, genius. Buffon's words are: "Genius is patience." John Foster calls it: "The power of lighting one's own fire;" and another calls it: "The power of making efforts." When Newton was asked how he had worked out his extraordinary discoveries, he replied: "By always thinking unto them." Thus, great results may be secured by ordinary qualities. One hour a day with intent from the trivial pursuits, and wisely employed, will, in a few years, make even an ignorant man well informed. Perseverance increases strength. Ordinary qualities may achieve great results, for "trifles make perfection and perfection is no trifle."

Another point of character is Energy. For an explanation of its nature, take the old motto of the plain man: "Either I will find a way or make one." Energy of will may be called the central power of character, as it gives impetus to every action and zeal to every effort. Hope, the perfume of life, is properly taught upon it. Our habits or our temptations should not be our masters, but we theirs. We should will strongly and decisively, and not be carried hither and thither by every wind. When Lockyard, the traveller, was asked by the African Association when he would be ready to set out to Africa, his reply was, "To-morrow morning." There is such a pressure to be greatest in these days; such a superabundant haste for dress, amusement, dawdling, that there is scarcely any time left for forming a solid foundation for true character and valuable attainments. Resist these false notions of things: have the courage to go patiently onward in the course of life

The Young Laird D'sappointed.

BY CHARLES STEWART.

What think ye the young laird was wooing yestreen?
What think ye the young laird was wooing yestreen?
He wad tak me afore my ain mother's ten o'ma',
And that's what the young laird was wooing yestreen.

[illegible]
I wad hae had the laird, but I cared na a pre on.
And I'll be a lady yet I wadna be alone,
Sae the laird took the beef, but I cared na a pre on.

Some folk wha hae siller or name are nae wud,
They deem that their siller and name will be lo'ed,
An' gie the best o' their mind he likes ae'en the warst,
Wa'k done in a place where a body's no seen.

For it's aye been my thocht that baith heaven and laird,
Wha prudence and feelings abroad hae some regard,
An' would wed wi' nae ane but the ane for their ain,
Had I been the laird, or her (ere heading) maid.

Though I might hae rewled in grandeur and state,
Wi' servants wha'd made the maist fawnin in place;
Nae profession an' mansions could ever bring me bliss
If I hadna in the hame got hamefauld.

For the laird cam in yet wark for a new jobe himsel',
And there ne'er were 2 hands but stood ayont twa a babe,
A maid wha has gowd may be married for gowd,
But a ladye gudeconduct maid I shall be.

For riches and honor though maist folk are fain,
Yet love not in gowd is mae jewel of mine,
And though I'm a cooky in lum-reekit hame,
Nae gowd shall e'er mak me a lady I trow.

For leugh on a lad that is married for brass,
Who sells a man's pairt baith wi' greet and wi' mane,
And should he be a persone I rarena a preen,
He'll [illegible]

A German has invented a machine that utters the Lord's Prayer very eloquently.

That man cannot be upright before God who is unjust in his dealings with men.

It requires true strength of character to do a brave act in secret, than not to brag of it afterwards.

"Husband, if an honest man is God's noblest work, what is an honest woman?" "His rarest, dear."

The entire amount of gold during the year, sent to Europe, has been over thirty-three million of dollars.

Society is the atmosphere of souls, and we necessarily inhale from it what is either healthful or infectious.

What quadrupeds are admitted to balls, operas, and dinner parties? White kids, sometimes the goats go with the m.

A rascally bachelor asks, "What is the most difficult operation a surgeon can perform? Why take the lawsuit of a woman!"

LOGICAL.—It is said the reason why the Irish make better sailors than the Welsh is, because they prefer a shamrock to a leak.

The old United States has been raised at Norfolk. We wish it were as easy to raise the United States, the frigate's namesake.

Some of the Texas Newspapers are now printed on the small brown sheets which grocers use for wrapping paper.

"Have you Watts on Mind?" inquired a customer of a bookseller's apprentice. "No, Sir," replied young Green, "but I have warts on my hand."

A Union soldier, in General Grant's army, thinks the next Congress should not adjourn without doing one thing, and that is "making the nigger a legal tender."

"Parson I beg you will not mention the unfortunate circumstance again," as the hen pecked husband said when the parson told him that he would be joined to his wife in another world, never to be separated from her.

Some "feller," with a hankering after an elysium, "sighs his soul away" in the following poetic effusion:

O, is there not a happy land—
A land beyond the seas—
Where pot-pies smoke in boundless lakes
And dumplings grow on trees?
Where gingerbread is found in stacks,
And 'shinsecrapes' by the ton,
And when you look for Job of work
You get the 'ready John!'
Where nature's lesson may be read
In every babbling brook,
Where bumble bees don't sting a chap,
And mooly cows don't hook.

Judge B. was once obliged to double with an Irishman in a crowded hotel, when the following conversation ensued:

"Pat, you would have remained a long time in the old country before you could have slept with a Judge, would you not?"

"Yis, yer honor," said Pat, "and I think yer honor would have been a long time in the 'ould counthry,' before you'd been a Judge, too.

A REAL RELISHER OF A JOKE.—A man lately received twenty lashes, well laid on, at the whipping post, in an English town. The culprit, instead of bellowing when the constable applied the lash laughed immediately which made the angry officer lay on with harder force. On giving him the twenty-fifth blow, the angry officer could stand it no longer.—"Well, here, mister," said he, "I've done my duty, and can lick you no more, but I'd like to now what it is that's so funny?" "Funny!" roared the other; "why it's excellent—glorious!—You've got the strong Smith! I ain't the man that was to be whipped! 'Tis the other one! And now you'll have to go it all over again! Really, it's too good! You must lick the other man! Ha, ha, ha!"

ADVANTAGES OF PRINTING.—Mr. D., a well-known Metropolitan printer, once told us that on one occasion an old woman from the country came into his printing office with an old Bible in hand.

"I want," said she, "that you should print it over again. It's getting a little blurred, sort 'o, and my eyes isn't what they was. How much do you ax?"

"Fifty cents."

"Can you have it done in half-an-hour? I wish you would—want to be getting home—like a good ways out in the country."

When the old lady went out, he went around to the office of the American Bible Society, and purchased a copy for fifty cents.

"Lor' sakes a massy!" exclaimed the old woman, when she came to look at it, "how good you have fixed it—with 'em I'd'nt as good as new. never seed nothin' so curious as wot printin' is!"

PARIS.—Of the hundreds of elegant seats put up all over the city for the repose of the public, I have not seen one disfigured by a pen-knife. From one end of the town to the other, everywhere the choicest flowers are blooming, with only a barrier a foot high around the beds, and yet not a plant or flower is ever touched. Paris has become the best lighted city in the world, and will soon be, if it is not already, the best ventilated. Its drainage is nearly perfect. The policemen are not ruffians, but as civil as gentlemen-ushers of the black and white rod. In the most polite and obliging manner all your questions are answered, and every reasonable assistance is rendered if you get into a strait. If an Englishman should tumble into a gutter in returning from an evening party, he would be lifted as by the gentle hand of the good Samaritan, and placed upon his own beast.

MANHOOD
AND THE
VIGOR OF YOUTH RESTORED

IN FOUR WEEKS,

By Dr. Sicotte's Essence of Life.

DR. SICOTTE, (OF PARIS) after years of earnest solicitation, has at length acceded to the urgent request of the American public, and appointed an agent in Toronto for the sale of his valued and highly prized Essence of Life. This wonderful agent will restore Manhood to the most shattered constitutions, whether arising from excesses, the effects of climate, or natural causes. The time required to cure the most inveterate case is four weeks; and if used according to printed instructions, which are very simple, failure is impossible. This life-restoring remedy should be taken by all about to marry, as its effects are permanent. It is acknowledged by the medical press to be the greatest discovery ever made. Its developing powers are miraculous. Success in every case is as certain as that science overthrows ignorance.

Dr. Sicotte's Essence of Life is sold in cases, with full instructions for use, at $3, or four quantities in one for $9, and will be sent to any part, carefully packed, on receipt of remittance to his accredit agents.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK,
For 1864.

GREAT LITERARY & PICTORIAL YEAR.

THE PUBLISHER of Godey's Lady's Book, thankful to that public which has enabled him to publish a Magazine for the last thirty-four years of a larger circulation than any in America, has made an arrangement with the most popular authoress in this country—

MARION HARLAND,

Author of "Alone," "Hidden Path," "Miriam," "Moss Side," and "Nemesis."

Who will furnish Stories for the Lady's Book for 1864. This alone will place the Lady's Book in a literary point of view fare ahead of any other Magazine. Our other favourite writers will all continue to furnish articles throughout the year.

The best Lady's Magazine in the world and the Cheapest.

THE LITERATURE

Is of that kind that can be read aloud in the family circle, and the clergy in immense numbers are subscribers for the Book.

THE MUSIC

Is all original, and would cost 25 cents, (the price of the book) in the music stores; but most of it is copyrighted, and cannot be obtained except in Godey.

OUR STEEL ENGRAVINGS,

All efforts to rival us in this have ceased, and we now stand alone in this department, giving as we do many more and infinitely better engravings than are published in any other work. Godey's immense double sheet Fashion-Plates, containing from five to seven full length colored Fashions on each plate—other Magazines give only two—are far ahead of any Fashions in Europe or America. The publication of these Plates cost $10,000 more than the Fashion Plates of the old style, and nothing but our wonderfully large circulation enables us to give them. Other Magazines cannot afford it. We never spare money when the public can be benefited.

These Fashions may be relied on. Dresses may be made after them, and the wearer will not subject herself to ridicule, as she would be if she visited the large cities dressed after the style of the plates in some of our so-called Fashion Magazines.

OUR WOOD ENGRAVINGS,

Of which we give twice or three times as many as any other Magazine, are often obtained for steel; they are so far superior to any others.

IMITATIONS.

Beware of them. Remember that the Lady's Book is the original publication and the cheapest. If you take Godey, you want no other Magazine. Everything that is useful or ornamental in a house will be found in Godey.

DRAWING LESSONS.

No other Magazine gives them, and we have given enough to fill several large volumes.

OUR RECEIPTS

Are such as can be found nowhere else. Cooking in all its varieties—Confectionary—the Nursery—the Toilet—the Laundry—the Kitchen Receipts upon all subjects are to be found in the pages of the Lady's Book. We originally started this department, and have peculiar facilities for making it most perfect. This department alone is worth the price of the book.

LADIES WORK TABLE.

This department comprises engravings and descriptions of every article that a lady wears.

MODEL COTTAGES.

No other Magazine has this department.

Terms to Subscribers in the British Provinces:

One copy one year, $3; two copies one year, $5; three copies one year, $7.

Five copies one year, and an extra copy to the person sending the club, making six copies for $11.50.

Special Clubbing with other Magazines.

Godey's Lady's Book and Arthur's Magazine, one year, $4.

Godey and Harper, one year, $5.

Godey, Harper, and Arthur, one year, $7.

At these prices subscribers in the Provinces will have only the British postage to pay.

Treasury notes and notes of all solvent banks taken at par.

Be careful and pay the postage on your letter.

THE BROKEN RING.

FROM THE GERMAN OF ZICHENDORFF.

In valley cool a millwheel
Sings as it turns around;
From valley has vanished the maiden
Whom there by the brook I found.

Her troth-ring on my finger
She put—the millwheel sang;
Her troth the maid has broken,
The ring in two it sprang.

I'd fain a minstrel wander
Far hence, the wide earth o'er;
And troll my doleful ditties,
And stroll from door to door.

I'd fain, a trooper, spur me
Into the thickest fight;
By silent watch-fire lay me
A-field in blackest night.

Hear I that millwheel singing,
I know not what I will:—
I'd fain the earth lie under,
'Twere then for once all still.

*The original is one of Mendelsohn's sweetest melodies, known under the name of "In einem kuehlen Grunde."

PAUL ALLEN'S WIFE,
AND
HOW HE FOUND HER.

[NOTE—The leading incidents in the following sketch will be familiar to those few who were acquainted with them at the time of their occurrence, although the names are changed that they may not be recognized by others. Most of them are still alive. Poor Foshay died three years ago of ship fever, a victim to his philanthropy and devotion to his profession. Doctor W——is still enjoying a world-wide reputation. George is settled in a lucrative practice in the country. Paul Allen, a noble and enterprising man, with his lovely and beautiful wife, Maud, are living at their country seat, my near neighbors; and talking with them a few evenings since, they extorted from me—ant unwillingly—the promise to write this sketch.]

During the winter of 18—, the class of Doctor W——was larger than it has ever been before. His reputation as a surgeon, as well as a general practitioner, attracted to his office a crowd of young men who were anxious to put themselves under his tution, as well as for the name of having studied with him, as for the actual advantages of the position. But vain as the Doctor was of his well-deserved reputation, he did not allow this vanity to induce him to retain under his instruction a single pupil who, after proper trial, he did not believe would in his after-life do credit to him as a teacher. It became a matter of course, therefore that his young men stood high as students. He was indefatigable in his efforts to instruct them, and they in their turn were ambitious to improve.

But the advantages to be found in such an office as Doctor W——'s did not consist alone in his private instructions. The multitude of cases of disease that were daily brought there for advice, and which were always carefully examined and explained in the presence of his class, made them familiar with the practice as well as the theory of their profession. Most of the operations which he performed were done in the presence of some of his students, and with their assistance, and every opportunity was afforded them to learn all that could be learned of every case.

It was near midnight one evening of the winter of which I am writing, that three of the students were sitting in the office in front of the gate, in which was still burning a glowing fire. The wind was still howling without, and driving the snow, which was rapidly falling against the windows and piling it up in the area, and everything, even to the footsteps of the occasional passer-by, seemed cold and dreary in the extreme.

"Confound it!" said John Foshay, going to the window and looking out upon the pelting storm, "I do not feel like going out in such a night as this. Ugh! it makes one shudder, even in this warm room, only to look at it."

"And yet you would go in a moment in one of our midnight excursions, John, if the Professor only said the word," said Paul Allen, a tall, raw-boned man, but whose face was full of intelligence and energy.

"Glad, and who would not!" said Foshay. "The satisfaction which it gives the old Doctor would put the mettle into the dullest of us. Do you remember our expedition into Jersey last winter, and on just about such a night as this, and what a time we had getting the body into the city?"

"I was not with you then," said Allen "but I remember how you thought all the lady passengers on the ferry-boat were watching you, as if they suspected your business."

"Thought!" exclaimed Foshay; no thinking about it, let me tell you, Paul Allen. It was next thing to certain. Hudson and I are too old hands at the business to be frightened at any slight suspicion. Why, the fellows watched us as if they thought we might have some of their own families boxed up in the old trunk for dissection. But George is a perfect trump at such times, and he managed the thing most capitally. I say, George Hudson, what are you dreaming about?"

The person thus addressed raised himself up from the sofa, where he had been sleeping for more than an hour, and rubbing his eyes made no reply till the question was repeated again.

"Dreaming do you say—was I dreaming?" he said. "Well, I believe I was. I thought we had gone into the country on a pleasant moonlight evening—you, and I, and Paul—and had taken up the body of that young lady that died the day before yesterday, that the old doctor was so anxious to examine."

"I would sacrifice a cock to Æsculapius," said Paul Allen, "if that dream of yours would come to pass."

"And I another," said Foshay.

"It could hardly be done on such a night as this," said Hudson. "By some incongruity I thought it was midsummer."

"Do they not say dreams go by contrariness said Foshay.

"Then the girl would be taking us up," said Allen, "or her lordly old father, which is the most probable under all circumstances."

"The Professor said he refused him with the air of a king, when he requested the examination," said George.

"The very reason the thing ought to be done any way," said Foshay. "What do you say, George—can't it be done?"

"To-night?" asked Allen, with a shrug of his shoulders at the tempest without.

"No, it is too late to start now," said Foshay, "but it can be done to-morrow night. We will say nothing to the Doctor at out it till we show him the report. What do you say, George?"

At this moment the door communicating with the Professor's house opened, and the Doctor's voice called, in its usual mild tone, "George!"

Hudson was out with the Doctor about a quarter of an hour. He was a sort of confidential student in the office. He had been there from his boyhood, and was acquainted with all the ways of his preceptor, and intrusted with all his wishes. When he returned there was a smile on his face, and he said:

"Dreams do sometimes come true, boys."

"What is it, George?" exclaimed both the others in a breath.

"Just what you were proposing before I went out," said George.

"And he wants it done?" inquired Allen.

"Certainly; that is what he called me out for. He had gone to bed but could not sleep The curious case of the young girl he said, was running in his mind, and exhausting his speculations upon it, and hearing our voices below, he came down to purpose the very thing you were talking about."

"One of the remarkable coincidents in great minds, Paul. Put that down to my credit, and if anybody asks you in future days if you think there is any similarity in Doctor W—— and Doctor Foshay, remember this," said Foshay, jocularly, as he patted Allen on the back.

"Pshaw, John, none of your nonsense," said Allan, "let us make our arrangements to-night, and be off in time to-morrow."

The case which had excited so much interest in the little world of Doctor W—'s office, was this: Maud Mansfield, the only child of Henry Mansfield, a gentleman of large wealth, and living in great style about about twenty miles from the city, in Westchester County, had been ill for many months before she came with her father to consult Doctor W—. She was a young lady of rare beauty and intelligence, and having lost her mother at an early age, the necessity of acting the part of the lady of the mansion to her father's friends, had developed all the qualities of the mature woman at the age of seventeen, the period at which her illness commenced. At first there was little to be observed, but that she was more sedate and thoughtful.—Gradually she began to avoid company and seek solitude, and it was with difficulty her father could persuade her to see his friends when they came. She was often found in tears, for which she could no or would not give any reason. The hue of health began to fade from her cheek—her eye lost its lustre. Medical advice was sought, but no symptoms of disease were manifest, and her father was advised to travel with her.—Shortly after their return from a journey of several weeks, symptoms began to appear to the servants of the house, which led them to hint among themselves suspicions that all was not as it should be with her. Soon these suspicions found their way into the neighborhood, and at length reached the ears of her father. But he did not and would not for a moment admit into his mind one doubt of his child's honor, though, even to himself, the cause of the disgraceful rumor was becoming daily more manifest. Doctors were called in from the neighborhood. Some with coarse and unhesitating readiness, declared the cause of the rumor true, and he indignantly expelled them from the house; others withheld their opinion and could say nothing. And thus months passed—months of agony to Mr. Mansfield, though Maud seemed unaffected. She had been told all that was said of her, but it might sometimes be told her by those who love to torture even the innocent with such cruel accusations, and she heard it without a tear, while she gave only a calm denial of its truth. It is wonderful with what indifference and apathy she sat down to her fate.

At length Mr. Mansfield brought her to town, and placed her under the care of Doctor W—. After a full investigation of her case, he declared his unhesitating conviction that there was no foundation for the rumors against her honor, while at the same time he could not determine the nature of the disease. Could he cure her? That was a question he could not answer. He could try. And with all the acuteness of his great mind, and with all the resources of his wonderful skill, he applied himself to the task. For a time the disease seemed to be checked. Indeed, her father persuaded himself that she was better, and was elated with hopes of her restoration to health. But these hopes were doomed to disappointment, and in a few weeks she took to bed, from which she never rose.

Of course the whole history of the case and its progress was known in the office. It was a matter of careful study and discussion; and when the Doctor announced to his class that there was no farther hope, they began at once to look forward to a post-mortem examination to resolve the mystery of the disease. But when all was over, and it was proposed to the father, he proudly and resolutely refused, and she was removed to his residence in the country, to be buried by the side of her mother. It was a disappointment to the Doctor, in which the whole class participated, and led to the determination I have mentioned to exhume the body.

It was arranged that Paul Allen should go out in the morning and survey the country, and ascertain the spot where she was buried, and Hudson and Foshay should follow in the evening with all things necessary to accomplish their purpose.

When he arrived at the place the following day, Allen found the funeral just entering the church yard, and, mingling with the crowd, saw heaped up, as they supposed, forever. Nothing, of course, remained for him to do but to wear away the day till his companions should arrive. In the mean time he listened to the story of the shame of the rich man's daughter, and strolled up to see the lordly mansion on the hill where he lived.

Night came and brought Hudson and Foshay. They were old hands at the work, and had no idle fears to harass them, so they staid till a late hour at the little public-house in the village, and then calling for their horses and inquiring of the landlord the distance to the next village in the opposite direction from which they had come, they drove off. One hour from that time they were raising the body of the dead girl from its new-made grave, and the moon, just risen, was shining cold and clear on her lifeless face.

"Easy," said Allen. "Handle her gently. I could never bear to lift out a young and beautiful girl as roughly as I can a stalwart man."

"Well—gently as you please, Allen," said Foshay, "and you may sentimentalize over it while we fill in the dirt."

But they were all impressed with the calm and beautiful face of the corpse, and laid it down by the side of the grave as gently and carefully as if they were preparing her for her burial.

"I can not think of putting her in the sack," said Allen, when they were ready to go. "Sentiment, or no sentiment, I do not like it. Let me see—it is half past twelve now, and good sleighing. By four o'clock we shall be at the office, and all snug. Now put her on the seat in my sleigh—wrap her up in the blankets from head to foot—and I'll follow you."

The others laughed at the conceit, but readily consented.

"A merry ride to you," said Hudson. "I hope she will keep you warm, Paul;" and they drove off.

There were strange thoughts crowding up in the mind of Paul Allen before he had driven a mile with his novel companion. They were no superstitious fears—no feeling of horror at the close proximity of the dead. He was too much accustomed to such things, although he had never been in just the same position with them before. But the calm beauty of the face, as he had seen it in the dim light of the moon, haunted him, and he seemed to feel the look that crept out from the half-open lids as he had never felt the gaze of women before. And he began to build fairy castles in which she was the lady of his love, and to dream of quiet home affections and endearments, not with just such an one as her, but with her very self. And then he would wake from his dream and smile at his own wild fancies, only to fall away in an instant into the same foundationless vision again. He was, on ordinary occasions, no imaginative man. On the contrary, he was noted in the office for his matter-of-fact habits. He was surprised now, himself, at the vagaries he was uncontrollably indulging in, yet still they ran on in spite of himself. He did not drive as rapidly as his companions, so that when he crossed Harlem river he was surprised from his reverie, by seeing the first feint streaks of day beginning to shoot up in the east. The next instant he was dashing furiously down the road to the city, all his dreams giving way to the urgent necessity of securing his contraband load in the Doctor's house. In a few moments he was driving rapidly down Broadway, and before the moonlight had faded away in the now fast-increasing light of morning he drew up his panting horse at the office-door, and in another minute the body was safely deposited in the private dissecting-room.

"All right now!" said Allen, as he returned with his companions to the office. "How long have you been in?"

"More than an hour," said Hudson. "what has kept you so long on the road? We began to fear you had been stopped, or met with some accident."

Allen made no reply to the question, but asking Hudson and Foshay to drive his horse over to the stable while he thawed himself out, he sat down by the grate, and in a moment was lost in his reveries again. At length rising and laying aside his overcoat, he mounted once more to the room where they had left the body. It was lying extended on the table, still enveloped in the blankets they had forgotten to remove. Allen often says, in speaking of the events of this night, that he could never account for the strange feelings which had brought him to the room, and which now drew him almost unconsciously or involuntarily to the side of the dead girl, with a feeling of almost tenderness he removed the covering from the face, and again met the same calm, sweet look that by moonlight had stolen out from the half-open lids, only now made calmer, and sweeter, and lovelier far, by the mellow light of early morning shining in from the skylight. The eyeball did not seem shrunken, and sunk in, as is generally the case with the dead, but the deep blue orb was full and round, and glistened as if a tear had just risen in it, and was ready to pour over upon the long fringes of the lid. A lock of glossy hair had escaped from the knot in which it had been bound, and he smoothed it back into its place with his hand, but started back from the marble coldness of the face. Drawing a stool to the side of the table, he sat down, and, as if bound by a spell, gazed for an hour upon the still and statue-like features and form before him. The grave-clothes were the same dress she had wore in life, and through its folds were displayed the graceful limbs and the round, full bust, almost, save for some slight emaciation, the same as if she had been alive.

For the first time in years Paul Allen shrunk from the idea of mutilating a human body. It was not the mere beauty of the one before him, for beauty and deformity had heretofore been all one to him. But there was a strange infatuation upon him, and he wished her back in her grave again rather than the rude hand of even his favorite Professor should apply the knife to her, dead though she might be. He had almost made up his mind to beg that it might not be done; but he knew they would laugh at his foolish feelings, and, with a sigh and the heaviest heart he ever felt in his bosom, he rose to leave the room. He stood a moment to look once again upon the face that had made such an impression upon him, and took one of the small hands, that lay crossed upon the bosom, in his own.

The rigidity had left it, and it seemed to sink under the pressure of his; and he fancied it felt warmer than when, an hour before, he had felt of it. He looked at the face—there seemed to him to be a slight but yet perceptible glow upon the forehead and about the lips. He touched them, and they yielded to the touch. He thought, all at once, he could see a gentle quivering of the eyelids. Was he dreaming again? was it all the work of overwrought fancy? he approached his face close to her's, and thought he felt her breath upon his cheek. He felt of her wrist to ascertain if there was any pulse, and could fancy there was a slight thrill beneath his finger. He was now thoroughly roused and excited, and tearing aside the covering from her chest, he placed his hand over her heart, and found it distinctly beating, but with a slow and struggling effort.

DIETING.

Dieting is usually considered to mean the same thing as a kind of starvation. The idea which the education physician attaches to the term, is a judicious regulation of the quantity and quality of the food, according to the circumstances of each case. A healthy man may diet himself in order to keep well; an invalid may diet with view to the recovery of his health; yet the things eaten by the two widely differ in their nature, bulk and mode of preparation. A vast multitude are suffering hourly by the horrors of dyspepsia; no two are precisely alike in all points, since there is an endless variety of combination as to age, sex, occupation, air, exercise, mode of eating, sleeping, constitution, temperament, &c. Yet dyspepsia is always brought on by over and irregular eating. It could be banished from the world in a generation, if the children were educated to eat moderately, regularly, and slowly. The parents who do this will do their offspring a higher good than by leaving them large fortunes, which in three cases out of four, foster idleness, gluttony and every evil thing. As the rich can get anything to eat or drink when they want it, they, with indulged children, bring on dyspepsia by eating irregularly and without an appetite. The poor—those who have to work for a living—induce the horrible disease by eating too rapidly and at unseasonable hours; mainly by eating heartily at supper and going to bed within an hour or two afterward. In the heyday of youth and manly vigor there may not for a while be noticed any special ill effect from such a practice—in truth, it is at first inappreciable, but it is cumulative and impossible not to manifest itself in due time. Infinite Benevolence forgives a moral delinquency; but omnipotent as He is, and loving towards all, it is not in the nature of His government of created things to work a miracle, to suspend a natural law, order to shield one of his creatures from the legitimate effects of a violence offered the physical system by excesses in eating drinking or exercise.

Perhaps hearty suppers make more dyspeptics than any or all other causes combined. If dinner is at noon, nothing should be taken for supper but a single cup of weak tea or other hot drink and a piece of stale bread and butter. After forty years of age, those who live in doors, sedentary persons—that is, all who do not work with their hands as laborers—would do better not to take any supper at all. Half the time the sedentary, who eat at noon, do not feel hungry at supper, especially if they see nothing on the table but bread and butter and tea. But nature is goaded on to set against her instincts in almost every family in the nation by "relishes" being placed on the supper-table, in the shape of chipped beef, salt fish, cake, preserves or other kinds of sweetmeat, and before the person is aware, a hearty meal has been taken, resulting in present uncomfortableness, undisturbed sleep in a weary waking in the morning, bad taste in the mouth and little or no appetite for breakfast, all of which can be avoided by beginning early to eat habitually, according to the suggestions above made.—Hall's Journal of Health.

LAW OF COMPENSATION.

Human lot is, on the whole, well averaged. A man does not possess great gifts of persons and of mind without drawbacks somewhere. Either great duties are imposed upon him, or great burdens are put upon his shoulders, or great temptations harrass him. Something in his life, takes it upon himself to reduce his advantages to the average standard. Nature gave Byron clubbed feet, but with those feet she gave him a genius whose numbers charmed the world—a genius which multitudes of common place or weak men would have been glad to purchase at the price of almost any humiliating eccentricity of person. But they were obliged to contest themselves with excellent feet, and brains of common kind and calibre. Nature had withered the little boy's leg but the loudest song we have heard from a boy in a twelvemonth came from his lips, as he limbed along alone in the open streets. The cheerful heart in his bosom was a great compensation for the withered leg; and beyond this the boy had reason for singing over the fact that he was forever released from military duty and fireman's duty, and all racing about in the service of other people. There are individual cases of misfortune in which it is hard to detect the compensating good, but these we must call the "exceptions" which "prove the rule."

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 12TH, 1863.

A FACT!

REFORMERS.

We hope the Reformers of the County of Peterboro' have read and thought over our remarks of last week. Some, we know, have. We have reason to believe that they have not been altogether aimless. Neither ought they. Feebly worded though they may have been, they were pregnant with truths that cannot be ignored, and suggestive of hints that, if acted upon, must be productive of much good. In our last we spoke of the benefits arising from effective organization to a party; but how and what are the best ways of effecting this? It can be done in many ways; but the best way is a matter of debate. No doubt many have peculiar views on the subject. If asked, one would suggest one plan, and another would suggest another; but, however feasible each of these plans might appear to the authors, the difficulty is to get to get others equally convinced of and to admit its feasibility. This is the rub. This want of congruity is often the death of a party. Jealousies are introduced, and dissensions, divisions, and consequent weakness, ensue, as the direct or immediate results. Where, therefore, there should be harmony, unanimity upon general principles, and strength, there is the very opposite. This is not peculiar to one party; it is alike true of all parties—whatever the complexion of their politics, or the results at which they aim. History and our own experience alike prove this. Organization, when once perfected in its machinery, in a great measure acts as a preventive to those evils. It is a political break-water, as it were, against which the waves of a party's divisions or minor differences surge and dash without doing any injury or damage to those higher common interests, which, in the estimation of the more liberal and enlightened, are considered of supreme importance. It is a kind of palladium, which, like Troy of old, as long as a party retains it, it is safe and innocuous from the attacks of its foes. Like Troy, too, its well-being—its safety—may depend upon the possession of its palladium; with it, secure—without it, ruined. But the how? This is the point. The members of a party must thoroughly understand each other; they must entertain common sentiments; they must be laboring for the same objects, and these objects must be such as will commend themselves by their aims and intrinsic value to the attention and approval of the investigating and impartial. This can only be done by meeting together frequently. In every section, therefore, there should be regular and stated meetings, where the public questions of the day should be taken up and talked over. These meetings should each appoint a delegate to represent their views in a general association for the County, which should be a kind of central authority, and directing power. The advantages of this would soon become apparent in the benefits that would accrue, and be the means of strengthening and perpetuating the party's influence and usefulness. It would train men for taking part in public affairs. A man would always be ready for every or any emergency that in the course of events might occur. To enumerate all the advantages of such a scheme would be superfluous. The scheme has been tried in other Counties, and from practical personal experience we know that it has more than met the expectations of the most sanguine of those favoring and supporting it. These associations, in the hands of the right sort of men, have enabled Reformers to organise an opposition to money, family influence and corruption in its rankest forms, which under no other circumstances could have been done. Indeed, not a few of the Counties that during the last few years have have been wrested the hands of the Corruptionists, owe their redemption to the influence exerted by such associations. Why not make the trial in this County? We need it badly enough. What exists now to draw reformers together, although community of sentiments—of principles and interests—absolutely requires it. Is it because there are not among the party men large hearted and unselfish enough to make some little sacrifice for their principles? Surely not! We will not entertain such an idea. No! We feel convinced that it only wants some leading spirit to set the ball agoing. Time was when such an one could be easily found in Peterborough. Shall we believe that Peterborough is less enterprising and spirited to-day than it was then? We would fain hope not. There is nothing like taking time by the forelock. We sincerely hope, therefore, that there will be a stirring up, and that steps will be taken in the different localities to have friendly meetings, where both the moral and intellectual feelings may be exercised in the contemplation, study and elucidation of these truths, and in the furthering of those most important interests which we as a body politic are so deeply interested.

Troubles continue in St. Domingo. More troops have been dispatched thither. The Dominicans are exultant with their successes They seem to be extremely lucky in cutting off the leaders of their enemies. A battle is reported in which the Spaniards were victorious—capturing one cannon and several prisoners. It was positively reported that Santa Anna had been killed,

EDUCATION IN CANADA.

From the Report of the Chief Superintendent for 1863, we learn that the number of School Sections in Upper Canada was 4,261, an increase on the previous year of 167. The number of Common Schools reported as open was 4,106, an increase of 95. The number of free schools was 3,111, an increase of 266. More than three-fourths of the whole Common Schools of Upper Canada are now free by the voluntary action of the rate-payers to their separate school sections. The number of teachers employed in the schools was 4,496—an increase of 70. Of these 3,115 were male, and 1,291 female teachers. The whole number of pupils attending the schools was 343,733—an increase of 13,815. Of these 185,441 were boys, and 152,298 girls.

In Lower Canada, the number of elementary schools was 2,996, and the number of pupils 139,474.

The total receipts for Common School purposes, in Upper Canada in 1862, was $1,396,128—an increase of $14,843. Excluding balances from 1861, the proper receipts of the year amounted to $1,240,087, consisting of the following items:—Legislative grant, $167,970; municipal assessment, $274,471, a decrease of $1,613; Trustees' assessment, $620,268, an increase of $32,970; rate bill, imposed where the schools are not free, $73,856, a decrease of $9,022; Clergy Reserve Fund and other sources, $112,524, a decrease of $17,851.

The total expenditure for Common School purposes was $1,231,993, an increase of $40,575. The items were:—teachers' salaries, $969,776, an increase of $41,663. Maps, apparatus, prizes, libraries, $22,316. School sites and buildings, $114,719. Rents and repairs, $37,960. School books, stationery, fuel, etc., $97,219.

The number of Roman Catholic Separate Schools reported in Upper Canada in 1862, was 108—precisely the same as the number in the preceding year. The amount apportioned to them from the Legislative School grant was $7,983—an increase of $197. The amount provided from local sources was $23,494, an increase of $221. The number of pupils in the Separate Schools was 14,700—increase 1069. There was a reported decrease in the attendance of 1861, of 1077. The increased attendance of 1862 brings up the number to within 8 of the attendance of 1860. In Lower Canada the number of dissentient schools was 165, with an attendance of 5,836 pupils.

AMERICAN NEWS.

Since our last the news has not been very stirring. The army of the Potomac has not the past week, been doing much; but it is, however, again on the move.

On the 7th, nearly a whole division of Hill's corps, which had crossed the Rappahanock, was attacked by Sedgwick & French and was defeated—some 1800 men and 8 guns being taken; the rest fled across the river.

The Confederates are in large force, extending from Culpepper on the north to Cedar Mountain on the South. The Tribune's special of the 9th, says the next fortnight promises to be the most eventful since the commencement of the war.

There is considerable ambiguity in the accounts from Chattanoga. It is almost impossible to tell the precise position of things. It was reported a few days ago that the the Federals were strengthening their position, and preparing themselves for coming events. It seems, however, from a late telegram, that Burnside has been attacked and has suffered a reverse; half of Grant's two regiments having been taken prisoners. The reported capture of Fort Sumpter turns out to be another Philadelphia canard.

"HISTORICUS" ON THE SEIZURE OF THE RAMS.

This celebrated writer has a letter in a late issue of the Times, on the seizure of the Confederate rams by the Government. He writes with all his usual ability, and heartily endorses the action of the Government. He shows that if intended for the Confederates their building has been in direct contravention to the English Statute. On the question of destination, he cites a letter from Mr. Mallory to Mr. Mason (intercepted last year) containing the following sentence:—

"Mr. Sanders has, as you are aware, contracted with this department for the construction in England of six iron steamers, containing the capacities of the freighting and the fighting ships in a manner which will enable them to force the blockade of our ports."

That the destination of the vessel if established, brings them under the Foreign Enlistment Act, he cites an American precedent under a law of like kind in a judgment pronounced by Chief Justice Marshall, with regard to a vessel. The latter said:

"It is impossible for a moment to disguise the fact that the arms and ammunition taken on board the Irresistible at Baltimore were taken for the purpose of being used on a cruise, and that the men then enlisted, though engaged in form as for a commercial voyage, were not engaged so in fact."

But "Historicus" shows that as a point of policy even more than as a point of law, the position taken by himself is an incontestible one. He shows how fallacious is the idea that the restriction of the construction and sale of vessels of the description and nature of the vessels in question, will fetter or injure, in the slightest degree, our commercial prosperity. He demonstrates how deficient in sagacity and statesmanlike policy England would be by its example, encouraging in neutral States the belief that it is part of their duty or their right to compensate the deficiencies of an inferior maritime belligrent against his more powerful antagonist. He shows how fatally such a doctrine could be wielded against ourselves. He says:—

"It is incredible to me how some persons contrive to forget or shut their eyes to the fact, that in any future war in which we may be engaged we shall occupy at sea the position in which the federals and not that in which the confederates stand; and that consequently, the special favors they are so eager to show to the confederate cause are so many blows levelled at the future interests of Great Britain. Our best chance of victory and safety will consist of the superiority of our naval resources, and in the fact that we can build three iron-clads to one which any other single nation can produce. Are we, then, to be the first nation in the world to lay down the principle and establish the precedent by which our foes will be at liberty to supply from the resources of neutrals the deficiencies by which alone we can hope to triumph—to teach in fact, that the first duty of neutrality is to accomplish a judicious maritime 'handicap?' What is this but to authorise, by our example, the neutrals of the world to club together their petty means in order to equalise our adversaries with ourselves? I thank God that the English government are determined to be no parties to such an aggregious folly."

Our list of premiums will appear in our next. We regret we could not give it this week as intended.

BABY JOBS.

We see that the Government has advertised the sale of two of the Baby Steamers. The name is no new one to Canadians. Baby's John have long been a by-word. The Cartier-Macdonald Government, it will be remembered, purchased five steamers from this speculator; they gave it out that they had made a bargain. They bought, they said, £56,386 what had cost £96,000. They forgot, however, to tell that these steamers, though built for Mr. Baby, were built principally with public money, and run with public money; and that, in fact, they were purchased because that was the only way that the large sums advanced to Mr. Baby out of the public chest could be secured. That the vessels were not worth the amount given, or anything like it, is averred by parties competent to be Judges in such matters. Indeed, if the amount realized by the sale of the vessels does not most conclusively prove this, we will be greatly mistaken. We will see. The Baby days are, however, over for the present. Shall we hope for aye?

IMPORTANT TO MILITIA MEN.

The Militia Department have mailed circulars to the Brigade Majors, containing the regulations upon which candidates for Commission in Service Battalions of the Militia, may enter Schools of Tuition, when established and completed. No candidate can be appointed or promoted unless he can furnish a satisfactory certificate of qualification from the commandant of the School. Field officers are expected to be thoroughly acquainted with their duties. They must have first class certificates—showing that they can drill a Battalion in the field, and that they are acquainted with all the duties of internal Battalion economy. From other officers second class certificates will be required—show that they know how to drill a Company on Company Drill, as well as command a Company in Battalion Drill. Every candidate must be perfectly drilled as a private soldier—otherwise he cannot get a certificate. No further promotion or appointment will be made in the volunteer force until a Board of Examiners will have been appointed, and certificates of competency obtained from it.

GREENWOOD.

After a trial of several days, Greenwood was acquitted on Wednesday last. The verdict, though not unexpected by some, must have certainly taken the country by surprise. That he was the murderer, there seemed to be overpowering evidence to show; but this evidence was, after all, only circumstantial; which, though it may in some cases and under some circumstances the strongest of all kinds of evidence, is yet to be received with great caution. There was a link wanting in the evidence which would have otherwise, without a doubt, convicted Greenwood There was that want of completeness which whatever their moral convictions, the jury thought it necessary to bring in the verdict of guilty. There was no witness to the murder committed but even after the trial one in reading over the evidence as it appears in the Toronto papers cannot help being struck with the force of the grounds justifying the suspicions entertained of Greenwood. He is still in jail waiting his trial on another charge pending against him.

THE PROGRESS OF CALIFORNIA.

The British Consul at San Francisco in his report this year gives the following account of California:—"The product of wheat, barley, and oats in 1862, reached 1,894,500 qrs. The number of horses was 124,000; mules 21,7000, stock cattle, 1,250,000 1,350,000, sheep 1,500,000. hogs 322,000. The of wool amounted to 5,530,000 lbs., nearly two-thirds consisting of middling to fine clothing and combing wools. The vineyards are becoming a source of great wealth. Considerably more than 1,000,000 gallons of wine were manufactured in 1862, but the great bulk is made without sufficient care, and is consequently inferior. The exports other than gold and specie amounted in 1892 to £1,965,500. The Consul states that there are 15,000 British subjects in California, and a like number of French. The assessed value of real and personal estate (not including mines, which are not taxed) was £32,073,800 in 1862. The receipts of gold dust at San Francisco from the interior amounted to £8,507,967 in 1862."

FORT HOPE.

It seem very probable that Port Hope will be able to get its affairs in somewhat better condition than they have been for some time past. The bondholders of the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway have submitted a proposition to the town by which the differences between them may be settled. On Thursday evening last a special meeting of the Council was called to consider the proposition, and a couple of resolutions adopted accepting the resolution, if the rate-payers approve of it. It now rests with the latter to say what they will do.

DESERTERS.

There seems to be a regular stampede among the soldiers in Kingston for Uncle Sam's territories; fourteen have deserted within a very short time. We think they will soon find that it is not all gold that glitters, and that they would be as well off at "home."

The Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, who has been making a tour through Europe, has, for the last few weeks, been sojourning in England, where he delivered a number of striking addresses. Immense crowds went to hear. His last address was delivered in Exeter Hall, London. Hours before the appointed time crowds were on the outside waiting for the opening of the Hall; and although a charge was made thousands had to go away unable to find admittance. Indeed, neither Chairman nor Mr. Beecher could get in until the police made a road for them through the multitude. His speech on the occasion, according to the London papers must have been a marked success. The audience were most enthusiastic in their demonstrations of their applause and approval. There is no doubt that a very strong impression has been made upon the English people by Mr. Beecher. At the close of his address, brief speeches were made by Professor Newman, Rev. Newman Hall and Mr. George Thompson, well known both in Europe and on this continent as an orator a strong anti-slavery champion.

Messrs. R. Patterson & Co. are making extensive additions to their Fall and Winter stock of Boots and Shoes, owing to the steady rush of business they are enjoying.

Iceland.—This island which has a population of about seventy thousand, is under the government of Denmark. The language spoken in Iceland is the old Scandinavian, with no admixture of Greek or Latin roots. It has, singularly enough, a literature 900 years old. There are four printing on the Island, and four newspapers. About 60 volumes are issued in a year. There are colleges and academies of medicine there, and common schools. But most of the education is domestic in its character. The mothers teach the children so effectually, that a young Iceland boy or girl of eight years old cannot be found unable to read and write. Wandering minstrels, like those of the old time in Scotland and Germany, are still to be found traversing the country, and dropping in on families happy to receive them, who gladly give them a night's supper and lodging in exchange for their lay. The Icelandic Church is Lutheran. There are 199 churches on th eisland, with 200 clergymen.

A Beauty worth Forty Thousand Men!—A deputation from Mexico have had an interview with the Archduke Maximillian. After getting through the muddy tracks of politics, says the correspondent of the Times, the members of the deputation were introduced to the Archduchess, and were "struck with amazement (adds M. Dubrauz), when they heard her, beaming with beauty and goodness, keep up the conversation in the purest Castilian." The enthusiasm of these gentlemen reached the highest pitch: for, on leaving her presence, one of them declared that "the very sight of this incomparable Princess would be worth to her august husband an army of forty thousand men; and that there was not a single partisan of Juarez who, at the aspect of the Archduchess Charlotte, would not become an enthusiastic imperialist."

Killed by the gas of a Saratoga Spring.—The Saratogian says, a soldier of the Second Veteran Cavalry, from Schuylerville, was found dead at the Pavillian Spring, in this Village, on Tuesday. His head and one arm were within the curb. It is said that he went with a pitcher to get some water, and it is supposed that while reaching down within the curb he was overpowered with the gas escaping from the spring and died immediately. Coroner Barrett was called and an inquest held. The jury found the facts substantially as above. He left his aunt's house with a pitcher about half-past six and was found dead in about fifteen minutes. An experiment was made at the request of the jury with a chicken, which was killed by holding it inside the curb for half a minute.

An American paper, the Army and Navy Journal, gives, in tabular from, a statement of volunteers furnished by all the free States, except California, and by Missouri and Kentucky, for the Union armies up to this time. The tables are made up from official returns. Sixteen free States and two slaves States have sent to the field 1,276,246 volunteers; of these 1,068,769 were three years' men. New York has furnished 222,836 volunteers, of which 39,121 were two years and 15,922 three months' men. Illinois has sent out 135,440 volunteers: Massachusetts 71,038. Kentucky has contributed 42, 908 men, and Missouri 37,947.

Foreign Trade of France.—According to the statistics of the foreign trade of France for the first eight months of the year, just published by the French Custom House, it appears that the value of imports into France, for the first eight months of 1863, was £61,140,000, against £58,580,000 in the corresponding period of 1852; and of the exports, £65,400,000, against £56,080,000. The progression is remarkable, and is nearly general, the most striking exception being a decrease of one-half in the importation of pig and manufactured iron. The export of refined sugar has largely increased.

From the following extract from a letter of Mr. Buchanan, M. P. P., published in the Spectator, we learn that he strenuously counsels the citizens of Hamilton to take the only steps that are likely to disarm the opposition, which the Bill for the relief of that city encountered in the Legislative Council during the recent session:

"The city has as its duty, now simply to do two things—1st. We must at once take means to get all the creditors to petition in favor of the Bill—2nd. We ought to make an assessment for 1863 of as much as will pay the first half year's interest under the Bill at 4 per cent. This would show good faith on our part, and it would also be satisfactory to the creditors to know that the assessment would always be levid so much in advance as to secure punctuality in payment in the worst times. Of course the amount could not be collected till the Bill passes without giving an undue advantage to the creditors who have judgment over the other."

Daring Conduct.—On one of the French Railway lines, a bridge over the river there gave way without any warning. A man who saw it fall ran along the railway to stop an advancing train. The engineer paid no attention to his warning signals. Seeing there was no other means of persuading him to stop, the man bravely laid himself down right across the rails, in the hope that, at least to prevent crushing him, it would be attempted to arrest the engine—and accordingly it was done, just in time to save the brave peasant and the entire train.

Accident.—We see by the Port Hope Canadian that a man named Redmond lost his life in that place by drowning, on the 2nd inst. It appears that he was intending to go to Kingston by the boat. But being told that in consequence of the inclemency of the weather the boat would not likely touch at the wharf, he started to catch the cars. It seems while he was hastening thither in the dark he stepped from the wharf into the water, and was drowned. The body was recovered.

The London Post of the 15th Oct. says: Messrs. G. Parr, J. Cæsar, R. Carpenter, T. Heyward, W. Caffyn, A. Clarke, T. Lockyer, G. Tarrant, J. Jackson, J. Anderson, R. C. Tinley and E. M. Grace—the twelve players who have been selected to combat the Australian cricketers on behalf of the cricketers of Great Britain—went on board the Great Britain steamship (of the Black Ball and Eagle line) yesterday, and will leave the Mersey for Melbourne this (Thursday) morning.

5-20 Bonds.—The outstanding five-twenty bonds upon which interest was due Monday, amount to $335,230,100. Of this amount there were issued previous to May, 1863, $64,296,300, upon which the whole six months interest is due. Upon the balance the interest is paid only from the date of the subscription to the loan. It is estimated that about six millions was to be paid Monday as interest.

Excise Returns.—Excise returns show $38,365 duty paid on 2,944,500 gallons of malt liquor, manfactured in the first six months of 1863, against $35,564 duty paid on 3,856,607 gallons in the first six months of 1862; and $314,936 duty paid on 2,106,243 gallons proof spirits in the first six months of 1863, against $135,308 on 2,256,136 gallons in the first six months of 1862.

Dangerous Navigation.—The Russians are placing torpedoes in the Baltic, and have issued notices to navigators to observe certain marks in order to avoid them, flying blue flags on the danger posts. Some accidents have already occurred, and a short time since a Dutch vessel was destroyed by one of these exploding machines, which had been inadvertantly left in the fairway since the last war.

Law Students.—We see by the Globe of last week, that thirty-two presented themselves for examination for admission upon the books of the Law Society, and out of this number only nineteen were successful. Getting more particular in Toronto, it is time.

The Government has been uniformly successful in the late elections, in the United States. New York, which last Fall elected a Democratic Governor by a large majority, has given "Government" by over 30,000 this Fall. The war seems popular in New York.

More Gold.—Gold mines have been discovered in Arizona five hundred and sixteen miles from Santa Fe, in mountain placers. The location is ninety miles North of the overland mail route to California. The advice of old diggers, however is, 'Don't go till Spring."

The French Army.—An official return shows that the French army, on a peace footing, numbers 412,000 men and 80,000 horses. By calling on the reserves it can be swelled to 700,000.

We ought to have mentioned in our last that Mr. Foley had written a letter denying that Mr. Brydges, directly or indirectly, endeavored to induce him to vote against the Government, on Galt's motion. Justice to whom due.

Peterborough Skating Rink.—We have been requested to intimate, that a general meeting of the Club, will be held at Cassie's, this evening, to transact business of much importance to skaters. We hope there will be a large attendance.

The Annual Meeting of the St. Andrew's Society, for the Election of Officers, &c., takes place this evening, at the American Hotel, at 8 o'clock.

Lakefield has lately been visited by quite a number of fires, supposed to be the work of incendiaries. A couple of young men, named John Stitt and Samuel Cotton were arrested there on Saturday last, and lodged in Jail here on the charge of incendiarism.

In Paris the ladies carry canes; in London they smoke cigars. This will change the formulas of the exquisites. Adolphus Augustus will say to his inamorata Maria Louisa Eugenia. "Shall I take your stick?" and Henry will say to his Anna, "Will you smoke my Havana?" Singular how things will work.

SUPPORT YOUR LOCAL PAPERS.

We commend to the attentive perusal of the public the following anecdotes; they will be found instructive and perhaps interesting.

Speaking of the value of local newspapers a capitalist, formerly a poor mechanic, says:

"I once saw in a local paper an article pointing out the advantages to be gained and the money made out of a new invention, by which, it said, any man, with a small capital and an eye to business and a moderate share of shrewdness could in a few years realize a handsome sum in cash. I greedily swallowed the bait, and on turning the project over in my mind after I had been shown the secret, I decided to try it. The result has justified the opinion I had formed; I went in to win, and have made my fortune.

I am not much of a reading man, and it was by the merest accident I took the fit that time. I now subscribe for all the local papers without regard to politics—and read them too; I have seen the wisdom of it in more cases than the one above related."

Another, a merchant, writes:—

"When I first began in the world, many years ago, I bought at a wholesale dry goods auction in a distant city, among many other things, a gross of very peculiar odd fellows buttons; nobody wanted them and they were knocked down to me for the small sum of twenty-five cents. When I returned home and marked my goods, thinks I, these may lie on my hand a long time, one set perhaps will be as much as I will sell in a year; I accordingly took out a half a dozen, and marked them thirty-seven and a-half cents a set, and put them in the show case.

I had little much faith at that time of advertising, but, as it is the custom in the country now-a-days when a merchant gets in new goods, I drew up and sent to one of the town newspapers the usual stereotyped—"New Dry Goods!" "Gents' Regalias, &c., &c., and added,—also, a novel style of 'Odd Fellows Buttons.' The very day the paper came out, in walked a gentleman and asked to see the buttons advertised. I observed, he admired, thought them uncommonly pretty for the money, and ended by taking two sets. Now, said I, I will reduce the price, as I can scarce than paid for the whole gross. My clerk said no, if you alter the price people will think them of little value, and the first purchaser will say you cheated him. Be it so said I, it can't be helped now, and very likely there will be no more asked for. But I soon had reason to change my mind; in came another, and another, who had seen and been accosted by the advertisement, and in a few days my buttons were all gone and I had cleared, just $6.75.

This is an extreme case of profit, but it will serve as an illustration.

I do not pretend to uphold the philosophy of advertising for the purpose of hoodwinking the public into giving more than an article is worth. I quote the above because it was the first thing that opened my eyes to the astonishing result of advertising, and I was taught a lesson by the transaction that I have never forgotten; it is this—if you had anything to sell, advertise, it will benefit yourself, enable you to get rid of unsalable goods, and be a means of supporting your local papers."

A speculator tells his experience; he says:

"I never was much of a newspaper reader; I hate politics, and I seldom could see anything else in them that came in my way; consequently I hardly ever looked at one. Now, it is different; I eagerly read every one I can get hold of, and I will tell you how it was brought about.

One day, I was idly turning over the pages of a village paper, when my eye lighted on a heading in flaming capitals,—"Auction Sale of Farm Lots on Reasonable Terms, &c." This announcement did not interest me particularly at the time, but, as the sale was to come off that day, and I had nothing better to do, I attended through curiosity, but without the remotest idea of purchasing. The bidding commenced; and in an hour or so I found myself the buyer, of what to me, after I had seen them, appeared to be a dozen worthless uncultivating, valueless little bits of land. I was first, however, there was no getting out of it, and I reluctantly paid the required proportion of the money down and gave a mortgage according to the terms of the sale for the balance. I left that town the next day in disgust. About three months after this occurrence, as near as I can recollect, I received a letter, asking me what I would take for one of the lots, naming the one desired. I wrote back at once requiring just double what I gave. The next post brought me an answer accepting my terms, and offering to take the adjoining one at the same price. Hold, not so fast, says I to myself? I will see. I did see, and I not only sold another for three times what I gave but before six months expired I had disposed of all but two, obtaining for these three, four and in one case nearly six times what I had originally gave.

I have now been at this business for years and I have made more money out of town lots and wild lands in that time than I did during the whole of the rest of my life at merchandizing, milling and farming. At present I am the owner of lots in a dozen different towns and villages, and I have my eye on others.

My plan is, when I go to a place, I ask for and read the local papers, and by doing so I often pick up a cheap piece of land or a few town lots.

As a general rule, I find that whenever people want to sell they are usually hard up and that is the time for me to buy. If I fancy a lot and go to the owner he will ask twice or thrice what the land is worth; therefore, I say, watch your chance. Some people turn up their noses at this kind of property. I have seen the time when I did so myself; I don't now, nor do I care much where the lots are situated. Land will not run away, and nobody can even guess whose may be even the most valuable at the next turn of the wheel of fortune. My advice is, whenever you can get a good opportunity, particularly if the proprietor is pressed very much for money, and you have a little to spare, invest, if it is only to the extent of a few hundred dollars. My word for it, if you do so, with judgment and prudence, you will never have cause to regret. You may sometimes perhaps have to wait a year, five years or even ten as I did once; results are never immediate; you must be patient in speculation; but the demand is sure to come, and the profit with it.

All my good luck was thrown in my way—in a measure forced upon me—by reading a local paper. I now subscribe for several. I hear there is to be a new one soon. I will take that too, for I candidly believe, as I have found it out myself, that sometimes a man may discover a road to wealth—not hit upon before—by reading the local papers."

We could multiply examples ad libitum if necessary, but these few will suffice to show the benefit to be gained by reading and advertising.

If the foregoing stories are found worthy of notice, we have nothing to add, further than to respectfully ask you, dear reader, and the inhabitants of our town and neighborhood, to support your local papers.

The Montreal Gazette is anxious to ascertain how much has been expended upon newspapers by the ministers who succeeded the Coalition. It suggests that the whole question should be referred to a Committee of the House, "and a return made of the sums of public money which have been paid since the Union, to each newspapers in the Province for advertising." By all means let the enquiry be instituted. The more searching it is, the more satisfactory will it be to the freinds of the two cabinets of which Mr. Sandfield Macdonald has been premier. By way of whetting the public curiosity upon this subject, and showing how grateful the present opposition ought to be for the Gazette's proposal the Provincial Secretary, 1862, the newspapers and advertising, was not less than $6,497. Of this amount however, $6,116 were paid previous to the expulsion of the Coalition from office! From which it follows that of the $6,497 which were paid for these items last year, the Provicial Secretary of the reform administration paid not more than $381. We trust that the Gazette will push forward its investigation.—Quebec Mercury.

THE ORIGINAL EMANCIPATION PROCLAMATION.

(From the, Chicago Journal, 28th)

In response to a personal application, on behalf of the ladies, made by Hon. I. N. Arnold, during a recent visit to Washington, President Lincoln has sent to the ladies of the Sanitary Fair, now in progress in this city the original manuscript draft of the Emancipation proclamation. It was received this morning, and is accompanied by two fellow letter:—

Executive Mansion,
Washington, Oct. 26, 1863.

To the Ladies having in charge the Northwestern Fair for the Sanitary Commission Chicago, Illinois:—

According to the request made in your behalf, the original draft of the Emancipation proclamation is herewith inclosed. The formal words at the top, and the countersign, except the signature, you perceive are not in my hand writing. They were written at the state Department; by whom I have not. The printed part was cut from a copy of preliminary proclamation, and pasted on, simply to save writing.

I had some desire to retain the paper myself, if it shall contribute to the success of the soldiers, that gift be theirs.

Your obedient servant,
A. Lincoln.

The proceeds of the sale of the paper during the Fair, will go for the benefit of the soldiers. We hope the Chicago Historical Society will not lay up a large fund, with the design of erecting a building for the archives of that Society.

McGEE'S REQUIEM.

Not a sound was heard, not a word was said
As first we his treason discovered, [paid,
And little we thought of the price that was
To purchase him whole and dishonored.

We buried the thought he a traitor could be,
Kind wishes to him we were turning;
And hoped, in time, again we should see
Him joined to his friends of the morning.

But half of our heavy task was done,
When Galt told the hour for retiring;
Then with woods'ous hate the purchased one
At his friends 'gan sullenly firing.

Cringing and cursing, he crawled over
From the field where his fame arose;
With the slimy kiss of a snake-like lover
He licked the feet of his foes.

Degraded and bought thus McGee has gone,
And Brown is there to applaud him,
While a spectral hand is urging him on,
To Cockburn, who "ratted" before him.
—Grumbler.

Varieties.

Dont take too much interest in the affairs of your neighbors. Six per cent will do.

Never speak of a man's virtues before his face, nor of his vices behind his back.

A lady refuses to wear a watch in her bosom, because it has hands.

"I don't remember having seen you before," as the lawyer said to his conscience.

Why should a quill never be used in inditing secret matters?—because it is apt to split.

Anything Midas touched turned into gold. In these days, touch men with gold and they'll turn into anything.

"Sonny, does your father take a paper?" "Yes, sir, two of them. One of them belongs to Mr. Smith and the other to Mr. Thompson. I hooks them both off the stoop."

BOOTH, the great tragedian, had his nose broken. A lady once said to him, "I like your acting, but I cannot get over your nose." "No wonder," replied he, "the bridge is gone."

A REPROOF.—A plain spoken woman recently visited another woman, and said to her: "How do you manage to amuse yourself?" "Amuse!" said the other, "don't you know that I have my house-work to do?" "Yes, I see that you have it to do, but as it is never done I conclude that you must have some other means of passing your time."

HAPPINESS.—This looking forward for enjoyment don't pay. For what we know of it, we would as soon chase butterflies for a living, or bottle up moonshine for cloudy nights. The only true happiness is to take the drops of happiness, as Nature gives them to us every day of our lives; the boy must learn to be happy when he is plodding over his lessons; the apprentice when he is learning his trade; the merchant while he is making his fortunate. If he fails to learn this art he will be sure to miss his enjoyment when he gains what he sighs for.

A well-known scientific man in New York city, some years since, found himself annoyed by boys who rang his door bell and ran away. So the doctor ground out a heavy charge of electricity, tied a wire to the door bell knob, and sat down to wait. Shortly there was a horrible howl, a bumping and a falling backward down the front steps. The boy was half murdered by the shock, and the doctors troubles from that source were definitely ended.

A Hibernian went into a provision store and bargained for a beef shin, which the vendor recommended as an excellent article for soup, and offered to give a receipt for making it. After the meat was weighed he took it and departed, but recollecting that he had forgotten the receipt, he sat down his basket and went back for the document. Coming out again he saw a big dog hurrying off with the beef. He cried out: "Come back! ye thafe of the world. The mate'll do ye no good at all, for I've got the resate for the soup in me pocket."

"John," inquired a dominie of a hopeful pupil, "what is a nailer?" "A man who makes nails," replied hopeful, quite ready. "Very good. Now, what is a tailor?" "One who makes tails," was the equally quick reply. "Oh, you blockhead," said the dominie, biting his lips; "a man who makes tails; did you ever?" "To be sure," said the hopeful; "if the tailor didn't put tails to the coats he made, they would all be jackets!" "Eh!—ah! well! to be sure, I didn't think of that. Beats Watt-sly's logic. Go the head of the class, John; you'll be a member of parliament some day."

RATHER FAST, BUT TOO MUCH SACRIFICE!—A little boy being told by one his fast playmates that she would have nothing more to do with him if he did not commence to shave, resolved one day to make the sacrifice of loosing his beard! Retiring to his parents dressing case, he procured the monstrous instrument by which the sacrifice was to be executed. Closing himself up in his own room, and not having a mirror at hand, commenced an almost fruitless search over his smooth little face, until, at length, coming near his eye-brows his little fingers found the treasure. Laying to work earnestly he backed and cut at himself until his forehead presented a frightful spectacle, with the blood oozing from the cuts he had inflicted. Gathering up a few of the scattered hairs, which he took great care to safe, he folded them up in a corner of handkerchief, resolved to present it to his playmate as a trophy of the sacrifice!

HOW THE QUARREL AROSE.—There resided in a Western town a certain Dr. T——, who became very much enamored with a dark eyed maiden lady, who resided in the same town. In due course of time, they were engaged to be married. The Dr. was a strong Presbyterian; his lady-love a strong and decided Baptist. They were one evening talking of their approaching nuptials, when the doctor remarked:

"I am thinking, my dear of two events which I shall remember among the happiest of my life."

"And what may these be doctor?" asked the lady.

"The one is, the hour when I can call you wife; the other, at our first born's baptismal."

"What, sprinkled?"

"Yes, my dear."

"Never a child of mine shall be sprinkled."

"Every child of mine shall be sprinkled."

"They shall, eh?"

"Yes, my love."

"Well, Sir, I can tell you that your babies won't be my babies. So, good night Sir."

The sequel of this is, the doctor never married, and the lady is an old maid.

Poetry.

THE WRECK.

At midnight, when the mystic moon
In lambent splendor bathed the land,
I wandered where the waves had strewn
A mighty wreck upon the strand.
Her oaken beams, and bolts of steel
With rust and seaweed were embossed,
And many a rose had bloomed and died
Since she upon our coast was tossed.

About her grave the solemn sea
Rolled to and fro with ceaseless moan,
And every billow on the beach
Seemed bursting with a human groan!
The moon and stars looked coldly down,
And colder doubts oppressed my brain.
I thought the glorious sun in heaven
Would never gleam on earth again!

Among the weird and jagged pines
That shook their arms above the surge,
The dark and deadly winds of night
Prolonged the billow's ceaseless dirge
And on the sea, and on the land,
All things bewailed the vessel's doom,
And e'en my soul's profoundest deep
Re-echoed with the billow's boom.

"Ah, thus," I thought, "along the shore
Of life's illusive, stormy sea,
Full many a fair and stately bark
Lies stranded 'neath a willow tree.
And many a mourner weeping there,
Feels ghastly doubts oppress his brain
Lest he should never more behold
The rising of that sun again.

Miscellaneous News.

PAUL ALLEN'S WIFE,
AND
HOW HE FOUND HER.
(Concluded.)

It was the work of an instant to wrap her again in the blankets, and rush to the door communicating with the house, and shout for the Doctor, again and again, till he heard his bedroom-door open. Then hastily returning, he raised the body as carefully and gently as if it had been a new-born infant, and bore it towards the house.

The surprise and consternation of the Doctor can not be imagined. But all other considerations yielded at once to the efforts to foster the spark of returning animation. She was placed in bed, and slowly and gradually the heart gathered strength, and the breathing became fully established, and she woke to consciousness. During that whole day Allen never left her side. He could not be induced even to eat, but all day long he held in the one hand of the reviving girl, while with the other he felt the slowly-increasing pulse, or fanned the air to her feeble breath, or administered the cordials to her lips. The infatuation of the night before had increased rather than diminished by this singular resuscitation. He seemed to feel and claim a sort of property in Maud, and repelled every attempt even of the Doctor's wife to take his place.

Toward evening life seemed to have become perfectly re-established. Then only did Allen leave his post, when he had breathed a hearty thanksgiving to Heaven for the life he had been the instrument in sparing. But every day thereafter he passed every spare moment by her side, never tiring of talking to her of her singular escape. And Maud repaid him with many a languid smile. She was deeply sensible of her escape from a death of the most horrible form, though at first she could hardly feel glad at being restored to life.

But the state in which she had lain for three days seemed to have produced a favorable effect upon her former disease, which now rapidly gave way, so that in a few weeks she was restored to perfect health. In the mean time, her father had been informed of the facts; but the knowledge of them was carefully concealed from all except those who, as we have already seen, were acquainted with them. Mr. Mansfield sold all his property immediately after her full recovery, and removed to more distant parts, aware that the restoration of his daughter's health would only add new causes for scandal among all those who knew them. They might say the death and burial of Maud was all fictitious, and add new malice to their cruel scorn.

From that day Paul Allen was changed. Diligent and faithful as ever in his studies and duties, and assiduous as ever in preparing himself for the pursuit of his profession, he yet lived a dreamy, absent life. Every night till a late hour he would sit, silent and thoughtful, with Hudson and Foshay in the office, taking no part in their cheerful or jocular conversation, and rarely aroused to say a word unless they spoke of Maud Mansfield and their singular night's excursion. Then he would tell of the calm, sweet look that stole out from her eyes in the dim light into his very soul, and watched him with its glamour. His companions respected his mood, and never spoke lightly of it, or mentioned the subject unless they wished to rouse him to converse, and then it was always the same almost unvaried dream of those witching eyes. The memory of Maud had become an idol in the innermost shrine of his heart, that he seemed to be worshipping day and night.

The next spring he took his decree. In his examination he stood—if I may use the expression—head and shoulders above all the class. He was a man of noble intellect and profound study and thought, so that it was often matter of controversy with Hudson and Foshay whether the memory of Maud Mansfield had not produced a general rather than particular effect upon his mind, and whether, when they imagined him thinking of her, he was not in reality studying out some of the problems of medicine. The only thing worthy of remark in his graduation was the subject of his thesis—"DEATH." When it was announced, all anticipated a fanciful or metaphysical essay, but they were disappointed. It was a profound and masterly inquiry into its causes—the changes in the system which produce it, and the changes it produces—and the probable and certain signs of its having actually taken place.

The last evening the three companions spent together in Doctor W——'s office was occupied by Hudson and Foshay in discussing their plans for the future. Allen, as usual, took no part in the conversation. Midnight drew on and passed. It was near three o'clock before they rose to depart.

"Well, Paul," said Foshay, "tell us, before you go, where we shall next hear of Doctor Paul Allen?"

"I shall fill my place somewhere," he replied, "as indifferently well as here. It matters little where."

"But tell us, at least," said Hudson, taking his hand and pressing it in a warm and friendly grasp, "will you never cease dreaming of those eyes, Paul?"

"Men are not always what they seem, George," he answered extending his other hand to Foshay. "The time will come when we will know each other better than we do even now. The events of that night were not without their design, and are working it out in my history. I shall never forget her—and, more than that, I am firmly persuaded I shall see her again. If it had not been that belief, your friend, Paul Allen, would have been before this in a madhouse.

* * * * * * *

The scene changes. Old things have passed away. Seven years have gone by and left their mark upon all the persons of our story. All these years has Paul Allen been waiting for business in a large city in the West. He might as well have been still in Dr. W——'s office in New York. He made no effort to introduce himself to the people. He formed no acquaintances, and no one sought him. His reserved and taciturn disposition repelled any approach from strangers, and with the exception of an occasional case of a poor family, or accidental summons to one of a better class, in which he made no effort to install himself, he was living on the same dreamy life in which we left him years ago. The only change was in his personal appearance. Instead of a careless indifference in dress, he was almost a model of style in everything he wore, and this alone made him an entirely different man. His office was near the outskirts of the city, which were rapidly building up with large and elegant houses, but this made no difference in his success.

He was standing in his office door one afternoon, just dismissing a poor patient upon whom he had performed some trifling operations. Just at this moment a travelling-carriage, drawn by a pair of powerful horses, came dashing furiously down the street. The driver had been thrown off some distance back, and the animals, mad with fright, were running wildly and kicking fearfully at every leap. The inmates of the carriage—a gentleman of mature age and a very beautiful lady, evidently his junior by very many years—seemed palsied with terror.

As they came in front of the office a wheel gave way, and the carriage was thrown over and over and dashed in pieces, while, with a wild snort and one mad plunge, the horses disengaged themselves and disappeared down the street. The gentleman and lady were borne into the office, and the lady was laid upon the sofa. It soon appeared that the former was but slightly injured, and he soon revived. But the lady seemed dead. There was no pulse at her wrist, and the heart had ceased to beat. She did not breathe. Her hair fell loosely and uncoufined over a neck of marble whiteness. Her eyes were open—her large, lustrous blue eyes—and they alone looked like life.

Paul took from his pocket a small phial, and gently parting the lips with his finger, carefully let fall a single drop upon her tongue. A moment he stood and watched its effect in silence. A slight and scarcely perceptible shudder seemed to pass over her, and was gone.

"Another!" said he, as if speaking to himself, and with equal care as at first, he let another drop fall upon her lips. There was another shudder—more powerful than the first—almost a convulsion—a flush of light seemed to flash to her eyes—her brow contracted—and she turned her eyes full upon the Doctor.

He started, while a thrill of almost pain shot to his heart, and in an instant he had traveled back the seven past years of his life he was standing in Dr. W——'s dissecting-room, drinking into his soul the dim but strange light that flowed out from the eyes of Maud Mansfield. It would be a mistake to suppose that for all these years he had been thinking of nothing else but her. It was no such thing. The truth is, he had almost forgotten her, although the events of that night had left a sobering and serious influence upon his mind which he had never made an effort to rid himself of, though there were times when, as if to keep her image from fading utterly away, the same old glamour would gather about him and he would sit till after midnight thinking of her and her strange witchery upon him. But that one glance from the eyes of this stranger had in an instant revived the very feelings he had at this time. He looked again, and the expression was gone. It could not be the same, he told himself. Could he have forgotten her very face?

"She lives!" said he again, musingly, as he laid his finger on her lips.

"You are badly injured," he then said to her. "The gentleman is well. You must be very quiet. You will be well cared for. Now, lie very still."

There was a long, and apparently deep cut in her temple, which he dressed, and applied lotions to her injuries. She looked ten thousand thanks, and again that peculiar expression. Paul turned away to her companion.

"She is safe," he said.

"It was a terrible accident," said the stranger.

"It is wonderful how much it takes to kill sometimes," said Allen.

"And sometimes a very little does the work," replied the stranger.

"True," said Paul; "but then that very little becomes a powerful cause, as when the point of a fed enters by the eye, and pierces through the thin, wafer-like bone, into the brain."

"And I," said the other, "have somewhere seen an account of a man who had the whole breech of a musket driven through the roof of his mouth into his brain, and he recovered."

"Life is a strange phenomenon," said Paul. "We live our days out in spite of all accidents, and when the time comes we go out with a breath. Till that time comes we can bear mutilation—injuries of the most fearful kind. The pestilence passes by us and leaves us unharmed. We may seek death in vain, like the wandering Jew. The poison we may drink is rejected, and we are uninjured. All things are harmless. But when the time arrives, the mote in the air 'chokes us—our food becomes the poison that generates disease. A single drop of the bane we drank before and found innocuous, is laden with death. We must yield, in spite of remedy or resistance."

"You are a fatalist," said the stranger.

"Who is not," he replied; "who believes in an infinite God? one whose knowledge is boundless, and who has the supreme and sole control of the universe he has made? It would be charging him with finite weakness to suppose that he left his creation to follow mere chance. He either impressed upon the universe some determinate law that governs life and fixes the period of its duration, or else—what is incontrovertibly true—he watches over us with his all-seeing eye, and measures out our days with a span, and when that span is passed, says 'Return to earth!' and we die."

"Why, then," asked the stranger, "must we employ means to prolong life?"

"Why eat to sustain it?" inquired Paul, in return. "Because, if life is to be lengthened, the decree is that the means must be used. You saw me apply a single drop to the lady's lips. It produced an effect. But had I stopped there she never would have awakened. It was necessary that so much should be used. One drop more would have probably extinguished the spark. Now she lives."

He took her hand in his, and laid his finger on her pulse.

"Reaction is coming on," he said.

Then taking from his pocket another phial, and letting a drop fall into a glass, and adding a little water, he gave it to her, saying.

"Drink this and go to sleep."

A quiet seemed almost instantly to steal over her. Objects faded gradually, yet rapidly from her sight, became dim, and disappeared. Her eyelids closed gently over those lustrous orbs—and she was asleep.

"That is not death, though so very like," said Paul, as he stood for a moment gazing with a smile upon that face, the most beautiful he had ever beheld. He was thinking of Maud. Now, as the lady lay wrapt in slumber, there came back to him the memory of her features and form as he looked that night on the table in the dissecting-room; and though he could see much of the same look now—enough to call back such memories—yet, after all, it was not entirely the same. Could a few years of added age make the change? He was bewildered. The old gentleman, her companion, was certainly not Henry Mansfield, her father.

He asked him his name, and he said it was Anderson.

"And this is your daughter?" asked Allen.

"No. She is my sister's child. Her mother has been dead many years, and her father died about a month since."

"And I may ask her name said Allen with some hesitation.

"It is Mansfield," replied the other.

"Maud!" exclaimed Allen, turning to look again at her. Her eyes were half open, and there streamed out from them the same calm, sweet look that had so long age bound him with a spell he could not break. He could doubt no longer; and again he was lost in dreams far wilder than before.

It was sunset when she woke. She was then carefully removed to the nearest hotel, and it was several days before she was able to resume her journey. On these days Paul was sitting by her, watching every look and motion, to catch one of those glances whose memory was now lingering about his heart with ten-fold more fondness than ever before, when she noticed his gaze, and suddenly exclaimed,

"I have seen you before, Doctor! Where can it have been? It seems as if it was in just such circumstances as the present."

Paul made no reply, while she was looking with a half-bewildered stare in his face.

"Can it be possible," she at length said, with a slight shudder, as if the light were breaking in upon her recollection—"can it be Mr. Allen?"

"It is," said Paul; "the same who took you from the grave, and watched your recovery so many years ago."

"And now I owe you my life the second time," said Maud.

Six months from that time Hudson and Foshay received each a letter from Paul Allen, which, upon being compared, were discovered to be precise copies of each other. Part of them ran thus:

"Three weeks from this date I shall be in New York to be married, and then I will answer your last question when we separated, for I shall then cease to dream of Maud Mansfield's eyes, and not till then. A vision of beauty and love has entered into my heart, and I have no place for aught else there. I have lived here six years waiting for business in vain. I am not discouraged, for that I never was. But I shall "throw physic to the dogs," convinced that I have found a panacea for all diseases that will not get well without medicine. Let me assure you there is no remedy for incurable diseases so efficacious as twelve hours' burial."

The two friends were sorely puzzled with the contents of their letter; but all was explained when, three weeks afterward, in the queenly beauty of Paul Allen's wife they recognized the features of the girl they had stolen from the grave on that winter's night seven years before.

Russian Great Guns and Armor.

TRIAL OF STEEL GUNS AND ARMOR PLATES IN ST. PETERSBURGH.

On Wednesday the 17th of October, N. S., further trials took place at St. Petersburgh with the experimental nine-inch rifled cast-steel gun. The gun is of solid cast steel, made by Krupp, and throws a three hundred pound shell, or a four hundred and fifty pound solid shot. The result of previous experiments with this gun led the Russian government to order fifty of them, which are now in course of delivery. The principal objects of the experiments of the 17th instant were to ascertain the best description of shell, and to test the quality of armor plates supplied by Messrs. John Brown & Co, of Sheffield.

First, a series of cast iron shells, three hundred pounds each, were fired at different ranges, and then shells made by Krupp were fired at the four and one half inch plates. The first shell, of hard cast steel, was twenty-two and one-half inches long (two and a half diameters), with a flat end four inches in diameter. Fired with fifty pounds of powder at seven hundred feet distance, it passed through the plate, oak and teak backing, and broke into many pieces, although filled with sand only. The second and third shells were also of Krupp's steel, the same length but with an and one-half second sands. These shells pierced plates, wood &c., and also went to pieces, although only filled with sand. The fourth shell was by M. Petaleff, of puddled steel, on Adeukoff's system, the same dimensions as second and third, and went through iron, teak, &c., but was only bulged up from nine second to twelve seconds, and the end flattened; not a single crack being visible in the shell. The fifth shell, the same as the fourth, passed through iron, teak and the second target and went at least a mile beyond. The sixth and seventh shells were from Krupp, and were charged with powder; they were quite flat ended, nine seconds diameter. One exploded in the plate, the other in the wood. The eight and ninth shells were of cast iron, and although they passed through the plates, were of course destroyed. Dreuing prevented further trials which will yet be made on the same plate. The results on the plate were highly satisfactory. In a space of four minutes and five seconds by three minutes and six second eight holes were made without any crack of the slightest description and the marine officers present were highly satisfied because they are obtaining four thousand tons of plates from Messrs John Brown & Co. for their different ships,

The English Government would do well to note the progress the Russians are making in gunnery. Cast steel guns are decidedly before any yet produced in England or any other metal. The nine second gun of Krupp has been fired with three hundred pound shells and fifty pounds of powder about seventy times without any flaw, and the Russian Government will shortly be in a position to obtain in St. Petersburg a large supply of cast steel guns, made from Russians' on Aboukoff's system, which is very near the same as Krupp's.

RAW HIDE.—How few persons know the value of raw hides! It seems almost strange to see them sell all their "deacon" skins for the small sum of about thirty or forty cents. Take a strip of tanned raw hide an inch wide, and a horse can hardly break it by pulling back—two of them he cannot break any way. Cut into narrow strips and shave the hair of them with a sharp knife, to use for big strings, the strings will outwear two sets of bags. Farmers know how perplexing it is to land bags and have them returned minus strings. It will outlast hoop iron (common) in any shape, and is stronger. It is good to wrap around a broken thill—better than iron. Two sets of raw hide halters will last a man's life time—if he don't live too long. In some places the Spaniards use raw hide log chain's to work their cattle with, cut into narrow stripes and twisted together hawser fashion. It can be tanned so that it will be soft and pliable, like harness leather.

A letter from Washington says.—On looking at the files of claims presented by widows for pensions, we find that on Oct. 24 the claims filed numbered 34,733. The arrivals of claims are about 100 per day. The chief clerk says there are now on file over 37,000 claims of widows and 88,000 claims of invalids. Here then are represented 72,000 persons besides their children, amounting no doubt to 150,000—making an aggregate at a low estimate of 235,000 saddened for life as the result of this war. A farther investigation will no doubt swell the list to 1,000,000.

MOVEMENTS OF GEN. FOREY.—Marshal Forey returned from his visit to Niagara Falls day before yesterday, at four o'clock in the afternoon, will the impression that no spectacle in the world is equal to that he had just seen. He was agreeably surprised with the fertility of our soil the industry of our people and the signs of high prosperity and welfare. The General regrets very much not to be able to remain any longer among us, so as to become better acquainted with our country and institutions. He would have been glad to present his respects to Mr. Lincoln, but to pay a visit to the army of the Potomac, the value and efficiency of which he highly praises. But his time of so limited that he is compelled to postpone the pleasure he had promised to himself, had he been allowed to follow his own impulse. Notwithstanding a slight indisposition, Marshal Forey received yesterday a few friends, and spent the balance of the day in writing his correspondence. His intention is to leave New York to-morrow morning by the frigate Panama, which is to stop at Lisbon, Portugal, on he way to Havre.—N. Y. Herald.

BOOTS CURE.—One or two of our business men have lately taken in exchange half a dozen pieces, which are supposed to be some of the coins issued by the absconded schoolmaster of the Penitentiary. The pieces

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 19TH, 1863.

PREMIUMS.

We want new subscribers, and hundreds in Peterborough County who ought to take a paper, do not. To induce parties to assist in increasing the circulation of the EXAMINER we offer the following Premiums:

To any one sending us 6 subscribers we will give KINGLAKE'S CRIMEAN WAR; 10 subscribers, ALCOCK'S TYCOON CAPITAL; 20 subscribers, WEBSTER'S DICTIONARY; thirty subscribers, WORCESTER'S LARGEST DICTIONARY, &c.

To every subscriber paying in advance we will, for an extra 75 cents, furnish Madame Demorest's Mirror of Fashion, and quarterly Journal du Grande Mode, each number of which contains large and magnificent Fashion Plates, splendid illustrations of all the fashionable and Paris novelties, for ladies' and Children's Dress, useful information, and the four life-size Patterns, cut ready for use, etc., etc. It should be remembered that each yearly subscriber to Mme. Demorest's Mirror of Fashions is entitled to the selection of 50 cents' worth of extra patterns, or a copy of Mme. Demorest's System for cutting Children's Dresses, or for 50 cents more, the Ladies' System. That is, for 75 cents, we will give to every subscriber of the EXAMINER paying in advance, $1.50 worth. More than this, we will likewise pay the American postage, which is no small item. Those who have paid in advance are entitled to the same privilage. Or, if farmers prefer, they can, instead of the above journal, have Judd's celebrated American Agriculturist, which ought to be in the hands of every farmer. Names should be sent in at once.

The party sending a club can, if he choose, select any other work of a similar value. The cash must in every instance accompany the order.

A SPECIAL PREMIUM will be given to the party sending in the largest number of subscribers by the 1st of March. Names can be sent in at any time, and will be credited as received.

MEXICAN CONQUEST.

The most startling and extraordinary event of the age is, undoubtedly, the conquest of Mexico by the French. It is, certainly, one of the most indefensible. There exists not a single plea to justify the high-handed conduct of the French. The occupation and seizure of a vast country like Mexico reals like doings of the middle ages, and not of the nineteenth century. It is like a second CORTEZ affair, but wants all the chivalric interest with which the achievements of the Spanish adventurer are invested. The French occupation of Mexico is altogether incompatable with the character, spirit and circumstances of the times that produced it. Most of the nations of Europe had long expressed themselves opposed to wars of aggression. The principle of non-intervention, though long a matter of discussion and doubt, had, it was thought, become practical law.

Mexico, it is admitted at the outset, was long subject to all the horrors and evils attendant upon a weak and disorganized state of government. But at the time of European interference, a better state of things prevailed than for years before. The constitutional government of JUAREZ was in power. It was making vast efforts to extricate the country from that blind, chaotic state into which the miseris and extravagance of its predecessors had plunged it. It had a strong opponent in the Church party which still struggled for the supremacy that had slipped from their hands. Bitter, intense hatred rankled between the two parties. JUAREZ, who has Indian blood in his veins, was looked down upon by those who boasted their descent from Castile or Arragon. The country, at the time of JUAREZ'S accession to power, was, literally, exhausted. In forty years it had had thirty-six forms of governments, and over seventy Presidents. The country was deeply in debt to British and French capitalists, and others, to whom the national resources had been hypothecated as security. All was in disorder. The new government found itself, however, willing altogether unable to restore things to anything like order at once. It may have been deficient in ability and energy in some respects; but it was certainly most anxious. It was, certainly too the best government that had appeared for a long time—entertaining higher ideas of its own responsibilities, and of its obligations to foreign powers than any other that had preceded it. Just at this time, when, from the peculiar and trying circumstances in which the country was placed, it might have reasonably looked for sympathy and consideration from the liberal powers, it was suddenly called upon by England, France and Spain, on the pain of instant war with three of the greatest nations in the world, to pay up the debts and answer for the crimes of its predecessors. By this the Mexican government was placed in an awkward situation. The alternative before it was not a pleasing or satisfactory one.

What the British government wished was merely the protection of the interests of its subjects. British subjects had, at various times, loaned the different Mexican governments large sums of money. The British Government would not, however, have interfered simply because some of its subjects chose to lend money to foreign powers; but when the Mexican government, in order to secure these advances, hypothecated the public revenues—the transaction was raised to the rank of an international obligation which our government may have been considered fairly entitled to enforce.

This put a new face upon the matter. It was presumable that Spain and France were influenced by the same motives in their action towards Mexico. Spain evidently was; but France, it is now certain, had an ulterior object in view from the very beginning. The immediate cause that led to the interference of the three powers referred to, was a resolution passed by the Mexican Congress in 1861, taking the whole of the revenues in its own hand, and suspending all payments to foreign claimants. This, certainly, looked like evidence of very bad faith. The Foreign Ministers remonstrated; but the Mexican government tried to defend the course it was pursuing, by pleading the embarrassed condition of the country and its inability to meet the liabilities against it. Instead the Mexican government was in great straits. But its creditors were clamorous for their money, and brought all the pressure they could bear upon the respective governments to aid them in obtaining what they considered justly their due. The conduct of England at this critical time was manly above board and honorable in the highest degree. Its subjects were the heaviest creditors; but it was forbearing, and its only aim was to make the Mexican rulers keep their faith and meet the obligations they had of their own accord incurred.

With France, the matter was far different. The sums due its subjects were comparatively small. The claims advanced were preposterous in the extreme. One Loan of $750,000 was magnified into a 15,000,000 debt. This debt the Mexicans repudiated, but offered to pay the original sum. The French, however, would not listen to this, Their aim was conquest; all their proceedings prove this to be the case. The aim of France was to get into motion an expedition of some kind; once in Mexico, the rest would follow. It succeeded. England and Spain went with it. England soon began to distrust one of its allies; but the wrong one. Spain was, naturally, the object of its suspicions. We say naturally, because of its former relations to Mexico, and because the French government had again and again declared that it would not interfere with the internal polity of the Mexican people—that its only object, like that of its allies, was to enforce the just claims of its subjects. The mask, however, soon dropped. When the expedition reached its destination, harmony was at an end. The conduct of the French plenipotentiaries soon disgusted the English and Spanish ones. The latter soon penetrated the sinister designs of their allies, and at once refused to have anything more to do with them. The English and Spanish forces were, consequently, withdrawn—leaving the French behind. This was what our Gallic friends wanted. The English and Spanish governments, anxious for peace, had all along been willing to enter into arrangements with the Mexicans; but the French, intent upon war and conquest, would not listen to such a thing. Hence, their, joy was unbounded when they found the coast clear for themselves. The English and Spaniards gone, hostilities soon commenced. The French forces were largely augmented; but they found the native forces not unworthy of their prowess, or willing easily to succumb. Indeed, in the first battles, the French were defeated—they were driven from Peubla by the Mexican General ZARAGOZA with terrible slaughter. This reverse undeceived the French, with regard to their ideas of an easy conquest. The Emperor despatched FOREY to take command. He was the man for the occasion. He took Peubla; but not until the defenders of it were slain, and the streets were piled with dead. The Mexicans exhibited a spirit of bravery worthy of the proudest nation and most heroic times. But the French were successful. JUAREZ could not cope with the restless energy of FOREY. Mexico was next taken. A provisional government was formed, composed of Generals ALMONTE and SALAS, and the Archbishop of Mexico, a protege of the French Empress. Then a council of notables was convened, made of renegades and returned exiles, which, after a few minutes deliberation, with a most wonderful unanimity, voted that Mexico should henceforth be an Empire under a Roman Catholic prince. It was also then and there decreed that the Imperial Crown should be tendered to the Archduke MAXIMILIAN, of Austria; and if declined it, it was humbly requested that NAPOLEON should select a Sovereign for the nation.

In the meantime, the French conqueror passed the most arbitrary measures; so arbitrary and tyrannical in their nature that the French government at once disannulled them.

Whether MAXIMILIAN will or will not accept the crown tendered him, is yet a problem to be solved. He appreciates the difficulties into which his acceptance would involve him, and wants certain guarantees which other powers do not seem willing to give him. But whether he or any one else becomes Emperor it is evident, under the circumstances, that Mexico cannot be looked upon as anything else but a French dependency. The French Emperor conquered it, and the French Emperor is just the man to retain what power he can get. That the conquest was deliberately planned from the beginning—developed and realised by the most unscrupulous deceit and most unblushing treachery, can hardly now be denied. With not a single plea to justify his most unwarrantable interference with the rights and liberties of an independent people, Napoleon's whole procedure from first to last has been one of most consummate duplicity, of unparalleled disregard to the most sacred promises and pledges, and of flagrant violation of every principle of international justice and honor.

That the conquest of Mexico, however odious in itself, may be of advantage to the inhabitants thereof, we expressed our belief in a previous article. Mexico wants rest, and such rest it certainly did not look like getting under its native rulers. The conquest may teach the conquered a lesson, if they again obtain their liberties. It will show that where dissensions exist there cannot be strength or permanency of existence.

The occupation of Mexico is the extinction of the Monroe doctrine, which our neighbors have for so many years admired and defended. That the United States look with no pleasant eye upon the doings of the French in the sister republic, can easily be gathered from the tone of their leading journals and statesmen. But situated as they now are, they have their hands full at home—and the French Emperor can pursue, develop and perfect his schemes at pleasure.

It is averred that he has declared that the Mexican Invasion would be the greatest event of his reign. So it may. The Westminster "REVIEW", pointedly says: — "In one sense the invasion of Russia may be pronounced the greatest event in the reign of the elder Napoleon. Certainly if unprincipled aggression carried out by the aid of unparalleled treachery, could forebode ultimate evil to the policy which planned it, we might expect Mexico prove the Moscow of the Second Empire."

REMOVAL.—Our friend Sim, has removed his Stove and Tin Shop, to the premises lately occupied by Mr S. White on Hunter Street. He has just received a number of the Steward Cooking Stoves, which are the best now made in Canada. See advertisement elsewhere.

EUROPEAN NEWS.

Much surprise was felt at the removal of General Rosecrans.

Furious gales had prevailed on the English coast.

ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY.

The Fifth Annual Meeting of the members of the St. Andrew's Society was held in the Committee Rooms, American Hotel, on the evening of Thursday the 12th inst., for the purpose of hearing the Secretary's Report of the proceedings of the Committee during the past year, and for the election of officers for the ensuing year, &c., &c.

The Report (which we cannot here give at length, but will advert to it again) showed that the Society had lent its aid in charity to every deserving case which had come before the notice of the Committee, and still showed a balance in the hands of the Treasurer of $41.91.

The following is a list of the officers elected for the ensuing year:—

A. Smith, Esq., President.
John Thomson, Esq., 1st Vice-President.
James Johnston, Esq., 2nd do.
J. J. Christie, Esq., 3rd do.
D. McDonald, Jr., Esq., Treasurer.
Charles Cameron, Esq., Secretary.
Rev. J. M. Roger,
Rev. John Gilmour,
Rev. J. S. Douglass, } Chaplains.

Executive Committee: Sheriff Hall, R.J. Dallas, W. A. Scott, Malcolm McKellar, R. Taylor, Chas. Fairbairn.

Town Committee: D. Sutherland, Robt. Romaine, John Bertram, A. Stewart, Alex. Graham, Robert Grant.

Committee for Township of Smith: Mich. Sanderson, James Jack, Thomas Tully, A. Millar.

Committee for Township of Otonabee: Jas. Millar, James Cameron.

Committee for Township of Monaghan: J. W. Gilmour.

Committee for Township of Ennismore: Thomas Telford.

"MERCURY" JOBS.

The Montreal GAZETTE lately charged the proprietor of the Quebec MERCURY with getting too much government "money," and to substantiate his statement he introduces as a witness the Peterborough REVIEW, which, with that peculiar modesty and diffidence that characterises it, asserts, "that evidence shall be procured to show that the MERCURY jobs have been quite as outrageous as those of Mr. FOOTE." Dear, dear! There is no disputing this. The REVIEW says so; and it, therefore, must be true. The "I say so; and, therefore, must be so" style of the above movement, is too strikingly characteristic to need comment. The MERCURY challenges investigation, and says to—"The accounts of the MERCURY with the Government are at the service of the Committee or any other competent body; and we challenge the Peterborough REVIEW to procure or produce the evidence for which it is willing to make itself responsible." That is the talk! Let the proof be procured and produced forthwith; or, if it cannot, let the amende honorable, by all means, be made.

AMERICAN NEWS.

CHATTANOOGA.—No movements of interest are reported to be taking place at Chattanooga. News from General Bragg's army up to the 12th instant had been received, and states that the dissatisfaction in the confederate army is no longer confined to the Kentucky and Tennessee troops. General Hardee has been assigned to the command of General Polk's corps, and he relieved General Longstreet, who, with sixteen thousand troops, part of whom are cavalry, has gone to East Tennessee. A considerable force of confederate cavalry has also gone to Iuka. The divisions of Generals Cheatham and Stewart have returned to General Bragg. He has now three full corps under him—those of General's Hardee, Breckenridge, and Buckner—and his force is said to be, by the lowest estimate, sixty thousand men. Thirty days furlough has been granted to the Georgia state troops to allow them to sow their wheat. Official dispatches from General Thomas at Chattanooga, and General Burnside in East Tennessee, dated Thursday night, represent the position of the latter as affording no ground for any anxiety on the part of the public.

Surgeon-General Hammond has been ordered to Nashville, Tenn., on a tour of inspection among the hospitals of the western armies. According to official reports there are 84,472 beds for patients in the United States general hospitals, and there are at present 40,192 persons under treatment.

The news from the Army of the Potomac is unimportant. Reports state that a considerable body of confederates shelled General Kilpatrick's camp near Stevensburg on Thursday, thus proving that some of the confederates are still on this side of the Rapidan. There is a great scarcity of tobacco and other necessary articles for the soldiers, in consequence of the extended prohibition against sutlers.

A writer in the Chronicle of the 18th inst. has conversed with an intelligent officer from Gen. Meade's headquarters, who slept the night before last beyond Culpepper. He reports the army in the highest spirits and ready for a fight. There was a prevalent rumor that but for some unexplained reasons not originating with General Meade, the army could have successfully pushed on rapidly after the brilliant affair of Rappahannock Station.

PROTECTION FIRE COMPANY.

At the adjourned Monthly Meeting of Protection Fire Company No. 1; of Peterboro', held in the Town Hall, on Tuesday, the 10th November, 1863, after routine business, the Company went into Committee for the purpose of electing Officers for the ensuing year—Mr. W. J. Robinson in the chair. Previous to the Election of Officers, the following resolutions were passed unanimously:

RESOLVED,—That it has been with the greatest surprise and indignation, that we, the members of Protection Fire Company, (many of whom are ratepayers) have viewed the conduct of the Town Council, and the temper in which they have approached on every occasion all matters of relating to our Company, especially on the occasion of the refusal to grant us a proper building to be used as an Engine House and Firman's Hall, and the little hope given for the erection of any such building; and we consider it our duty to let the ratepayers of this Town know that the said Town Council, while pretending to faithfully discharge their duties in protecting the property of the Town, at the same they have exposed to the frost and inclemency of the weather the most valuable of all Property, the Fire Engine and apparatus; and in consequence, the Engine is not in working order, and we will not hold ourselves responsible for the proper working of the Engine at any fire that may occur while it is left so exposed.

RESOLVED, — That the members of this Company desire to express their sincere thanks to those members of the Town Council who exercised themselves so energetically in behalf of the Fire Company, for the protection of the Town Property.

RESOLVED,—That the last two resolutions be published in the local papers.

The following persons were elected Officers of the Company for the ensuing year:

D. McNaughton, Captain,
L. York, 1st Lieutenant,
J. A. Wrighton, 2nd Lieutenant,
John O'Donnell, Secretary,
D. McDonald, jr., Treasurer,
W. H. Wrighton, 1st Branchman,
John Kincaid, 2nd Branchman,
George Mitchell, 3rd Branchman,
J. J. Lundy, Captain of Hose,
A. G. Gilbert, Lieutenant of Hose,
Axe-men, A. Comstock & J. Hamilton.

MR. HOLTON AND THE LOAN.

Some few days ago, the Opposition papers were ablaze with the news that MR. HOLTON had despatched MR. CASSELS to London to negotiate the loan authorised by Parliament, and that he had done so because he was afraid to go himself. Such a cock and bull story was rarely invented. The genius in whose prolific brain it originated certainly deserves a leather medal. It turns out that MR. HOLTON did not send MR. CASSELS, and that he does not intend to go himself. MR. CASSELS did go, however, but he went on business connected with the Institution of which he is manager. MR. HOLTON does not intend going; because there is no necessity of his doing so. He can raise the million and a half required without any trouble—without leaving the Province. The managers of leading monetary institutions here, representing both Canadian and Home capital, are quite willing and ready to furnish him with the amount wanted. This shows that they have both confidence in the country and in the government at the head of its affairs. MR. HOLTON has, therefore, been enabled to do, in an honorable, straightforward manner, what, in the Coalition day, the than Finance Minister was unable to accomplish with a trip to London—and at an expense and in a manner not calculated to reflect credit upon the negotiation. Facts speak more loud than words.

Beware of a Mad Dog.

A black spaniel, belonging to a certain citizen of Peterborough, showed signs of illness for several days last week; but, becoming better, he followed his master for a short walk on Friday and also on Saturday last, during which he fought with several dogs in Town. This did not attract much attention at the moment, although after that he was left at home; but as he broke away on Saturday afternoon, and has not returned, it is surmised that he was mad; and if so, he may have bitten many other dogs and animals besides. On which account, all owners of canine animals had better put them under strict surveillance. And should any person have been bitten by such an animal, he should seek surgical aid without delay. Besides if one dog has gone mad, others may; which suggests the propriety of caution with regard to the whole race at the present time.—COM. (The REVIEW will confer a favor by copying.)

....Considerable attention was attracted by a light steam carriage on Broadway yesterday morning. It has the appearance of an ordinary buggy, minus the shafts, and the steam apparatus was on the rear of the axle. Two persons were riding in the carriage, which moved quietly and smoothly. It is a Boston notion, manufactured by Rover and Austin, and the driver (conductor?) informed our reporter that the engine was of two-horse power—that the carriage would go on any grade, and that a hod of coal would drive it thirty miles. He is desirous of matching it against any trotting horse in the world for $1,000. This novelty was rolling along toward Central Park when our reporter entered it.—N. Y. Tribune.

STRIKES.

The Mechanics have been striking for higher wages in the cities of the neighboring States. Labor is extremely abundant, and the labourers—in consequence of the drain kept up to supply the army—are very scarce. In Philadelphia, New York, and other large cities, combinations have been entered into by the workmen, to effect that end. The strike seems to be a universal thing. Men and women alike demand an increase of wages—they say they must have it to live, the price of things having so much raised. The employers, it is believed, will have to yield.

THE NORTHERN CAUSE AND BRITISH ELECTIONS.—The London correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer reports the following gratifying fact: "There have been several new elections during the past ten days in different parts of the kingdom, and everywhere the result has been the same. Whatever may have been the local questions and interest at stake, rival candidates have gone before respective constituencies almost solely on the American question. Both have been compelled to declare in advance their sentiments and opinions on this subject, and to pledge themselves as to their course upon it if elected. And singularly enough, in every instance, the man who has avowed himself a partisan of the South, and in favor of intervention, has been signally defeated, while his opponent, who has taken the opposite stand, has been triumphantly elected."

POLISH PROSPECTS.—A Paris paper publishes a statement to the effect that a banquet given to the cavalry officers in Gernsalles, where Marshal MACMAHON was present, one of the colonels delivered a speech in which, referring to Poland, he expressed a belief that, at no distant day, the Emperor would summon them to measure swords with the oppressors of a people sympathetic with France.

A POLITICAL affray took place last week between two factions, when the leader of one of them named CUDAC, was killed.

THE GERMAN PARADOX.—Of the two leading powers in Germany, Austria is Catholic and absolute, and Prussia is Protestant with a constitutional legislature. Austria, whose dominions are more than half Slavonic, takes the lead in the movement for German unity, which Prussia, which is almost wholly German, defeats. Protestant Russia, with its constitution, is relapsing into absolutism, while Catholic Austria is rapidly rising to the benefits of a limited government. Austria, which is growing more and more liberal at home, proposes a plan for German unity, which Russia, whose king has outraged all the principles of representative government, resists because it has no popular element in it. The body of German states, so divided among themselves that they cannot agree upon a single measure of internal policy, to coerce Denmark, in order to compel the complete union of Holstein with Germany. No doubt all these paradoxes can be explained by facts, but as they stand they are at least curious to look at.

A RIGHTEOUS JUDGMENT.

The Galt Reporter says:—We have been requested to direct attention to a case which occurred in the neighboring village of Preston last week. One day during that week, a boy came to the school in a complete state of intoxication. The teacher notified Mr. Klotz, Superintendent, of the fact, who at once investigated the matter, and found out that the liquor had been obtained at the tavern of John Oldman. The parents of the boy, and of the others who had obtained liquor at the same place, laid information against the tavern-keeper, and the magistrates fined him $20 and costs—a most righteous decision, say we.

HAPPINESS.—True happiness, in our opinion, consists of the following named artlices: a nice little wife sitting on your knee, her trusting smiles filling your mind with happy thoughts; a neat little room tidily furnished with every sort of "comfortable fixin's" and a box of Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers on the shelf for coughs, colds, &c. With these little adjunets how can any body be miserable? get a box the first thing you do. For sale by all Druggists.

MORE TROOPS FOR CANADA.—The last number of the UNITED STATES SERVICE GAZETTE contains a singular statement, to the effect that the 45th regiment, now in camp at the Curragh, and the 58th regiment, in garrison at Dublin, are under orders to embark for Canada. It is a strange announcement at this late period of the year. We do not know what is its authenicity for the statement.

THE Commission appointing Messrs. J. M. FERRIS, G. H. SWEET and Louis BOURDON, to inquire into the Bolton lead matter, has been revoked and a new commission appointed, composed of Messrs. G. BUCHANAN, of Nelsonville, G. H. SWEET, of Sweetsburg, and D. R. WOOD, of this city. Mr. FERRIS, while receiving a salary of $2,000 per annum has been in receipt of $10 per day as a Commissioner since the 22nd of August, 1861.

THE Montreal Transcript says that it seems likely from the statement of a contemporary that Charles Archibald CAMPBELL, M. D., of this city, will succeed to the title and immense estates of Dreadalbane. The estates are valued at £40,000 sterling per annum. Dr. CAMPBELL intends proceeding to Scotland immediately to look after his interests in the case, which is now in litigation.

BARNUM HAS HER.—A girl of seventeen passed through Boston a day or two since from the backwoods of Maine, via the Eastport boat, on her way to New York, where she has been engaged to exhibit by BARNUM at $5 a day, and expenses paid. The girl is 7 feet and 3 inches high, weighs 200 pounds, and the length of her hand from the tip of the finger to the wrist bone is 13 inches.

EVERY BODY USE IT.—And all agree, that the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" is the best medicine for the instant and premanent removal of pain from the system, ever yet discovered. It acts as a general alterative, thereby removing the cause of the disease, and renovating the action of the system. For the purposes for which it is recommended, it has no equal. Truly it is a "good thing." Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

COMING ANARCHY.—The New Orleans True Delta says:—"We declare ourselves of those who believe this war cannot much longer be prosecuted on either side, without producing convulsions, compared to which, in horrors, the fearful slaughters, mutilations, burnings and destroyings of the war, so far, would sink into insignificance."

LECTURE.

The Honorable D'Arcy McGee will lecture in Coulter & Stevenson's new Hall this evening. The object is a worthy one, and whatever their political opinions, none, we think, will deny that Mr. McGee, as a literary character and a lecturer, stands among the first in the Province. We hope to see a good turn out, as the proceeds are to be appropriated for charitable purposes.

THE news from New Zeland gold-fields is of the most lugubrious character. The winter in Otago, always severe, has during the present season been particularly miserable and inhospitable. Some idea of the terrible inclemency of the weather may be gathered from the fact that in one flood nearly twenty poor diggers were carried away and drowned. The rain, which fell in torrents—literally a sheet of water—soon caused the rivers to overflow their banks, and in less than twenty-four hours they had sixteen feet beyond the flats of former years, and swept everything before them in promiscuous destruction. A small town, foolishly built too close to the summer level of the Aaron, was in twelve hours completely carried away by the rush of the waters. Scarcely a trace remains of the hard work carried on for months by the industrious diggers, who find their "claims" destroyed and themselves rendered destitute. Another of these equally dangerous rivers—the Shotover—winds itself through gorges with perfectly precipitous sides of naked micaceous slate rock, and meanders through narrow banks, terraces, and plateaux of sand and gravel. The tops of the mountains are in winter covered with snow. During a flood, which invariably follows a heavy rain, the gullies tributary to these New Zeland rivers become filled with water, and rushing headlong, overflow the terraces, banks, and plateaux. Not only is great danger to be anticipated from the rush of the seething waters, but the rain loosens the earth from the rock, and in the form of an avalanche carries everything before it. Many who were not suffocated by the fall of the earth avalanches were drowned in the surging of the torrent streams. By the steamer which arrived yesterday from Otago, a still further loss of life is reported, upwards of forty men having perished through the fall of an avalanche in the Serpentine Gully, on the road to the Dunstan diggings; at the time the Aldinga left Dunedin no definite particulars had been received. —DAILY TELEGRAPH.

THE ZAMBESI.—The Rev. James Stewart, a Commissioner from the Free Church of Scotland, came home passenger from the Cape by the "Sharon." He has explored the Zambesi thoroughly; first with Livingstone's expedition, and afterwards alone up beyond Tete in one direction, and beyond the Murchison Falls in another. He had also visited all the chief missionary stations in the Cape Colony. The intelligence received at Capetown of the death of Dr. Mellor, of Her Majesty's ship "Pioneer," was dated so far back as April.

THE Negroes in Missouri are so deficient in arithmetic that they all imagine they will be brought under the "forty year old class" (which class are not within the provisions of the State emancipation law) and are making tracks as fast as possible to Kansas and other free States, so as to make sure of emancipation before they die. They go in such numbers that slavery has practically ceased to exist. Many of the able-bodied sort exhibit considerable ambition to obtain a new suit of clothes, ten dollars a month, and rations from Uncle Sam.—Am. paper.

GENERAL VOLUNTEERING INSPECTION.—The Quebec Chronicle understands that it is the intention of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief to cause an inspection of all corps in the Active Volunteer Force of the Province, to be made in the month of December; and it is said that upon the numbers present at such inspection, and the general proficiency of the respective corps, will rest the question of whether such corps are to be continued on the muster roll of the Active Force.

ESCAPE FROM JAIL.—A TURKEY ARRESTED.—On Friday last a couple of prisoners named Lamy and Bliss escaped from the Sweetsburg jail, Lower Canada, and a turkey named Barnes has been arrested on suspicion of having aided them. A number of prisoners have lately escaped from this jail, and it is believed that the turnkey has allowed them to on the payment of sums varying from $50 to $100. An investigation is now pending.

APPROACH OF WINTER.—The first fall of snow took place on Wednesday. About 8 o'clock in the morning the sky became overcast with heavy leaden clouds, and soon after it commenced snowing, and continued throughout the day. Carioles were brought into requisition, the ground being covered to the depth of several inches. Yesterday (Thursday), however, it disappeared in the streets under the influence of the sun, but the fields and unfrequented places are still covered with their winter coating, which will probably remain until an April sun removes it.—Quebec News.

THE average length of a life is about 28 years. One quarter die previous to the age of 7; one-half before reaching 17. Only 1 of every 1,000 persons reaches 100 years. Only 6 of every 100 reach the age of 65, and not more than 1 in 500 lives to 80 years of age. Of the whole population of the globe, it is estimated that 90,000 die every day, about 3,700 every hour, and 60 every minute, or 1 every second. Their losses are more than counterbalanced by the number of births. The married are longer lived than the single. The average duration of life in all civilized countries is greater now than in any anterior period.

A GOOD TRAIT OF THE LONDON TIMES.—Mr. J. Moore, a practical printer in London, lately stated in a lecture on the history and art of printing:—"The proprietors of the Times have done much to improve the condition of the compositors employed in their establishment. For many years a savings bank has been established, to which every compositor is expected to subscribe weekly. A cuisine has been fitted up, where viands, wholesome and suitable, are prepared at cost to the customers. There is also a bath to refresh the body after the fatigues of the night. And, better still, dwelling houses have been erected on Mr. Walter's estate in Berkshire, where the compositors may retire in their old age, upon a pension."

ST. FLAVIEN.—Being upon a tour of inspection to the Canadian mines, we accepted an invitation of the directors of the St. Flavien to visit their property, and must say were astonished at the progress made during the short time that has elapsed since operations were commenced, as well as the richness of the developments. The shaft is now down over seventy feet, and the amount of copper taken out in simply excavating this perpendicular hole, will pay the expense thus incurred. The stockholders have to congratulate themselves upon the systematic and economical manner in which operations have been carried on at this mine, the President having been a resident director on the property for five months and everything being under his personal supervision. That's the way to manage copper mines.—Boston Commercial Bulletin.

BODY SNATCHING IN LOWER CANADA.—On the night of Sunday week last, a party of young medicos, some of whom are said to be known, were interrupted in carrying off the dead and buried body of a married woman from the cemetery of Grace Church, Mascouche. This is a very secluded spot, some five or six miles behind Terrebonne, having a place of worship with a parsonage and burying ground, in connection with the United Church of England and Ireland; and here had been interred, the same Sabbath morning, the remains just mentioned. As the relations of the deceased lived ten miles away, no watch (as had been usual) had been instituted over the grave. Under cover therefore of a dark night, the moon not being yet out, a party of hardy adventurers had completed their appaling enterprize so far as to have got the body into a cart, which they had in readiness, on the side of the Cemetery adjoining the bush. But they were observed by a young man named Richard Robinson—one of the numerous family of a respectable farmer at Mascouche—who was seeing a friend home; the two in conjunction succeeded in obtaining the corpse. The parties escaped. A rope was round the neck and through the mouth of the body, which, according to established rules, had been divested of every particle of clothing. The body was taken back to the parsonage; the relatives sent for, and the corpse again decently buried at break of day. This violation of the hallowed repose of the grave was thus nobly frustrated, and we hope steps will be taken to bring the parties implicated to account for their doings.

THE RUSSIANS IN NEW YORK.—The New York Herald says:—Upon the arrival of the Russian fleet in our harbour we were seized with a Russian mania. Our citizen soldiers paraded the streets, muddied their trousers, to show themselves to the Russians, and were quietly ignored at the Russian dinner. This ninner was gotten up lavishly, although lard, and tallow, and train oil would have done as well as game, and pastry, and champagne—but the speeches were exceedingly farcical, especially in those portions which essayed to draw a comparison between the Emperor Alexander and President Lincoln. Then came the ball, which was, as we predicted, a farce and a failure. So ends the history of the Russian festivities, and what have we gained by them? Is it the sympathy of the Russian CZAR? We had that before, in a diplomatic way, and it really amounts to nothing. Russia sends her navy here to keep it safe in the event of war with France, but we doubt if she would send it here if we needed it to aid us in fighting England. Her navy, in fact, is not worth the sending. One of our iron-sides could blow it out of water, with all the barbarians on board, in a couple of hours. How else can Russian sympathy avail us? What assistance is her barbarian legation or her barbarian diplomacy to a people able to take care of themselves? If she has any sympathy to spare let her expend it upon the Poles, who have groaned for half a century under her iron yoke, and have been deprived of all their natural and national rights, except the right of being sent to Siberia. For flies America to become cheek-by-jowl with such a despotism is contrary to all the traditions, all the sentiments and all the principles of this republic. We may have forgotton this during our recent excitement. Let us remember it now.

ELECTIVE INSTITUTIONS.—Amid the din of general changes for the country, there is a local reform that must not be lost sight of—we refer to a change in the system by which our government should be popularized.—The people of Red River claim to have a voice in matters political—they want and should have the right of electing their own Councillors, instead of having them foisted upon them by the Hudson Bay Committee, in London, as has hitherto been the case. This is a most just and reasonable demand, and if the new Company wish to escape the complaints directed against their predecessors, they will frankly adjust the matters.—Red River New Nestor.

ATTEMPTED MURDER OF AN APE.—An extraordinary paragraph is going the rounds of the French newspapers, describing the attempted murder of a medical student at Toulouse by an ape! The student had been made a present of the animal Deaths.

At Peterborough, on Saturday, the 14th inst., Rosa Ann, youngest daughter of Mr. George Johnston, aged 1 year and 8 months.

At Peterborough, on Sunday morning, the 15th inst., at the residence of Mr. John Hallet, Duncan, eldest son of Mr. Archibald Haggart, aged 28 years.

Mr. Haggart, it will be remembered, joined the 109th Regiment about five years ago. In June last he suffered a paralytic stroke, and was in consequence discharged about a month ago. He reached his father's at Cobourg, on Wednesday the 11th inst., on Friday last he came out to Peterborough to see his friends, and while at his brother-in-law's house, on Saturday he had another Paralytic stroke, and died at half-past two the next morning.

At Peterborough, on the 18th inst., Frances Ann, the beloved wife of W. W. Boswell, Esq., aged 43 years.

The funeral will leave the family residence, George Street, to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'cl'k to be interred in to Little Lake Cemetery.

RELIEF IN TEN MINUTES.

RYAN'S

PULMONIC WAFERS.

The most certain and speedy remedy ever discover ed for all Diseases of the Chest and Lungs, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, Bronchitis, Influenza, Hoarseness, Difficult breathing, Sore throat &c., &c., &c.

THESE WAFERS give the most instantaneous and perfect relief and when persevered with according to directions, never fail to effect a rapid and lasting cure. Thousands have been restored to perfect health who have tried other means in vain. To all classes and all constitutions they are equally a blessing and a cure—none need despair, no matter how long the disease may have existed, or however severe it may be, provided the organic structure of the vital organs is not hopelessly decayed. Every one afflicted should give them an impartial trial.

To Vocalists and Public Speakers, these Wafers are peculiarly valuable; they will in one day remove the most severe occasional hoarseness; and their regular use for a few days will, at all times, increase the power and flexibility of the voice, greatly improving its tone, compass and clearness, for which purpose they are regularly used by many professional vocalists

Telegraph Book Store.

COX & DAVIDSON
(Successors to Richard White.)

WOULD respectfully announce that they have succeeded Mr. Richard White in the Book and Stationery Business, formerly carried on by him, and intend carrying on that Business in their store, opposite Messrs. Nicholls & Hall's, Simcoe Street, where, in addition to the Stock purchased from Mr. White, they are receiving a complete assortment of everything in the above line, and now offer a well selected stock of

SCHOOL BOOKS AND STATIONERY,

Every description of Blank & Account Books, Letter Books, Miscellaneous Books, Prayer Books, Bibles, Hymn Books, and all other articles usually found in a Book and Stationery Establishment. Particular attention paid to filling orders for any Books not in stock; weekly parcels will be received from New York, Montreal and Toronto. The most popular English and American Magazines and Periodicals received as soon as published and supplied at Publisher's Prices. We will sell all Goods at the lowest price, and from our experience in the trade we are satisfied that we can supply our customers on as good terms as any Book Store in the Canadas. Special inducements to School Teachers and Clergymen. Country Dealers supplied wholesale at very low rates. Persons who have been receiving Periodicals and Magazines from Mr. White will in future be supplied by us. In soliciting public patronage, we hope by strict attention to business and punctuality in filling all orders entrusted to us, to give satisfaction to all who may favor us with their support.

COX & DAVIDSON.

P. S.—The above business will be managed by Mr. Davidson, and in no way interferes with the Telegraph and Express Business, which will be attended to by me as heretofore.

GEORGE A. COX.

Select Poetry.

A DEAR YOUNG LADY.

A young lady has said
That she'll no man wed,
Who's worth less than five thousand a year;
One would fancy to keep
A white elephant cheap,
If compared to a damsel so dear.

Full five hundred; no less,
She must spend upon dress,
Every year of her conjugal life;
Only somebody who
Is as rich as a Jew,
Can afford to maintain such a wife.

Oh, how lovely must she,
To expect so much, be!
But who prizes her beauty's as goose,
Like the plumb's bloomy time,
'Tis brushed off in no time,
And how then, if your wife's of no use?

What can this girl, then, do?
Can she bake? Can she brew?
Can she wash? Can she cook? Can she mend?
Or is she nothing worth
Than the fruits of the earth,
To consume and a fortune expend?

Varieties.

"Sonny, what are the wages here?"

"Don't know."

"What does your father get on Saturday night?"

"Tight as a brick."

A man came into a printing-office to beg a paper. "Because," he said, "we like to read the newspapers very much, but our neighbors are all too stingy to take one."

"Pompey, are you willing to be damned if it is the Lord's will?"

"Oh, yes, massa, and more too; I am willing you be damned too, massa!" replied Pompey.

"Do you consider lager beer intoxicating?" "Val," replied W———, "as for dat, I only say. I drinked fourty or sixty glasses in dis day, and it no hurtish me; but I tow't know how it would be if a man was to make a hog of himself."

Pupa—"Well, sissy, how do you like your school?"

Sissy—"Oh, so nuts."

Pupa—"That's right. Now tell me all you have learned to-day."

Sissy—"I have learnt the names of all the little boy's th."

"There goes a man," said a friend to another, "who is worth his hundred thousand dollars." "Yes," quaintly said the other, looking after the rich man, "and that's all he is worth.

In the bull-fighting days, a blacksmith, who was rearing a bull pup, induced his old father to go on all fours and imitate the pup. The canine pupil pinned the old man by the nose. The ox, disregarding the parental roaring, exclaimed:—"Hold him, Growler! boy, hold him! Bear it, father, bear it; it'll be the making of the pup!"

Little Charlie came to the table very hungry, and had his fork in a potatoe, and the potato transferred to his plate before he thought of the usual blessing. Looking up to his father, he says, "Pa, you talk to Heaven while I washes my potato."—His hunger made him wish to improve every moment.

One day little Molly, six years old, said to her uncle, who was visiting at her father's, "Uncle Harry, do you say your prayers to God?"

He replied; "Certainly, everybody does, who is good."

"No they don't," said Molly, "for me is good, and she always says hers to the chair."

"In our County Court," writes an Eastern friend, "one of our smart young lawyers was well come up with the other day. A witness, in a case of assault, was asked by the junior Counsel, "How far was you, Sir, from the parties when the alleged assault took place?"

"Four feet five inches and a half," was the answer promptly given.

"Ah!" fiercely demanded the lawyer, "how came you to be so very exact as all this?"

"'Because,' said the witness very coolly, 'I expected that some confounded fool would likely as not ask me, and so I went and measured it.'"

THE RULING PASSION.

It is curious to observe how one's habits of thought constantly break out and exhibit themselves in whatever he says or does. In one of our colleges it was customary for the professors to take turn in making the chapel prayers. Upon an occasion this duty fell upon the learned professor of chemistry, and the students were astonished to hear him introduce as illustrative thus: "Thou knowest, O Lord, that for tipping lightning rods silver is better than platinum; so is the mind, touched by thy grace, made the more ready to receive the principles of science!" On another occasion the mathematical professor asked "divine goodness to enable us to know its length, its breadth, its depth, and its superficial contents!"

A YANKEE ON A BUST.

"Massy sakes alive, Eb's been again!" says cousin Sally, rousing into the kitchen to Marm Green, who, up to her elbows, in the dough, dropt all" and came out to see her hopeful son stalk into the porch as big as all out doors!

"What' on airth, Eb., has your been!" says the old lady.

"Where has I been? Why, down 't Boating."

"Massy sakes, Eb., what on airth did you dew—had you a good time, Ebenezer?"

"Good time! Oh-o-ough persimmons! hadn't I a time! Cute time, by golly; e-n-and marm, I made the money by—did, by golly."

"Why, how you talk, Eb!" says Marm Green. "I hope you didn't break any of the commandments, or nothin'?"

"Break the commandments? We-a-all, see, didn't break noth-in'. Everslastin' salvation, marm, you don't s'pose a feller's goin' downs tew Boating and not cut a shine nor nothin'. You see, marm, I went into a show'p to get a drink of that almighty good stuff, spruce beer, and—e and two gals, clock critters, axed me tome treat!"

"Land sakes alive!—You didn't do it though, Eb.?"

"We-a-all, I did though' mow! I was sent on a time, marm, and I didn't care a darn whether school kept or not, as the boy told his boss."

"Ebenezer, don't you swear!"

"Haint a gone to, marm; but, you see, them gals axed me to treat, and I did, and don't keer a darn who knows it! You see I paid for ther two glasses of spruce beer and mine, that was fo'. peace, sla'p dab; then I bought two cents warth of ree-sins, for 'em and by Beuaker, I'd rather spent that half sixpence, than gone off sneakin'."

SOLDIERS in the ARMY!

AND OUR PEOPLE AT HOME,

Are now offered an opportunity by which they can obtain a

GOOD AND DURABLE TIME-PIECE,

At a very Low Figure.

OUR WATCHES are warranted to keep time one year, and the buyer is allowed the privilege of examination before the payment is required.

Improved Duplex in full Ruby Actions.

A first-class Hunting Time-Piece of silver material, over which is electro-find plated 18 k. gold, most durably wrought, making the imitation so faultless that it cannot be detected from the solid material by the most experienced Judges; acids will not affect it. London made movement. Improved Duplex in full Ruby Actions has sweep seconds, and is not to be excelled in general appearance. This decidedly the one of the best articles ever offered for traders and speculators. Engineers, emigrants and persons travelling will find them superior to any other; alteration of climate will not affect their accuracy. Price, packed in good shape and good running order, only $35, or case of 5 for $200.

Silver Double Time Hunting Levers,

Best quality silver cases, over which electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, similar to our Improved Duplex, and superior adjusted movements with "stop," to be used in timing horses, ect.; has four ludexes for Washington and Greenwich time, sweep second, and all the improvements. All in all, taking its beautiful and faultless appearance and its superior movement into consideration, we regard it as decidedly the cheapest article of the kind in the market. Price, in good running order, $35, or case of 6 for $200.

☞ We ask no pay in advance, but will forward either of them to responsible parties, to any part of the loyal States, with bill payable to the express-man when the Good are delivered, giving the buyer the privilege of examination, and, if not satisfactory, the watch can be returned at our expense.

The express companies refuse making collections on soldiers, and other parties in the disloyal States, consequently all such orders must be accompanied by the cash to insure attention. We make a deduction on either Watch when the payment is forwarded in advance.

Money may be sent by express at our expense.

MANHOOD

AND THE

VIGOR OF YOUTH RESTORED

IN FOUR WEEKS,

By Dr. Sicotte's Essence of Life,

DR. SICOTTE, (OF PARIS) after years of earnest solicitation, has at length acceded to the urgent request of the American public, and appointed an agent in Toronto for the sale of his valued and highly prized Essence of Life. This wonderful agent will restore Manhood to the most shattered constitutions, whether arising from excesses, the effects of climate, or natural causes. The time required to cure the most inveterate case is four weeks; and if used according to printed instructions, which are very simple, failure is impossible. This life-restoring remedy should be taken by all about to marry, as its effects are permanent. It is acknowledged by the medical press to be the greatest discovery ever made. Its developing powers are miraculous. Success in every case is as certain as that science overthrows ignorance.

Dr. Sicotte's Essence of Life is sold in cases, with full instructions for use, at $5, or four quantities in one for $9, and will be sent to any part, carefully packed, on receipt of remittance to his accredit agent.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK,

For 1864.

GREAT LITERARY & PICTORIAL YEAR.

THE PUBLISHER of Godey's Lady's Book, thankful to that public which has enabled him to publish a Magazine for the last thirty-four years of a larger circulation than any in America, has made an arrangement with the most popular authoress in this country—

MARION HARLAND,

Authoress of "Alone," "Hidden Path," "Miriam," "Moss Side," and "Nemesis,"

Who will furnish Stories for the Lady's Book for 1864. This alone will place the Lady's Book in a literary point of view fare ahead of any other Magazine. Our other favourite writers will all continue to furnish articles throughout the year.

The best Lady's Magazine in the world and the Cheapest.

THE LITERATURE

Is of that kind that can be read aloud in the family circle, and the clergy in immense numbers are subscribers for the Book.

THE MUSIC

Is all original, and would cost 25 cents, (the price of the Book) in the music stores; but most of it is copyrighted, and cannot be obtained except in Godey.

OUR STEEL ENGRAVINGS.

All efforts to rival us in this have ceased, and we now stand alone in this department, giving as we do many more and infinitely better engravings than are published in any other work. Godey's immense double sheet Fashion-Plate, containing from five to seven full length colored Fashions on each plate—other Magazines give only two—are far ahead of any Fashions in Europe or America. The publication of these Plates cost $10,000 more than the Fashion Plates of the old style, and nothing but our wonderfully large circulation enables us to give them. Other Magazines cannot afford it. We never spare money when the public can be benefited.

These Fashions may be relied on. Dresses may be made after them, and the wearer will not subject herself to ridicule, as she would be if she visited the large cities dressed after the style of the plates in some of our so-called Fashion Magazines.

OUR WOOD ENGRAVINGS,

Of which we give twice or three times as many as any other Magazine, are often mistaken for steel; they are so far superior to any others.

IMITATIONS.

Beware of them. Remember that the Lady's Book is the original publication and the cheapest. If you take Godey, you want no other Magazine. Everything that is useful or ornamental in a house will be found in Godey.

DRAWING LESSONS.

No other Magazine gives them, and we have given enough to fill several large volumes.

OUR RECEIPTS

Are such as can be found nowhere else. Cooking in all its varieties — Confectionery — the Nursery—the Toilet—the Laundry—the Kitchen Receipts upon all subjects are to be found in the pages of the Lady's Book. We originally started this department, and have peculiar facilities for making it most perfect. This department alone is worth the price of the book.

LADIES' WORK TABLE.

This department comprises engravings and descriptions of every article that a lady wears.

MODEL COTTAGES.

No other Magazine has this department.

Terms to Subscribers in the British Provinces:

One copy one year, $3; two copies one year, $5; three copies one year, $7.

Five copies one year, and an extra copy to the person sending the club, making six copies for $11.50.

Special Clubbing with other Magazines.

Godey's Lady's Book and Arthur's Magazine, one year, $4.

Godey and Harper, one year, $5.

Godey, Harper, and Arthur, one year, $7.

At these prices subscribers in the Provinces will have only the British postage to pay.

Treasury notes and notes of all solvent banks taken at par.

Be careful and pay the postage on your letter.

TO THE NERVOUS AND DEBILITATED.

DR CURTIS, author of the Medical Treatise, "MANHOOD: the Cause of its Premature Decline," &c., will, on receipt of $1, send per return of mail, to any part of the Province, his invaluable remedy for the cure of seminal weakness, or Spermatorrhœa, &c., together with full instructions. All who are suffering from nocturnal emissions, should immediately procure the above remedy, which Dr. C. guarantees will cure any case under seven years standing, in eight days.

THE GREAT HEALER OF MANKIND,

The Whole World United!

SICK PEOPLE THINK!

AFTER WHICH, ACT.

Herrick's Sugar Coated Pills,

CHILDREN CRY FOR THEM!

THIS remarkable American remedy is carrying the world by storm. Over five million boxes are sold annually. Composed entirely of Flowers, Roots, Balsams, and Extracts.—their effect on the human system is pleasant, satisfactory, and successful.—Acting directly on the blood, glands, solids and fluids of the body, their use is attended with the happiest effects. In sudden attacks of disease, one or two doses almost always cures. In old standing cases of sickness, small doses—repeated frequently—so cleanse the system that good health is the result. No change in employment or diet is necessary. They never cause sore mouths, swelled joints, aching limbs, etc., as do many other kinds. They are warranted to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded. They are considered cheaper, safer, prettier, and in all respects superior to any purgative pill in the world.

☞ The discovery of coatings pill with sugar emanated with Dr Herrick. All others are counterfeits, and if used, will do harm, and disappoint the sick. Herrick's pills are elegantly put up, 20 in a box, with a large sheet of directions, and sell for 25 cents a box; 5 boxes for $1.

Herrick's Kid Strengthening Plaster.

THE GREAT STRENGTHENER AND PAIN DESTROYER THE BEST AND CHEAPEST HOUSEHOLD REMEDY IN THE WORLD.

These renowned Plasters cure pains, weakness and distress in the back, sides and breast, in five hours. Indeed, so certain are they to do this, that the proprietor warrants them. Spread from rooms, balmoral and gums, on beautiful kid leather, renders them peculiarly adapted to the wants of females and others. Their application is universal—equally to the strong man, the feeble woman, and the delicate infant. To each and all they will prove a balm and a blessing. Their use is agreeable and without annoyance or trouble.—Each Plaster will wear from one to four months, and in rheumatic complaints, spasms and bruises, frequently, effect cures when all other remedies fail. Full directions will be found on the back of each. Public speakers, vocalists, ministers of the gospel and others, will strengthen their lungs and improve their voices by wearing them on their breast. Price 25 cents.

The above articles are sold by all the dealers in Canada, and by druggists throughout the United States and South America, at wholesale by all large druggists in the principal cities.

Select Poetry.

'TIS THE HEART THAT MAKES THE HOME.

You praise the Homes of England, and your earnest glance is bent
On a cottage that you deem to be the cottage of content;
Around the porch how lovingly the rich red roses cling,
How sweetly 'mid the orchard trees the birds in concert sing?
Your picture of the fond husband, and the fair and gentle wife,
But do you boast a magic glass to view their inner life?
If storms of angry strife assail that scene of light and bloom,
Vain is its sylvan beauty—'tis the heart that makes the home.

Anon we journey on our way—the air blows fresh and free,
You goodly dwelling looks upon the deep and boundless sea,
Well must its owner love, you say, the votive wave to greet
That cast bright sea weed and gay shells so often at their feet,
But have they gifts of purer kind—of nobler, better worth?
Doth true affections bring its stores to cheer the social hearth?
If not, their eyes in langor o'er the wondrous may roam,
Unheeded of its glories—'tis the heart that makes the home.

The owners of the stately hall that now attracts your sight,
Are welcoming a courtly throng within their halls to-night;
'Tis but a fair "dissolving view" that morn will soon dispel—
Yes! soon the music will be hushed, and the guests will say farewell;
Then, when the household group remain, 'mid dying lamps and flowers,
Will they with fevered restlessness recall those festive hours,
Each reading in the other's eyes a tale of weary gloom?
If so, their gold is worthless—'tis the heart that makes the home.

Come, I will show you happy homes amid the city's din,
Discord and strife may reign without, but love abides within;
They are not graced with works of art, rare flowers, or warbling birds,
Yet they are rich in pleasant thoughts, kind smiles and gentle words.
Perchance their inmates may depart another home to find,
Yet will the cast no longing glance on that they leave behind;
The tranquil spirit of content they feel will surely come
To cheer their future dwelling—'tis the heart that makes the home.

Our home below should typify the home we seek about;
How shall we gain the blessing? We are told that "God is love:"
Each to the humblest dwelling place the graces may impart,
Of a meek and lowly spirit, of a true and tender heart,
Forbearance, kindness, patience, trust—these shall prove our stay,
When youth declines, when pleasure palls, when riches pass away;
And though beyond our calm abode, we gaze on mist and gloom,
Sweet peace shall shine within it—'tis the heart that makes the home.

Literature.

Three Chapters of my Life.

CHAPTER I.

Not that I could not, if desirable, divide my life into three times three chapters, or indeed divide and subdivide it after the manner of a modern novel, but that would divert me from my purpose. Besides, my life thus far seems to be distinctly marked by three epochs. I seem to have had psychologically three distinct lives; to have been born, to have lived, and to have died three times, and a new self to have arisen from the ashes of the old. I am not so venerable but that, in time, I may add other chapters. Yet, at present, I will adhere to my plan, and, beginning with Chapter One, I make at once a very homely and unprepossessing assertion. I was the child of poor parents. My first recollections are of the privations, the annoyances, the inconveniences of poverty. From the moment I was conscious of the possession of a pair of shoes the necessity of guarding them against accident destroyed all my satisfaction in them; and so with everything beyond our homeliest clothes; so, in fact, with the everyday garments of our childhood, we were impressed with the absolute necessity of preserving them, and an unlucky rent or stain was visited on our young heads with greater severity than many a gross dereliction of moral duty. Of course we were debarred the sports and freedom that belong to childhood; we could neither run, nor romp, nor scour the fields as other children did; we grew up without the sunshine, and a heavy atmosphere of care darkened our home; we felt its pressure as a dead weight upon our souls, without comprehending what it was. I say we. There were three of us once—my sisters Belle and Lucy, and myself. My name is Ann—a hard name, and I was hard; not by nature, but I would not yield to circumstances, and hardened myself against them.

We were poor, very poor. "Oh! why are clothes so hard to get, and why should we care what we wear?" I used to say to Belle.

"I don't care what I wear," said Belle; "all I want to be is to be able to jump and run. I would be willing to go whitewashed all summer to have my liberty."

Lucy, the youngest of the family, was a pale, blue-eyed, very pious girl, always thoughtful, always conscientious. It makes my heart sad, now, to recall her sweet, sympathizing, hopeful, patient ways. She took so much care upon herself, tried to take so much from our mother. I can not remember her as a child; I used to watch her sometimes as she sat on the floor, a puny little baby whom nobody had time to play with. My mother would take her up, nurse her at her bosom, and set her down again when her hunger was satisfied. The large blue eyes upturned with that wonderful, beseeching infant look met no smiles from my mother's glance. She never cried, she never asked to be petted or caressed. People that came in said, "What a good baby!" But she never looked or seemed like a baby; her soul, all at once, seemed to have outgrown its childish longings, and she never had a childlike existence. She grew up with a sweet, and unconsciousness of her own wants, to take the burden of life from others and carry it herself. God fed her with the heavenly manna, that her soul might be earlier ripe for heaven. "As a dream when one awaketh," we awoke one day to find her gone. She died in my father's arms. She was his child—more like him than any of us—and when she left him she seemed to draw him after her.

Nobody that saw my poor father moving on quietly in the profitless round of duty, that told little for himself and his family, knew of the wealth of love smothered in his heart. A great sorrow had passed over, him, and the life of his was hid under the ashes of hopes gone out. A younger brother, one whom he had idolized, robbed him of his wealth; that he could have borne. But when he became a vagabond, and at last died in prison, my father broke down; he never got over that grief, that shock to his pride. He lost, little by little all his energy and ambition. Our mother's nature could not play gently into his—could not understand, much less soothe him. She had no patience with the weakness that succumbs under difficulties. She despised the head that could not plan a fortune. Her father had been a rich man; she had brought a pretty property to her husband, but it had melted away through his carelessness and inefficiency. She never quite forgave him. Her milk of human kindness was turned to gall. We loved her because she was our mother, but we loved our father because he loved us. As his health declined, our life became harder and harder. We were so poor—oh! I can not tell how poor we were—we had enough to eat and wear, but young girls, growing up into society, even into village society, have wants, notions, often false and foolish, but natural; ideas of beauty and fitness that can not yield to bare homely necessities. We could not begin to dress or to live like our neighbors. We tried to brace ourselves up sometimes; but who cared for our good family? I had a deal of pride, and that was my bane. How mortification and disappointment rankled and rankled in my restless soul! Belle was of a merrier turn and wore the hard chain of necessity more lightly. Could some gentle spirit have come to us in youth, and softened the asperities of life to us, directing us to something higher! But some natures are left to work out their own salvation without much help: such was our case.

One bright winter morning there came to us an invitation to a sleigh-ride. Belle's face was in a glow as she communicated the glad tidings? but I refused to go. "I will not consent to leave our poor mother," said she; "it would be the drop too much if he thought his children were forced to go from home. Some time things will be different. Some time you can go and not reproach yourself. Think how much his pride has suffered already, and to have his children scattered—"

Suddenly, as we stood side by side talking and shivering with cold and excitement, a noise, like the fall of a heavy body in the room below, startled us. We rushed together down stairs. Our father had fallen in a fit.

"Run for the doctor!" said my mother. But it was of no avail. My father was going fast where no human help was needed. A ray of consciousness lit up the last hour. He looked the love he could not speak, and died.

Well, we lived on in the old homestead, poorer than ever, for we had lost the gentle presence that had kept our souls from starving. We did not seem to each other to mourn, because the old restraint lay on our hearts that had closed up all outward expression of grief. It seemed as if care and perplexity had blunted the fine edge of our feelings. I look back now to see how much selfishness lay at the root of our sorrows—to see that we might have been happy in spite of our poverty; but I see also that life was hard. I feel it now—that hard, unloving, unlovely life.

With me the old feeling of discontent returned after the first shock and pressure of grief was removed. The old dreams and the old longings, too, came back. "The house is going to rack and ruin, Belle," said I; "and, besides, there is a heavy mortgage on it, and by-and-by we shall be obliged to give it up. Now my will is strong, and here is an object. I am determined to go—"

"What to do?" asked Belle.

"See here," said I, showing an advertisement in a newspaper: "'Nursery Governess Wanted. Look! the terms are liberal. It will do me for a beginning, and I am not fitted for anything better yet. Perhaps I can find time to study there, and you know I can teach very little children."

"I am afraid you won't like it," said Belle. You don't know what kind of people they may be—rich and heartless, perhaps; and yet, if you can bear it—if you can do any thing to buy back the old home; it is all we have—all mother has, and she is growing old. Dear Ann, something tells me you had better go, and I should be glad if I had not known how your feelings might be hurt, and you have so much pride."

"I have pride enough not to allow my feelings to hurt me, Belle," said I. "Such as we are too poor to nurse our feelings."

"Have you said anything to mother?" asked Belle.

"No," I replied. "I shall speak to her to-night; but now, can I make myself decent to go to the city without a cent?"

"Perhaps you could borrow a little from Squire Robinson. I have heard father tell of the time when he helped him, a poor drover boy; how he wanted to get an education, and father was rich then, and lent him money. I suppose he paid it back, but I don't suppose he has forgotten it. He will be glad to show that he remembers it."

"How can I ask him?" said I. "What shall I say? I had rather go in my old clothes."

"I will ask him," said Belle. "I know he will not refuse."

In the evening I spoke to my mother of my plans, showing her the paper.

"You can not offer yourself without recommendation," said my mother.

"I can ask Squire Robinson," said I. "He is a rich man, and has friends in Boston."

"If he would pay his debts it would be better than writing letters of recommendation," said my mother bitterly. "But ask him. I suppose it's the only way."

I did not ask her what he owed us; but the fact that he was in our debt, gathered from mother's words, made me bold to present my claims. "And perhaps," said I to Belle, "if he knows I am going away from home—going to the city—going to try and support myself—perhaps it may enter into his mind that—a little money won't come amiss, and perhaps he will offer me some."

Belle encouraged me to hope for the result I had suggested, and I accordingly went, with considerable self-confidence, to the Square, presenting my plea, and asking if he would give me a good word. He did so without a moment's hesitation, and seating himself at the desk, wrote a recommendatory letter, which he handed to me open, desiring at the same time that I would read it, and see how it suited me.

I did not know then how easy it is to be generous on paper, and thought every word of praise came straight from the heart. I felt my self-respect not a little heightened at the discovery of his high opinion of my character and capabilities. I expressed my gratitude more warmly than was my custom, for a little spring of new life went bubbling up in my heart, and under its influence my accustomed reserve of manner melted away. The conviction that he approved of my plan, and highly esteemed my capacities, gave me the additional courage to present my necessities more in detail; and I asked him, in full confidence that he would grant my wish, if he could lend me a little money for an outfit, promising that I would return it in a very short time if I should be so fortunate as to obtain the situation.

I saw in a moment I had ventured too far, and I would have given anything to have unsaid these last words. He looked at me narrowly as he replied, "You are not sure of obtaining the situation." No, I was not. At this moment I did not feel sure of any thing. I had begun to doubt my ability to fill my situation—my self-respect faded as it came. It had gone, I knew not how or where, and the old demon of pride was roused again fiercer than ever. I was preparing to bid him a cold good-morning when he desired me to wait a minute, and, taking out his pocket-book, he unrolled a package of bank-bills, more in number than I had ever seen, and, presenting me a note, said, "Young women appear best in plain clothes, particularly when they select the patronage of the rich. It would be very unbecoming in you, Miss Ann, to present yourself for service tricked out in finery and furbelows. Sensible people would be prejudiced against you at once."

I think every drop of blood in my body rushed to my face at this, as I considered it, impertinent and cruel speech. Had he not eyes, and could he not see for himself the meanness of my attire? Had he not daughters—daughters whom my father's generosity enabled him to clothe in silk and jewels? Was not my family better born and bred than his? I did not take the bill I saw what it was—a two-dollar note. Could he thus insult the daughter of one who had been his benefactor at a time when he needed help? I did not take it, but, repeating my thanks for the letter, added, "With your opinion of what the daughters of respectable parents needs, I am only sorry to have asked a favor which, as you say, I may not be able to return." His look of blank amazement made the recollection of our interview almost ludicrous in spite of my vexation, and Belle had a hearty laugh over it. "I will make him eat his words some time," I said. "I feel that it would be motive enough to work and struggle only to place myself high enough to look down upon Squire Robinson and his whole family."

Impotent rage of poverty! What simpletons it makes of us!

Belle said I must get a letter also from the minister, and the next day I went alone to his study to ask for one. That visit changed the Marah in my heart to sweetness. "My dear child," said Parson Brooks "I honor your purpose, and I must do all I can to help you. I know many good people in Boston to whom I will write, that if you fail of getting the situation you hope for they may help you to find another. I suppose you are not unprepared for some annoyance and vexations. They are inevitable in any situation, but they will not seriously disturb your peace if you keep always in view the object for which you labor. My dear Ann, I have a father's sympathy for you. You remember my poor Helen. It seems but a little while ago that she left her home with the same purpose that now inspires you—to gain an honorable independence, and to provide for the declining years of her parents. Her career of usefulness was short, but she filled it well, God knows." Then, opening his desk, he began burying himself with his papers—I thought to hide his emotion quite as much as to answer any other end; but returned in a few moments to the spot where I sat, he handed me a letter, which he said he wished me not to read until I got home; and added, "I will write to my friends, and also send you the needful testimonials this evening, and may God bless you, my child! Think of me as a father, and if trouble or sorrow overtake you come to me." I could have kissed the hand that was extended to me, but the habit of restraint was too strong to be overcome by any sudden impulse. Yet I am sure he must have seen—he must have felt that I was grateful. I took the letter to my room and as I opened it a bill fell out—a twenty dollar note—as we money then I had ever owned before. So kind and considerate were the few lines accompanying it, I believed, while I read them, that my heart was so softened toward the whole world that I never should cherish resentment again—that my pride was conquered forever. We do not know how deeply rooted is the selfishness of our own hearts. How rich I felt the millionaire can not comprehend, unless he can remember the first lucky turn in the tide which led him on to fortune. With Belle's help I mean fitted out my wardrobe. I staid at home from church because I was too shy of being observed by my mates' booklet, but I contemplated with the childish delight with which I contemplated the various tasteful articles that were spread out upon the bed preparatory to packing. I tested the door and tried on the shoes another before the glass; and with what exultation I made the discovery that my foot looked lady-like and trig, in a neat fitting shoe, and that my form, although becoming honest, was a card of encouragement to itself. I am frank to confess it. I felt an honest satisfaction in the consciousness that I was handsome. But I must make my story short. I have an object in telling it, and will speak to the purpose.

BRITISH CONSULS.

The leaders of the Southern States seem likely to get themselves into trouble with Britain. They have, lately, in the most high handed manner, expelled from the Confederacy those persons acting as British Consuls in the different cities therein. The grounds upon which this has been done are, alike, frivolous and indefensible. The consul at Richmond, for instance, is charged with not submitting his commission for inspection, and with having made offensive remarks on the conduct of the Confederate Government with reference to the enlistment of two soldiers. The next is the case of the consul at Mobile. The Confederate Government did not find fault with him; but Lord John Russell did. He sent home the specie in a British man-of-war which was to pay the interest on the debt of the State of Alabama. For this, Lord John Russell censured the consul, because he considered what he had done had tended to aid one of the belligerents against the other. This action of Lord John Russell Mr. Benjamin, the Foreign Secretary of the Confederacy, resented. He wrote that he did not think that the efforts of the Confederate States to pay in specie the debts due neutrals should be construed into belligerent acts against their enemies. Upon this calm Lord Russell addressed a letter to Mr. Mason, the acknowledged agent of the Confederacy in London; in which he stated that the act of the consul at Mobile, in the eyes of Her Majesty's Government, was an act aiding one of the belligerents against the other; but stating that while, in his opinion, the Confederates were not bound to acknowledge authority from Lord Lyons, it was very desirable that persons authorized by Her Majesty should have the means of representing in Richmond and elsewhere the interests of British subjects, &c.

Lord Russell having recognised the South as belligerents had a right that the British consuls should be recognised by the defacto government without any further recognition on the part of Britain. In this opinion Mr. Mason coincided, but the Confederate government appeared to think otherwise. It was stated that the conduct of the British consuls could not be tolerated. This conduct so much complained of was their interference on behalf of British citizens, whose rights were, at times, most flagrantly violated. The consuls at Charleston and Savannah made themselves very conspicuous, and we may say very distasteful to the Jeff Davis government for thus discharging their duties. Indeed, the latter threatened that the European governments would, in concert take means to defend their subjects, if the Confederacy insisted on holding them liable to conscription. To this Mr. Benjamin answered: "The menace here implied would require no answer if it were not made professedly under instructions. It is scarcely necessary to say to you that the action of the President in repelling with decision any attempt by foreign officials to arrogate sovereign rights within our limits, or to interfere of their own authority with the execution of our laws, would not be affected in the slightest degree by representations from any source, however exalted. This is the only point on which the President has had occasion to act, and on this point there is no room for discussion."

The consuls in the different cities were, therefore summarily ordered to leave the Confederate territories as soon as possible. What action the British Government will take in the matter is yet uncertain. It can hardly help resenting such an outrage, not only upon the British Name but upon those established international usages, which regulate the intercourse of nations situated as Britain and the Confederate States at present are.

AMERICAN INVASION.

The whole American frontier has been ablaze with excitement during the past two weeks. The Governor-General of Canada communicated to the Washington Government the fact that there were, on the Canadian shores, thousands of Southern refugees and sympathisers who were meditating an attack upon Buffalo, Detroit and the other frontier towns. The Federal Secretary of War immediately telegraphed to the authorities of the threatened cities. Precautions were thereupon taken to defeat any such enterprise as was expected. The American papers were filled with stories of invasion, &c. We believe by this time, however, the excitement has subsided; and that, if there was any real cause of apprehension, it has passed away. The Americans are highly pleased with the action of the Canadian Government—showing, as it does, its determination to allow no hostile tricks within Canadian limits. We cannot help thinking, however, that the grounds of alarm, whatever they may have been, have been greatly exaggerated.

AMERICAN NEWS.

General Burnside seems to be all right. A letter to that effect was received from him on the 19th. Whether Bragg, who has recently been superseded, will [illegible] upon him or not, is still a matter of speculation. General Pleasonton is about to succeed Burnside, who has resigned through ill health. Sherman has at length joined Grant, who is thereby enabled to victorious Burnside. The army of the Potomac have at length broke up camp, and are making an advance movement. It is supposed that by this time, the whole army are beyond the Rapidan. If Meade has come up on Lee, there will have been a battle before this. It seems to be Meade's intention to force a battle, even if he has to go to Richmond. Lee's army, it is said, numbers about 50,000 or 60,000. Late accounts say that Lee is ready for Meade. General Banks's late expedition by water is said to be a great success. Brazos Island, Brownville, and Point Isabel, were captured, and are in his possession. The rebels threw away their guns and fled to San Antonio. No details or lists of casualties have been received at New Orleans. The reports of heavy fighting in western Louisiana had little foundation; in fact, nothing but slight skirmishing has taken place. The Federal forces were still in the vicinity of Vermillionville, and everything was quiet. The news from Charleston shows that General Gilmour and Admiral Dahlgreen mean mischief to that city. The monitors have got to work in earnest, and were endeavoring to open up the channel; incendiary shells had been fired into the streets, and there was every indication when the last telegram was sent that the Federal army and navy were about to try and carry the defences by a coup de main. In the meantime the Confederates are making desperate efforts to defend themselves. The next news from that point will be awaited with breathless interest.

EUROPEAN NEWS

It was reported that the British Admiralty had ordered the Kearsarge from Queenstown, it being believed that she was shipping men. Lord Palmerston's reception at the Lord Mayor's banquet was significantly enthusiastic. In his speech, he said England would have interfered in the American war, but it would have been useless. Mr. Villiers had been speaking in defence of the Federal Government. Paris telegrams say that Matamoras is not blockaded, but contraband of war is not allowed to land. The English Cabinet was considering the Emperor's proposition for a European Congress. The Duke Constantine had been relieved of his position as Lieutenant-Commander of Poland. The captain and crew of the Bold Hunter were landed at Teneriffe, after very hard treatment, and arrived in England on an African mail steamer. The King of Prussia had expressed an earnest wish for the termination of the differences between the Government and the Chambers. A new comet was discovered on the 14th ult., at Marseilles. The Empress of the French has been welcomed with brilliant fetes at Madrid. The anniversary of the battle of Leipsic was celebrated in Leipsic, and many other places in Germany. The Russians have threatened the Circassians with extermination if they do not submit. The German Diet has again, and in more explicit terms, directed that troops shall enter Holstein—an invasion which Denmark has declared that she will treat as an act of war. But in German affairs there is always a probability that their threats will end in mere talk. We are, therefore, willing to believe that the proposed folly and crime will not really be perpetrated.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Peterboro, Nov. 23, 1863.

Present his Worship the Mayor, and Messrs Toole, Lawson, Carlisle, Fry, Ormond, Nicholls, Clinton, Ryan, Douglas, Lundy, and Burnham.

The minutes of former meeting were read and confirmed.

Several accounts were referred to the committee on finance.

Petitions praying for the remission of taxes from Mrs. Jenkins, T. Cashman, J. Parnall and Mrs. Spencley, were also referred to committee on Finance and assessment.

Moved by Mr. Burnham, and seconded by Mr. Lundy, that the resolution moved and read at the last meeting of this Council relative to an advance of money in anticipation of the proceeds arising from the sale of Debentures for the erection of an engine-house and Lock-up be now reconsidered.—Lost.

On motion of Mr. Burnham, the Treasurer do and is hereby authorised and requested to pay the orders of the committee appointed to contract for and superintend the erection of the Lock-up and Engine House, or of any two of them out of the proceeds of the Debentures appropriated by this Council and directed to be sold for erection of such Lock-up and Engine House, as soon as such proceeds came into the hands of said Treasurer.—Carried.

The Treasurer was ordered to transmit the amount due the Municipal Loan Fund, to the Receiver General.

A By-law for preventing the erection of wooden Buildings was passed. Robert Rowe was appointed Inspector of Buildings.

The Council then adjourned.

ASHBURNHAM.

The denizens of our sister Village, fully alive to the advantages and interests of education, have erected an elegant and commodious School Room. It will be dedicated to its destined use this evening. Several of the Ministers of the Town, and others, will deliver addresses on the occasion.

That esteemed and tried friend of Educational progress, Rev. Mr. Allen, of Millbrook, is expected to be present. The intervals will be enlivened by sweet music by the St. John's Church Choir, under the management of T. Brown, Esq., who has kindly consented to aid in the evenings entertainment. We advise all who can possibly go, to be there.

The chair will be taken at 7 o'clock p.m.

DOUBTS.

In many of our exchanges we see articles headed "Rape," "Suicide," "Atrocious Conduct," &c., and the most revolting circumstances thereof minutely given. We have very grave doubts of the propriety of this—especially in those journals professing to be so extremely "high toned" as some of them do. When such things really do take place, we think that the chroniclers of them might easily select language much less prurient, (and equally pointed) than is generally the case. There are different ways of telling the same thing,—the matter-of-fact way and the sensation one. It is the last to which we object.

COUNTY COUNCIL.

This body met in special session on Tuesday the 17th instant; present, Peter Pearce, Esq., Warden; and Messrs. Birdsall, Crow, [illegible] Gilchrist, Carter, Metcalf, Wallace, McNabb and Hall.

The Council [illegible] making [illegible] and dispatch.

The Warden addressed the Council.

On motion of Mr. Ingram, the Warden's Address was referred to a Special Committee.

On motion of Mr. Grover, the sum of $20 was ordered to be expended on the Boundary Line between Belmont and Seymour.

On motion of Mr. Crow, the sum of $10 was ordered to be granted to finish the cutting down on the 1st Con. of Douro.

On motion of Mr. Ritchie the clerk was ordered to procure maps of the back townships for the use of the Council as they become settled.

A By-law uniting the new townships of Dysart, Gillford, Dudley, Harburn, Glamorgan, Monmouth, Cavendish, Anstruther, Chandos, Carlisle, Harcourt and Burton into various municipalities for municipal purposes, was passed.

Moved by Mr. Grover and seconded by Mr. Crow,—That the sum of $80 be presented to the Warden for his extra services for the current year.—Lost.

A By-law to provide for the payment of certain accounts and claims against the County was passed.

On motion of Mr. Galvin, the Warden was requested to write to the Commissioner of Crown Lands to ascertain the cause of delay of the re-survey of Burleigh and Harvey; and to ascertain whether the recommendation of the County Council for the appointment of Messrs. Reid & Clementi to make the survey, be carried out by the Government or not, according to appointment.

On motion of Mr. Ingram, the Warden was allowed $50 as compensation for extra services during the current year.

On motion of Mr. Ingram, the Warden and Treasurer were requested to draw from the Bank such sums as are necessary from time to time to be paid to the order of the Building Committee for the erection of the new jail, until the money accruing from the sale of the debentures be available.

On motion of Mr. Sullivan the Council granted the sum of $30 to aid the Council of Ennismore in sending the son of Wm. Shanagan to the charitable institution at Kingston he being a destitute deaf mute.

The Clerk was authorised to have the By-law authorising the issue of Debentures on the credit of the non-resident Land Fund, published as the law directs.

On motion of Mr. Crow, a vote of thanks was given to Peter Pearce Esq. Warden, for the very able and satisfactory manner in which he has conducted the business of this Council for the past year.

The Council then adjourned.

SMITH COUNCIL.

This Council met on Monday the 16th inst.; all the members present.

The minutes of last meeting were read and confirmed.

The Quarterly Report of the Inspector of Houses of Public Entertainment, was read and adopted.

A petition was presented, from Stephen Mann and eighteen others, praying that the Council do pass a By-law to provide for the closing up of the Road between Lot 15 and 16 in the 7th Concession of Smith.

A petition was presented from Eleazer Nicholls and eleven others, praying that no such By-law should be passed, as the closing up of said Road would be an inconvenience to many of the inhabitants in the neighborhood.

Moved by Mr. Dean and seconded by Mr. Hall,—That the petition of Eleazer Nicholls and eleven other be adopted.—Carried.

A petition was presented from James Fowler and fourteen others, praying that a portion of the West of Smith, in connection with a portion of the East of Emily be formed into a School Section. The petition was laid over.

A communication from the landholders of the Township of Harvey was read, stating the aid they requested in opening a Road between Lots 20 and 21 through the 17th, 18th and 19th Concessions of said Township.

Mr. Galvin stated that he had apportioned $20 out of the Road Monies for that purpose and that he would communicate with the parties forthwith.

A By-law was passed, appointing the following Officers to hold the Municipal Elections of the several rural Wards for the year 1864, viz.:—Jno. Black, for Ward No. 1; Wm. L. Seabell, for Ward No. 2; Thos. E. Bell, for Ward No. 3; W. J. McKibbon, for Ward No. 4; and Edward Sanderson for Ward No. 5; said elections to be held at the following places:—For Ward No. 1, at the S. House of S. S. No. 2; for Ward No. 2, at the S. House of S. S. No. 3; for Ward No. 3, at the Town Hall; for Ward No. 4, at the S. House of S. S. No. 6; and for Ward No. 5, at the S. House of S. S. No. 7.

Moved by Mr. Hall and seconded by Mr. Galvin,—That the Reeve do grant an order on the Treasurer in favor of Jno. Robinson for the sum of $20, being for constructing a Road between Lots 18 and 19 in the 4th Concession of Smith.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Dean and seconded by Mr. Garbutt,—That the Reeve and Mr. Galvin be deputed to obtain legal advice with respect to the payment of the School Rates in S. Section No. 1, Township of Smith.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Galvin and seconded by Mr. Hall,—That the Reeve do grant an order on the Treasurer in favor of Isaac Garbutt for the sum of $100, which, with the grant of the original allowance for Road between Lots 24 and 25 through part of the 9th Concession of Smith, being compensation in full for the site for Road established through part of Lot No. 25 in said 9th Concession.

Smith, 18th Nov., 1863.

Federal Prisoners.

The Federals, knowing that their prisoners are poorly "provisioned," have made arrangements to send them food; to which the Confederate authorities, in return for the kind manner in which their prisoners have been treated by the North, have agreed. Already considerable quantities of good wholesome food have been sent. This is distributed the the prisoners by a committee of Federal officers (prisoners) appointed for the purpose. Medical stores are being added to to the supplies now being prepared for the prisoners. Federal agents are not allowed to accompany the stores beyond the enemy's lines, Confederate commissioners taking charge when the flag-of-truce boats meet.

Scottish Provincial Assurance Co'y.

We would direct attention to the advertisement of this Company to be found in our columns of this morning. It gives us pleasure to state that we do so on the best authority, that the operations of this Company in Canada have been eminently successful. Before, also, it was called the amount of business transacted in our Province under the able superintendence of R. B. Walton has been very large. Although less than five years have elapsed since Mr. Davidson Parker assumed the general management of the business in this Province, we are informed that during the last year alone, Life Policies were issued in Canada for nearly one hundred and twenty thousand pounds sterling ($600,000) a large amount considering the great and increasing competition offered by rival Companies.

In closing these remarks, we may give the subjoined extract from the London Insurance Record, of 23rd ult. The article has reference to the claims set forth by one Company as against a rival, and more immediately to the oft complained of non-production of proper and full balance sheets. It will be observed that the Company now under consideration is singled out as honorable exception to the general category. It states:

"The great advantage the claimant, in the "present instance, has over his rival is that "he publishes to the world, in the form of a "Balance Sheet, all the facts essential to the "formation of a sound judgment. He not "only tells the truth, but the whole truth "and probably nothing but the truth; while, "with the solitary exception, we believe, of "the Scottish Provincial Assurance Company, we may seek in vain for a Scottish "Balance Sheet. The assured must rest "content with the dictum of the actuary as "to the financial position of their office. "Although there is no reason to suspect any "want of honesty, it cannot be equally satisfactory those who are investing with them "their hardly earned savings."

LITERARY NOTICES.

BRITISH AMERICAN MAGAZINE.

We have, inadvertently, omitted to notice this Magazine for November before. It is, however, as replete with good things as ever. We are happy to find that it is rapidly working itself into popular favor. Every family should have a copy on their table.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK.

The inimitable "Godey" has again made its appearance. How the proprietor gets up the splendid plates and gives all the interesting reading matter the Magazine contains, for the sum, he does, is a puzzle to us. We guess, however, the solution is the immense circulation. What lady can do without Godey? Now is the time to get it. See our terms.

ALMANAC.

Messrs. Cox & Davidson have sent us the Canadian Almanac for 1864. To say that it is equal to its predecessors is only giving it praise it has a right to. It has now become an institution. Price 12½ cents.

The Scottish American Journal is as spicy and vigorous as ever.

YORK ROADS.

Mr. James Beatty, of the Leader, proves himself to be no mean scheemer. He understands the business well. The evidence before the Sheriff, at Toronto, on the York Roads, is, as every one who has read it must confess, of a most remarkable nature. It makes known things that the public little dreamt of. It shows that Mr. James Beatty made sham sales, to his employees—men, of straw—of stones, of houses, of horses, &c. He transferred stock to Mr. William Beatty, his brother; but all the time pocketed the dividends himself. It was with some difficulty that the books of the Company would be procured; but they were at last produced in Court, when the Sheriff seized them. The Leader man will, we would think, have some trouble in making the County believe, as he would fain have it. It was about time for the Government to take the matter into its own hands. The matter is unsettled yet.

HON. MR. McGEE'S LECTURE.

This gentleman lectured in Corltes & Stevenson's hall on Thursday evening last. The hand-bills announced as his subject the "Future of Canada." We are glad of this, for otherwise we would have been unable, from what we heard, to tell our readers what the subject was. Of the "Future of Canada" we heard little if anything. We think that the feeling of his auditors was one of disappointment. It may be that they expected too much; but we have heard those who have listened to Mr. McGee on previous occasions say that his lecture was unequal to his former efforts. Mr. McGee, the Parliamentary Orator, and Mr. McGee, the Lecturer, must be two different persons. At the same time, we must say that the hon. gentleman's lecture was altogether free from party spirit, and some parts of it—especially that upon the "press"—were both interesting and instructive.

Steamboat Disaster.

A terrible disaster has just occurred to the steamer Sunny Side, opposite Island No. 16, twenty-six miles below New Madrid. The boat caught fire from sparks from the chimney, which ignited the cotton cargo. She was run ashore and her engines kept working in order to hold her to the bank. The exit from the boat being insufficient many of the passengers were obliged to jump overboard, several of them were drowned. The scene is described as most terrible. Of thirteen females only four escaped, and of eight children six were lost. About thirty passengers in all were drowned or buried. Passengers lost everything they possessed.

MR. BEECHER.

This gentleman reached home on the 15th instant. He was enthusiastically received by his friends. He refuses, for the present, to lecture before any society for money. He will, however, make public addresses in two or three of the principal cities, on condition that the entire proceeds shall be appropriated for the benefit of the sick and wounded soldiers, or in some other way for the benefit of the cause for which he battled in England. From this time until January he will deliver no lecture on private contract under any inducement whatever.

EXODUS.

The Montreal Witness complains of the scarcity of labourers now in Montreal, owing to great inducements held out to them to go the United States. The soldiers are employed to load at the wharf, and the Police Office misses many of its familiar faces.

....They do up things rapidly in California. The other day Mr. C. and a young lady fifteen years old, ran away and got married. Six weeks afterwards an old lover of Mrs. C. came back from the mines with a pocket full of rocks, and she ran away with him. Mr. C. is disconsolate, or was at the last dates.

....The U. S. Presbyterians of California at their last Synod gave a deliverance on the subject of dancing in which they maintain "that no member of our Church can, in any way, encourage promiscuous dancing without compromising his Christian character, and violating most solemn and sacred and solemn obligations."

....A scandalous story has been occupying some space in the late English papers, concerning no less a person than the Prime Minister, a gentleman of 79 years of age, who is, it is said, dragged into the divorce court as co-respondent in the case of a man named Kane and his wife. Kane and a lawyer of doubtful character, who advertises to lend money and conduct bankrupt and divorce cases confidentially, are suspected of a conspiracy in this manner to extort money from Lord Palmerston.

The San Francisco Pacific has frequently referred to the dangers and temptations of children and youth in California and to the increase of insubordination and vice among them. Much of the evil is attributed to the want of religious influence in the family and in school. All religious instruction is excluded from the common schools, and many parents are indifferent to religion; the children are receiving a merely secular education, and a vast number of youth are found in saloons, theatres and other objectionable places. The matter is of great importance everywhere, for when large numbers of the youth of any community are exposed to evil influence. the result must be disastrous to public morality, not only at the present moment but in coming years.

Austrian Finances.—The Austrian Finance Minister has laid a bill before the Reichsrath for authorising a loan of 96,000,000) of florins (£9,600,000 sterling.) Of this sum 30,000,000 are to be applied for the relief of the distress in Hungary, 12,000,000 for the withdrawal from circulation of the small paper money, 20,000,000 for the redemption of the salt-mine, notes, and 33,500,000 to cover the deficit.

GRAND WEDDING.

The Senator (and ex-Governor) Sprague, of Rhode Island was married a couple of months ago, at Washington, to Miss Kate Chase, the accomplished daughter of the National Secretary of Treasury. Another pupose despite the marriage as having been a dazzling affair. Over five guests were present; among whom were the President, the members of Cabinet, Lady Lyons, Count Mascras, and other notables, home and foreign. Bishop Clark, of Rhode Island, performed the ceremony. They started next day on their honeymoon tour.

Packet Ship Burned.

The American Packet ship Anneson, Captain H. B. Hovey, of E. K. Morgan's line of London Packets, while lying at anchor in Margate Roads, on Tuesday, November 3rd, took fire and was destroyed. She was bound from London to New York, with forty passengers and a cargo of 230 tons of coal, and a quantity of railroad iron. The passengers and crew were all saved, and landed at Dover on the 4th inst. Nothing was saved of the cargo and vessel.

That Russian Ball.

The N. Y. Observer, referring to the grand ball to the Russian officers, says that in the midst of a war such as the world scarcely ever saw, and such as our country certainly never endured, and while Russia is trying to crush out the last hope of Freedom in Poland, with whom the sympathies of the entire Christian world are enlisted, it seems out of character to make a jubilant ovation, like this grand ball, in honor of these foreign officers.

MR. RAYMOND.

We see that the return of Mr. Raymond, who was, a short time ago, elected over Mr. Papineau for St. Hyacinthe, is about to be protested again, on the grounds of bribery, &c. If half told be true, Mr. Raymond ought to be unseated.

PETERBOROUGH RELIEF SOCIETY

A meeting of the above Society, will be held, by permission of His Worship the Mayor, in the Town Hall, on Wednesday next, December 2nd, at 3 o'clock p.m.

A full attendance is particularly desired.

NEW BANK IN LINDSAY.

We see by the Lindsay Post, that the Ontario Bank is about to open a branch in Lindsay. We are glad to see this sign of the increasing business of our sister town.

London.—The official census returns of the city of London published, show that only 750,000 out of 1,750,000 of its population were born there; the majority of the permanent residents having come in from the rural counties to push their fortunes in the metropolis. Of the 20,000,000 of persons who compose the population of England and Wales, over 2,000,000 were born in London, so that great numbers of regular "Cockneys" have emigrated to other parts to make room in the city for their country cousins. The increase of the population of the city for ten years (1851 to 1861) was 121 daily, or 847 a week; and as the excess of births over deaths was only about 72 daily, it is to be inferred that nearly 50 persons settled every day in the city over the number of those who migrated to other places. Every county in England has contributed its quota to the population of the capital—Kent leading the list, and Essex coming next; the respective figures being 77,878 and 71,101.

Harvest.—The result of the harvest in Canada for the year, 1863, is now pretty well ascertained, and well-informed parties express the opinion that the crop of this year, taken as a whole, will, probably, bring in more money than that of any former season. Barley and oats, which are the staple cereals of Lower Canada, and which are extensively cultivated in Upper Canada, have been excellent crops, and they are bringing very high prices. Peas another crop very generally cultivated have been good, and are bringing fair prices. Wheat has been an unequal crop and is selling low; but the deficiency will, it is thought, be more than compensated by the increased returns from barley and oats.

Wesleyans in England.—The Wesleyan Missionary Jubilee was held in the city of Leeds last month. During the series of public meetings which occupied a week's time, subscriptions amounting to $180,000 were handed in for church purposes; thirteen gentlemen giving $5,000 each. It is anticipated that from $1,500,000, to $2,000,000 will be raised from the Jubilee subscriptions held simultaneously throughout England, and it is intimated that a theological institution will be erected near Leeds for the exclusive training of students to act as missionaries, besides the establishment of funds to provide for disabled missionaries, and to extend the missionary works in India, China, and elsewhere.

Mexico.—The Mexican guerrillas are continuing the war against the French with great energy. Even the road from Vera Cruz to Mexico is anything but safe. Gen. Liceago, a renegade Mexican, had taken possession of Jalapa without resistance; but on the next day Mexican forces interposed themselves between him and Vera Cruz, and no tiding have been heard from him since. The French army has been divided into three divisions, at the head of which is Gen. Miramon. In an engagement near Tampico the French were defeated with a loss of 90. A French force of 400 soldiers in Tampico were completely surrounded by the Mexicans.

Spiritualism.—The following particulars appear at some length in many English papers:—The son of a Bristol physican was returning home from a foreign medicial appointment, and died on board ship. The captain wrote to the father to inform him of the death, and sent £22, which he said the young man had with him. Some time afterward a spiritualist then in London, informed the doctor that his son was poisoned, and had £70 when he died. Upon this the father procured a copy of the ship's log, which was found to differ materialy from the captian's statments, the ultimate result being that the whole affair has been put into the hands of an eminent criminal lawer.

Perhaps so, and then again perhaps not.—Perhaps you have a cough; then buy a box of Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers. But perhaps you have not; then buy a box. You may need them when you least expect it. Only 25 cents.

A Young Widow in the Market!—The Montreal Advertiser contains the following advertisement:—"A young Widow, aged 21, "the mistress of a very fine establishment, "good looking, accomplished, of a very "sweet temper, and without any encumbrance, wishes to correspond with a gentleman of similar qualities, with a view to matrimony. A liberty character preferred.

"Please address, enclosing photograph, "which will be returned, if desired, M. B. E., "Post Office, Montreal."

Now is the time for our Peterborough young Widowers and old Bachelors.

Why will you Suffer.—The "Canadian Pain Destroyer" instantly and permanently restores all pains from the system, and is decidedly the best medicine known for the cure of rheumatism, pleurisy, neuralgia, tic douloureux, toothache, cholic, burns, frost bites, &c., and is so cheap that all can afford to buy it. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

Benevolent Women.—The census commissioners found in 1861, among the women of England, 10 bankers, 9 money-lenders, 274 commercial clerks, 25 commercial travellers, 54 brokers, 39 merchants, 29 farriers, 419 printers, 3 shepherds, 43,963 out-door agricultural labourers; 13 ladies were doctors, 2 were bonesetters, 6 were reporters or shorthandwriter, 3 parish clerks, 4 choristers, 4 teachers of elocution, 17 dentists, 2 knackers, 4 conjurers, one astronomer, 8 "naturalists."

Emigration to New York.—The Emigration Commissioners met on Wednesday afternoon. The number of emigrants arrived last week was 1,600, making the whole number since January 1st, 140,526, against 88,294 to the corresponding date last year, or more than one hundred per cent more.

An Iron-Clad at the Bottom.—A severe rain storm has prevailed at San Francisco for several days past, doing considerable damage to shipping. The ship Aquilla, from New York, with the iron-clad Camanche on board as cargo, stove in her bottom on Monday night, and sank in forty feet of water.

A brakesman on the B. & L. H. Railway, named John Soles was killed last week. He was on the top of one of the cars while the train was going from Paris to Brantford, and his head came in contact with a bridge. The death was instantaneous.

The "Evening Journal" comes regularly to hand. It is rapidly taking its high place among its city contemporaries. Judging from its advertisements it must be pretty popular.

Our readers will find the story commenced on our first page a good one—equal, if not superior, in many respects, to even the last one.

Several articles appear in the present issue that were intended for the last, but were crowded out.

We would invite special attention to our terms, to be found elsewhere. See advertisement.

We would call attention to Mr. Holt's advertisement in another column.

We call the attention of Masons to the Notice of Meeting, in another column.

The Suez Canal is becoming a formidable nuisance. It hindres the growth of Egyptian cotton, and, consequently, the prosperity of Egyptian labourers. The cotton pays sumptuously, and all the labourers wish to work at it; but the Suez fanatics insist on their 20,000 labourers, which is no little drain on the cotton-growing population. The Viceroy, who sowed about 4,000 acres last year in cotton, is said to have planted 19,000 this year, and so have offered to supply the people gratuitously with seed, and he hopes next year will see 70,000 to 100,000 acres under cultivation.—Spectator.

IN MEMORIAM.

LINES WRITTEN ON THE ANNIVERSARY OF THE DEATH OF "M. H."—"WHO BEING DEAD YET SPEAKETH."

I.

Oh, send for him, Mother, while yet I have breath,
Ere my senses are deadened by pain and by Death;
Oh let me but hear his loved voice again,
Who taught me to trust in the Lamb that was slain.
Who raised up my thoughts to that kingdom above,
Where God and his Christ reign in realms of love;
And ransomed immortals exultingly sing—
Hosannas of praise to their Saviour and King.

II.

Send, send for my Classmates, oh, Mother most dear,
Let them see me rejoicing—no longer in fear;
For I know that my Saviour, to its Heavenly goal—
Will welcome with joy my emancipate soul.
How enticing the prospect! No grief shall be known,
In that land where Life's waters gush forth from the Throne;
Where Christs bright effulgence illumines the skies,
And Our Father himself wipes the tears from all eyes.
Then send for them, Mother, Oh, tell them to come,
Ere the soul of their sister has fled to its home.

* * * * * * * *

III.

Oh, welcome, dear Teacher, to you it was given,
To guide a lost lamb to the sheep-fold of Heaven;
And though my vile dust shall lie 'neath the sod,
My living soul's incense shall commend the to God.
For in faith has he promised to bless every one—
Who a wanderer brings to the arms of his Son,
Then happy are they for as stars shall they shine—
For ever in Heaven with radiance divine.

IV.

And welcome to you, dear friends of my heart,
A farewell I breathe, are to him I depart;
Weep! weep not for me—there is joy where I go,
Rather weep for yourselves, who are travailing below.
Though I joy to be taken; Oh, make me more blest,
By a promise to me—my last dying request;
Oh, soothe, the sad hour of parting's dark gloom.
By the bright hope of meeting beyond the cold tomb.

V.

Then promise me, dear ones, by holiest tryst
To live through your lives for the glory of Christ:
The promise is given—
The last adieu taken—
'Mid the glories of Heaven—
Her south doth awaken—
And triumph is her's, for Jesus has now
Placed a garland of light on her glorified brow.

Communications.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Sir,—I notice with pleasure that of late you have been directing your attention to the affairs of the Town of Peterborough. There was and there is still much need of this; and I am glad to find at least one paper independent enough to speak out and tell the people the truth. It is high time this was done. And high time that the dishonesty and selfishness of some of our Councillors were exposed. And high time that the rate-payers knew that to gratify spite and malicious feelings at least one Councillor would sacrifice all the best interests of the Town; and that there are three or four other Councillors who, if they possess any judgment, do not exercise it, but servilely follow other and mislead him. I believe, Mr. Editor that I can truly say of the majority of our Town Councillors that they have shown themselves unworthy of the confidence of the rate-payers, and unworthy of a seat in the Council; and I do most sincerely trust that the people have had such a lesson this year as will teach them to see to it that next year we shall see our town represented by better and more honest men.

Just look, for instance, at their conduct in reference to the Lock-up and Engine House. All parties admit that such a building is not only wanted but that its existence is indispensible. Indeed, I believe all the Council is agreed upon this point) and yet, because a portion of the Councillors could not have their own way, and be allowed to spend some seven or eight hundred pounds upon a building designed, not to serve the real wants of the Town, but to serve their own selfish ends, they, forsooth, now declare that it is wrong to erect any building at all—and so our fire engine and apparatus, which cost us some five hundred pounds, may go to ruin, and our noble and generous Fire Company may meet and transact their business out upon the street. And I am told it is a fact that the engine is becoming rapidly spoilt, and that in the event of a fire it would be comparatively useless. But what do those Councillors I refer to care so long as they can prevent the erection of the proposed building, and so long as they can gratify their own selfish and reckless feelings, and so long as one of their number can have it to say that his spite and malice have triumphed. And what a humiliating sight it was to see one of that party lately stand up in his place in the Council, when a resolution relative to the Lock-up and Engine House was under discussion, and hear him say that he regretted the vote he was about to give upon the question, that he knew he was doing wrong, but, nevertheless, having voted with his party so far he would continue to vote with it, and he should, therefore, vote against the resolution. And that is a fair specimen of his conduct and the conduct of his party all through the year. The consequence is that the building is unfinished, and soon it will be too late to complete it; and then the people will be asked to pay for a new fire engine because of the destruction of the present most excellent one, just for want of a place in which to put it.

But after all the rate-payers are just served right. If we have a bad Council, if the business of the Town is badly managed, if some £18,000 of our Railway money has been squandered and lost to the Town, whose fault is it but the fault of the rate-payers. What care do they take to elect good and honest Councillors? What supervision and control do they attempt to exercise over them after they are elected? Absolutely none. Go into the Council chamber during the sittings of the Council, as I occasionally do, and you will verify my words, that the people do not take any interest in their own affairs—do not attend the sittings of the Council, and therefore know absolutely nothing of what is going on. And Councillors know this, and know that, act as bad as they will the rate-payers will be none the wiser of it. And so they plot, and scheme, and serve their own purposes, and the man who ventures to expose them is persecuted and abused, and the people look on and encourage them in so doing

Mining News.—The developements in the Lake Superior region more than justify the high opinion we have expressed from time to time in these columns. One of the proprietors was visiting the property a few days ago, in company with a gentleman from Toronto, and going along the bank of the river—which was unusually low—observed the peculiar appearance of the rock between low and high water-mark. Chipping a piece off with an old axe he happened to have on hand, he found it full of copper ore. Examining further, they found it was a regular vein; it had precisely the appearance of the other veins already explored, and was between twenty-five and thirty feet in width! This makes the third vein of immense width that has been found within a distance of a quarter of a mile, besides several others of apparently equal width which have been partially explored. But the superstitious region is by no means confined to that immediate neighborhood; at two places just within the township of Belmont, very successful operations are being carried on under the personal direction of Captain Williams; one by Mr. W. H. Rose, of Thurlow, the other—by Messrs. Franck, Starling & Co., of Belleville. These are both along the same river on which the Lake mines are situate, and with other indications, lead to the opinion that the copper bearing rocks follow the course of that stream. We also learn that a company from Belleville has purchased a lead mine which is considered very promising, situate in the rear of Marmora, and about six miles this side of the Lake copper mines, and intend to push on the working of it immediately. All these things laying just behind the Marmora and Belmont iron beds, must push them into the market.—Hastings Chronicle.

Runaway Story.—Upwards of 30 years ago a marriage took place in this neighborhood, (Liverpool) the man and wife being in humble circumstances. After living together till after the birth of a child, the husband went to Australia to seek his fortune. His wife never heard from him after he left her, and, supposing he was dead, on the lapse of 7 years she married a widower with three children. To this number in her second married life she added five, making her whole family, including the child by the first husband, nine in all. Some time since the second husband died, and she was left to struggle with her large family. To her great surprise at the beginning of the present year her first husband made his appearance at Liverpool. During his 30 years' absence he had prospered in Australia, and was a large landed proprietor there. He had heard of his wife's second marriage, but as the fault was his he never thought of returning to England until he heard to the second husbandss death. To make amends for his former neglect of his wife—for notwithstanding her second marriage she was still his wife—he behaved in the most handsome manner to all her children, gave them costly outfits and has taken them and the wife of his early affections out with him to the land of his adoption. The wife, who has thus, after an absence of more than 30 years, been restored to her position is about 70 years of age; and so recent is their departure from this port, that the vessel in which they sailed is not out of the channel.—Mercury.

RELIEF IN TEN MINUTES.

BRYAN'S

PULMONIC WAFERS.

The most certain and speedy remedy ever discovered as for all Diseases of the Chest and Lungs, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, Bronchitis, Influenza, Hoarseness, Difficult breathing, Sore throat &c., &c., &c.

These WAFERS give the most instantaneous and perfect relief and when persevered with according to directions, never fail to effect a rapid and lasting cure. Thousands have been restored to perfect health who have tried other means in vain. To all classes and all constitutions they are equally a blessing and a cure—none need despair, no matter how long the disease may have existed, or however severe it may be, provided the organic structure of the vital organs is not hopelessly decayed. Every one afflicted should give them an impartial trial.

To Vocalists and Public Speakers, these Wafers are peculiarly valuable; they will in one day remove the most severe occasional hoarseness; and their regular use for a few days will, at all times, increase the power and flexibility of the voice, greatly improving its tone, compass and clearness, for which purpose they are regularly used by many professional vocalists

"PETERBOROUGH EXAMINER,"

Only $1 Per Year in Advance.

What family should be without Godey's Lady's Book? It costs $3.00 a year. We will, however, furnish both the EXAMINER and Lady's Book for $3.75 [illegible]: both for 25 cents less than what you pay for the LADY'S BOOK alone. Or, to every subscriber paying in advance we will, for an extra 75 cents, furnish Madame Demorest's Mirror of Fashions, and Quarterly Journal de Grande Mode, each number of which contains large and magnificent Fashion Plates, splendid illustrations of all the fashionable and Paris novelties, for Ladies' and Children's Dress, useful information, and the four life-size Patterns, cut ready for use, etc., etc. It should be remembered that each yearly subscriber to Mme. Demorest's Mirror of Fashions is entitled to the selection of 50 cents' worth of extra patterns, or a copy of Mme. Demorest's System for cutting Children's Dresses, or for 50 cents more, the Ladies' System. That is, for 75 cents, we will give to every subscriber of the EXAMINER paying in advance, $1.50 worth. More than this, we will likewise pay the American postage, which is no small item. Those who have paid in advance are entitled to the same privilege. Poetry.

I'd have not Gifts such as these.

Give me not the World's pomp and parade
Place me not on a throne for a seat
With a world to pay homage to me,
And a nation to bow at my feet

Give me neither the diamonds that glitter
Like dew drops among the leaves
Nor the riches that makes up a kingdom
No! I'd have not gifts such as these:

Give me neither the follies nor pleasures
That lure the thoughtless and gay;
Oh, no, brighter things than these I'd have Pleasure more lasting than they,

I would have a true heart to love,
Some friends that would shed a tear,
Some one to forgive—to forget,
Some one this lone spirit to cheer.

Some one who has sorrows to share.
Some one who has joys to divide,
A heart to blend with mine own,
And a bosom in which to confide.

Varieties.

Somebody says there are two kinds of family jars; into one you put your sweetmeats, and the other you put—your foot.

The editor of a country paper, in speaking of a newly invented "metallic coffin," says they are fast coming into fashion, and are highly recommended by those who have used them.

"I'm afraid that you do not practice much self-denial," said a parson to a pretty miss in Newport. "Nay, but I do," said she; "for every day I fall in love with pretty young men, whom I want to kiss most sadly; but I deny my self that pleasure"

"MAMMA," said a sharp little fellow, whose mother had forbade him drawing horses and ships on the mahogany sideboard with a sharp nail—"Mamma, this ain't a nice house. At Sam Rockatt's we can cut the sofa, and pull out the hair, and ride the shovel and tongs over the carpet, but here we can't get any fun at all."

A MAN with a very red face, and looking rather shabby, called at a house in the country, on Sunday, and asked for a drink of cider. The good lady of the house refused, telling him that she would not. He urged, telling her that she had better, for some persons had entertained angels unawares. "Yes," said she, "I know that; but angles don't go about drinking cider on Sunday."

A gentleman in the West Indies, who had frequently promised his friends to leave off drinking without their discovering any improvement, was one morning called on early by an intimate friend, who met his negro boy at his door. "Well, Sambo," said he "where is your master?" "Massa gone out, sure," was the reply. "And has he left off drinking yet?" rejoined the first. "Oh, yes, sure," said Sambo, "massa leave off drinking—he leave off two, tree time dis morning."

MAKING THE MATTER PLAIN. A colored divine, in speaking of a reformed infidel, wound up his description thus:—"De last word dat dis dying man was heard to say; de last word he was known to speak; de last word he ebber pronounced; de last syllable he ebber breaved; de last word he was noticed to utter; de last idea he ebber ejaculated—yes, my brederen, de berry last he was ebber known to breave forth, sound, or articulate was—g-l-o-r-y!"

Cultivation of Land by Steam.

We gather some interesting particulars of the results of steam ploughing on English farms from a paper by Mr. John Algernon Clark, printed in the Royal Agricultural Society's journal. He proves that steam tillage is cheaper, more expeditious and more efficient than horse tillage. Stiff lands can be worked with the steam-plough at a time when the horses could not walk upon them; the hard-pan, formed by the horses' feet, as they tramp over the ground before the plough and harrow, is avoided; the soil is more thoroughly cultivated; and, what is very important to the farmer, he is able to do a great deal of work in a short time, and thus to utilize a few fine days. A steam-plough accomplishes in a day the work of from ten to twelve, or even thirty or forty horses. The engine does not tire as animals do, and readily consents to overwork; nor does it eat, except when it works. It is quite possible to plough even by moonlight. The signals are given to the engine man by lanterns, and the ploughman and potter-boy can see their work well enough by common moonlight. However, the steam plough breaks up the soil to the depth of ten inches as easily as a horse-plough goes five inches deep; and the result is a constant and great improvement of the land thus treated. It is drained better, through the breaking up of the subsoil, and instances are frequent where waste and poor lands become fertile and productive by means of such thorough cultivation. Mr. Clark gives the testimony of a number of farmers who found their wheat heavier, and the yield increased by six or eight bushels per acre. By successive years of steam culture the lands become lighter and more easily worked; and so great is the increased worth of the crops, several farmers testify that their lands have grown in value one third through the use of steam. It is a fact that some farmers have made fortunes by selling off their horses and getting themselves a steam horse; and many have transformed stiff clay lands into garden soils. It is on stiff clay that this force can be used to the greatest profit and advantage. The question of cost is of course one which must rule, to a great extent with farmers everywhere. Where no costly an instrument as a reaper and mower finds buyers, however, expenses will not form a serious obstacle if once men are convinced that, to use a homely phrase, they "can get their money back." English farmers have proved that great holdings are not necessary. The most successful experiment on record is on a hundred-acre place, where an eight-horse common portable engine is used. This last mentioned apparatus—plough, engine and all necessary gearing—cost about $2,500. He sold off, on introducing steam, three horses, with implements, for which he received $665, and the result of his operations were such that in less than two years he cleared off the remaining outlay, and had his machinery in good order and free of cost.

In some cases neighboring farmers club together and buy an engine for use in common. This can be done to good advantage, as the steam-plough works so fast and is so arranged as to be readily removed from place to place over common roads. The benefits of such a plan are greater than appear at first sight. For instance, two farmers purchased together an engine and plough which cost them three thousand dollars. But they sold off twelve of their sixteen horses, for which they received at the rate of one hundred and twenty-five dollars for each horse.

SOLDIERS in the ARMY!

AND OUR PEOPLE AT HOME,

Are now offered an opportunity by which they can obtain a

GOOD AND DURABLE TIME-PIECE,

At a very Low Figure.

OUR WATCHES are warranted to keep time one year, and the buyer is allowed the privilege of examination before the payment is required.

Improved-Duplex in full Ruby Actions.

A first-class Hunting Time-Piece of silver material, over which is electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, most durably wrought, making the imitation so faultless that it cannot be detected from the solid material by the most experienced Judges; acids will not affect it. London made movement. Improved Duplex in full Ruby Actions has sweep seconds, and is not to be excelled in general appearance. This decidedly the one of the best articles ever offered for traders and speculators. Engineers, emigrants and persons travelling will find them superior to any other; alteration of climate will not affect their accuracy. Price, packed in good shape and good running order, only $25, or case of 6 for $200.

Silver Double Time Hunting Levers,

Best quality silver cases, over which electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, similar to our improved Duplex, and superior adjusted movements with "stop," to be used in timing horses, ect.; has four ludexes for Washington and Greenwich time, sweep second, and all the improvements. All in all, taking its beautiful and faultless appearance and its superior movement into consideration, we regard it as decidedly the cheapest article of the kind in the market. Price, in good running order, $35, or case of 6 for $200.

☞ We ask no pay in advance, but will forward either of them to responsible parties, to any part of the loyal States, with bill payable to the express-man when the Good are delivered, giving the buyer the privilege of examination, and, if not satisfactory, the watch can be returned at our expense.

The express companies refuse making collections on soldiers, and other parties in the disloyal States, consequently all such orders must be accompanied by the cash to insure attention We make a deduction on either Watch when the payment is forwarded in advance.

Money may be sent by express at our expense.

MANHOOD
AND THE
VIGOR OF YOUTH RESTORED
IN FOUR WEEKS,
By Dr. Sicotte's Essence of Life.

DR. SICOTTE, (OF PARIS) after years of earnest solicitation, has at length acceded to the urgent request of the American public, and appointed an agent in Toronto for the sale of his valued and highly prized Essence of Life. This wonderful agent will restore Manhood to the most shattered constitutions, whether arising from excesses, the effects of climate, or natural causes. The time required to cure the most invaterate case is four weeks; and if used according to printed instructions, which are very simple, failure is impossible. This life-restoring remedy should be taken by all about to marry, as its effects are permanent. It is acknowledged by the medical press to be the greatest discovery ever made. Its developing powers are miraculous. Success in every case is as certain as that science overthrows ignorance.

Dr. Sicotte's Essence of Life is sold in cases, with full instructions for use, at $3, or four quantities in one for $9, and will be sent to any part, carefully packed, on receipt of remittance to his accredit agent.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK,

For 1864.

GREAT LITERARY & PICTORIAL YEAR.

THE PUBLISHER of Godey's Lady's Book thankful to that public which has enabled him to publish a Magazine for the last thirty-four years of a larger circulation than any in America, has made an arrangement with the most popular authoress in this country—

MARION HARLAND,

Author on of "Alone," "Hidden Path," "Miriam," "Moss Side," and "Nemesis,"

Who will furnish Stories for the Lady's Book for 1864. This alone will place the Lady's Book in a literary point of view fare ahead of any other Magazine. Our other favourite writers will all continue to furnish articles throughout the year.

The best Lady's Magazine in the world and the Cheapest.

THE LITERATURE

Is of that kind that can be read aloud in the family circle, and the clergy in immense numbers are subscribers for the Book.

THE MUSIC

Is all original, and would cost 25 cents, (the price of the Book) in the music stores; but most of it is copyrighted, and cannot be obtained except in Godey.

OUR STEEL ENGRAVINGS.

All efforts to rival us in this have ceased, and we now stand alone in this department, giving as we do many more and infinitely better engravings than are published in any other work. Godey's immense double sheet Fashion-Plates, containing from five to seven full length colored Fashions on each plate—other Magazines give only two—are far ahead of any Fashions in Europe or America. The publication of these Plates cost $10,000 more than the Fashion Plates of the old style, and nothing but our wonderfully large circulation enables us to give them. Other Magazines cannot afford it. We never spare money when the public can be benefited.

These Fashions may be relied on. Dresses may be made after them, and the wearer will not subject herself to ridicule, as she would be if she visited the large cities dressed after the style of the plates in some of our so-called Fashion Magazines.

OUR WOOD ENGRAVINGS,

Of which we give twice or three times as many as any other Magazine, are often mistaken for steel; they are so far superior to any others

IMITATIONS.

Beware of them. Remember that the Lady's Book is the original publication and the cheapest. If you take Godey, you want no other Magazine. Everything that is useful or ornamental in a house will be found in Godey.

DRAWING LESSONS.

No other Magazine gives them, and we have given enough to fill several large volumes.

OUR RECEIPTS

Are such as can be found nowhere else. Cooking in all its varieties—Confectionary—the Nursery—the Toilet—the Laundry—the Kitchen Receipts upon all subjects are to be found in the pages of the Lady's Book. We originally started this department, and have peculiar facilities for making it most perfect. This department alone is worth the price of the book.

LADIES' WORK TABLE.

This department comprises engravings and descriptions of every article that a lady wears.

MODEL COTTAGES.

No other Magazine has this department.

Terms to Subscribers in the British Provinces:

One copy one year, $3; two copies one year, $5; three copies one year, $7.

Five copies one year, and an extra copy to the person sending the club, making six copies for $11.50.

Specimen Clubbing with other Magazines.

Godey's Lady's Book and Arthur's Magazine, one year, $4.

Godey and Harper, one year, $5.

Godey, Harper, and Arthur, one year, $7.

At these prices subscribers in the Provinces will have only the British postage to pay.

Treasury notes and notes of all solvent banks taken at par.

Be careful and pay the postage on your letter.

Herrick's Sugar Coated Pills,

CHILDREN CRY FOR THEM!

THIS remarkable American remedy is carrying the world by storm. Over five million boxes are sold annually. Composed entirely of Flowers, Roots, Balsams and Extracts,—their effect on the human system is pleasant, satisfactory and successful.—Acting directly on the blood, glands, solids and fluids of the body, their use is attended with the happiest effects in reclaiming the most confirmed cases, one or two doses almost always cures. In old standing cases of sickness, small doses—repeated frequently—so cleanse the system and restore good health to the result. No change in employment or diet is necessary. They never cause sore mouths, swelled joints, nor keep friends away as do many other kinds. They are warranted to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded. They are considered cheaper, safer, prettier, and in all respects superior to any purgative pill in the world

☞ The discovery of coating a pill with sugar emanated with Dr. Herrick. All others are counterfeits and if used, will do harm, and disappoint the sick. Herrick's pills are elegantly put up. 25 in a box with a large sheet of directions, and sell for 25 cents a box; 5 boxes for $1.

Herrick's Kid Strengthening Plaster.

THE GREAT STRENGTHENER, AND PAIN DESTROYER. THE BEST AND CHEAPEST HOUSEHOLD REMEDY IN THE WORLD.

These renowned Plasters cure pains, weakness and distress in the back, side and breast, in five hours. Indeed, so certain are they to do this, that the proprietor warrants them. Spurred from native balsams and gums, on beautiful kid leather, renders them peculiarly adapted to the waste of females and others. Their application is universally—equally to the strong man, the feeble woman, and the delicate infant. To each and all they will prove a balm and a blessing. Their use is agreeable, and without annoyance or trouble—Each Plaster will wear from one to four months, and in rheumatic complaints, sprains and bruises, frequently effect cures when all other remedies fail. Full directions will be found on the back of each. Public speakers, vocalists, ministers of the gospel, and others, will appreciate their lungs and improve their voices by wearing the as another breast. Price 25 cents.

The above articles are sold by all the dealers in Canada, and by druggists throughout the United States and South America, at wholesale by all large druggists in the principal cities.

ILL-FATED FLAGS.

The Americans have laid themselves open to very unpleasant comparisons by their ostentatious hospitality to Russia. Indulging in a spirit of empty bravado—as we regard the late ovations to have been—is generally regretted afterwards. Punch takes up the matter in the following fine lines:—

Hail, Tartar keels, on New York tide!
Hail, Tartar feet on New York ground!
Run up the stripes and stars beside,
The sable eagle, clawed and crowned!
Hoist to the broad light of the sun,
Sons of the free and seed of slaves,
The flag that waved o'er Washington,
The flag that o'er Mouravieff waves!

While Poland groans, through all her fields,
Daughters defiled and slaughtered sons,
While Cossacks' pikes beat down the shields
Of breasts that naked brave the guns:
While brutal force and bestial lust
High carnival in Warsaw hold,
Till e'en the diplomatic dust
Stirs upon treaty parchments old.

Think what sad Poland's thoughts must be,
That westward looked for light and aid,
Seeing the right hands of the free,
In the enslavers' lightly laid!
And think how Europe fain to unweave
Laborious, the web of wrong,
Holds those who thus the heir receive,
To an inheritance of wrong!

Her flag, though rent, Columbia's pride,
Her freedom's flag still dared to claim!
But now by the Black Eagle's side
It seems to droop her folds for shame,
Its stripes full well may fraternize
With Russia's knout, that women scars,
But while it waves o'er such allies,
Blot, oh blot out, the indignant stars.

Three Chapters of my Life.

CHAPTER II.

I parted from my mother and sister and went to Boston, prepared myself with my testimonials, and was accepted. Mrs. Hammond professed to be well pleased with my appearance. After talking with me a few minutes in the drawing-room she led the way to the nursery—my field of duty. A young lady sat looking out upon the street as I entered. Her back was toward the door. "Katharine," said the elder lady, "here is Miss Ann Callender, from Camden—perhaps she knows your old friend, Squire Robinson." The young lady turned, and I recognized my heroine of the pink wrapper. It was she, but how changed! How pale and sick she looked! What a heavy drooping eyelid she bore—as if it were weighed down with pearled tears! It was plain that she did not recognize me, even by name and I felt relieved.

"Are you fond of children, Ann?" she asked, after Mrs. Hammond left the room.

"I think I am," I replied; "but I have never had the care of them."

"You will find it requires patience; but if you love children, if you can make them love you, it will be easier. These are very much spoiled. Harry—Susie—here is your new governess. I hope you will try to make her happy."

"I won't," said the boy. "If she don't do as I tell her I guess I'll kick her—won't you, Susie?" And Susie said "Yes," of course.

Miss Katharine sighed, "Ah! they are sadly spoiled, Ann; but I will help you bring them into order. I love children. It is the delight of my life to have them about me. I will leave you now to get acquainted with them, for I have not been out to-day."

"What is your name, little boy?" I inquired, as Miss Katharine shut the door.

"I won't tell you," replied the child.

"And you will tell me your name, little girl?" said I, extending my hand toward her in the kindest manner I knew how to assume.

"Don't you do it," said the boy; and the child echoed her brother, "I won't do it."

"Oh, very well!" I said, determined that no cousins should enter into my discipline. "Do as you please;" and taking down a book from the shelves I began to read, quite regardless of their presence.

"That's my book," said Master Harry, "and I won't let you see it, Miss." I said no attention to him, but kept on reading. He came round, of course, as I knew he would, and presently mounted my knee to have me show him the pictures.

It is unnecessary to describe my life day after day in my new capacity. It had its annoyances, its fatigues, and its perplexities; it had, also, its relief and its enjoyment. I learned soon to love the children, and they were truly fond of me. Yet many things seemed strange and mysterious in the family, and there was an atmosphere of unhappiness every where around. What was the strangest fact of all, I could not get a sight at Mr. Hammond. He never came into the nursery, and I seldom went out of it. I took my meals as they were prepared, at a different hour from the rest of the family. Sometimes Miss Katharine dined with the children and myself, sometimes in her own room. Mr. and Mrs. Hammond dined very late in the afternoon. How many times I tried, by making an errand down stairs, to meet him as he retired to his room after dinner, but he came up the front stair-case only occasionally, as there was a nearer way to his own room. As to catching a glimpse of him when he went out of the house on a morning, that, too, was an impossibility, the front door being covered by a portico, which entirely screened him from observation. I thought it very strange he never came up to see the children and still stranger that I was never told to bring them down. I might have fancied him an old dotard whom his family wished to keep out of sight if I had not heard his voice—the voice of a young man.

One day I addressed Miss Katharine as Miss Hammond. She started. "Ann," said she, "never call me that again. My name is not Hammond. Call me Miss Venderlin, or Katharine, if you please. Mr. Hammond is not my father." Why could she not have said more, and relieved my curiosity? Was it whispered, even there strange ways of the family, accidents? Did the mystery exist in my imagination merely? Certainly Katharine was, when she—certainly there was restraint all around. I enjoyed the excitement of trying to unravel the skein that I was convinced would make me an interesting romance if known.

"Ann," said Miss Katharine to me one evening as we sat together in the nursery, "do you know how much I like you—how much I would love you if you would let me, but you are so cold?"

I looked up at her amazed and incredulous.

"I see you don't understand me, and I suppose you can not. You have got some false and ridiculous notions in your head, and you won't let me come near you."

"I do not want to forget, Miss Katharine," said I "that I am nothing but a nursery governess."

"I thought so! I knew how it was, Ann," she continued. "You are wickedly proud, and it makes you appear cold and hard. If you were not so, you would have seen long ago how my heart turns to you for love, how I would like to call you friend! You would have seen, perhaps, how much I need a friend."

I looked at her—she was very pale.

"Yes Ann" said she, rising, and laying her thin hand on my head, "I need a friend. I know I have one there where I am going, but I need one here—one who will be true to me in life and death. Will you be one, Ann?"

I burst into tears.

"You are not cold! Oh, then, Ann, let us love each other. Be my sister. It will only be for a little while; not when I am gone it will make you happy to remember the good you did me!"

It is unnecessary to say that my life, before so barren, had now a new interest. Dear Kat arine! I thank her for first calling me out of my own selfishness to feel that I could make one human life brighter by my sympathy.

I am aware that before this time I ought to have given—or, at least, to have attempted—a description of Mrs. Hammond; I mean of her person. Deeper than the outside it does not now suit my purpose to fathom. If I could paint a portrait of her as she seemed to me at the time I was domesticated in her family, you would say never canvas showed a more beautiful face and form. She looked full ten years younger than her daughter, and was more radiant in her beauty than Katharine had ever been, though not so lovely in all the softness of womanhood. Those splendid dark eyes, that wealth of raven hair, the matchless taste with which she wore every thing, her manner of perfect ease that nothing could surprise into spontaneous emotion, that full, rounded, voluptuous figure—But the portrait has been drawn by an artist more skilful than myself, the form moulded by a sculptor to adorn his own studio; why should I try to describe her in words?

Months passed, finding me still at the same post of duty. I loved it better—I loved every thing and every body more, now that I had been admitted to an equality with Katharine. I loved her devotedly, and she was worthy. Yet, in my inmost soul, I still quarreled with my destiny.

One day, after returning with the children from their daily walk, I heard the sound of voices in Katharine's room, which was adjoining to mine. As the children were unusually sleepy and quiet, I could not help overhearing the conversation. Without intending to listen, I sat like one spell bound. I must repeat it, in order to the unfolding of my story.

"No, no, no—never!" it was Katharine's voice. She continued, after a moment's pause, "I can never see him again! I do not judge. I can not judge, him for you. It is not for me to disturb the past—it is not for him to disturb my present!"

"For my sake, Katharine," replied another voice, which I knew to be Mrs. Hammond's. "He has asked of me this sacrifice—that I will implore you once more to hear what he has to say. 'Can you refuse this to your mother? Is she not already wretched enough? Oh, my child, I kneel to you! Grant me this, my last prayer! Though I stoop to this for his sake, grant it, Katharine, for mine. You do not know, you can not comprehend, my heart. I am a slave, but I love my chains—love even the pangs that have eaten into my soul—because they come through him."

"Mother, I pity you!"

"Yes, you may well say so, but I love my wretchedness endured for love to him. Will you see him to-night? He leaves to-morrow for an absence of some weeks; may he bid you farewell?"

"How cruel of you both to ask of me this sacrifice of my pride!"

"Forgive me, Katharine. I have long ago lost mine. You can not lose yours."

"So much the worse for you, mother. You gave up that which is woman's sole defence! But I do not blame you. You speak truly—I do not understand such love. I left you to your happiness. I should never have returned but at your summons, or to shield you from the carping criticism of the world. You promised me—he promised me—my retirement should be inviolate. How have you kept your word?"

"But it is the first, the last, time. Why are you so implacable?"

"Implacable! can I believe such an epithet applied to me?"

"Oh, forgive me, Katharine. Do not lay up against me the words I utter in torture—as the rack!"

"Poor mother! Believe me, I would die to secure you true happiness. Shall I, then, shrink from what you ask me? No! I will see him this evening—this evening in the nursery. Oh, mother, could I but make you really, truly, wisely happy; that you need not love him but God more—goodness, duty more; that you could only writhe from this sleep, this death of the soul—from this cold dream of passion—and find your true happiness! I believe you may yet be happy; but what you feel now is only a delusion. We will not talk any more of it, only saying over and over again the old story. Mother, while I live I will pray for you; when I die, if it is permitted me, I may be nearer to your spirit than I can be here. I will try to make you feel what the peace of heaven is—what that love is which links the human heart with the souls that have been purified by suffering."

"God bless you, Katharine. I thank you on my knees! He is coming! His step, even at this moment, reaches my ear, although you can not hear it. It is maddening!—I know it. It is consuming my life, but I love even its torments!"

I heard the door close—I heard the retreating steps of Mrs. Hammond; and in a few moments more Katharine was in the chair beside me. She looked unearthly pale.

"You are very ill," said I. "Lie on the couch, and let me bathe your head."

She moved mechanically, and lay down. I could not rest until I had told her that I had overheard her conversation with her mother. She neither seemed surprised nor indignant.

"I meant to have explained many things long before this, Ann," said she. "I was waiting for a time which, I fear will never come—when I speak calmly, and tell you everything—not for your sake, not to redeem my own heart even, but that you may tell my brother Alfred what he will wish to know when he comes home, and finds me gone! But I cannot talk more now. Let me rest a little while. I have another ordeal to pass through for which I must gain strength." She lay back upon the pillow and closed her eyes, nor did she move until her cup of tea was brought by the maid, when I roused her. I have not been asleep, Ann," she said, tenderly "but I feel refreshed. I feel an unaccountable peace here, as if my conflict was almost over. Ann, there is a promise for the faithful who bear the yoke meekly that they shall find rest for their souls. I wish I could talk to you, my dear friend, but I must save up my strength. A great trial is before me. After it is over I will unburden my heart to you. Let me lie here while you put the children to bed; and Ann, when you hear a step on the stairs, will you go into my room, and leave me alone?" She did not finish, but already I had gained a clew by which to solve the mystery that hung over us. I had laid the children in their beds, and prepared to rest myself again beside Katharine, when the sound of one ascending the stairs arrested me. "It is he! Go, Ann! I will call you presently." I had no excuse for lingering; and, in spite of my curiosity to see the face of one whom I had so long tried to fancy, I made not a moment's delay in leaving the room, and not until the door had closed behind me did I realize the golden opportunity I had thrown away. Oh, how strongly I was tempted to make some errand back into the nursery! But I was ashamed—I lacked the assurance. Neither could I bear to know that I must, of necessity, overhear the conversation, unless I stopped my ears or left the room—and she had desired me to remain there. Seating myself at the farthest possible distance from the door, I set to work steadily at my sewing. At first I distinguished a low monotone; then a silence followed, which was almost as agitating to me as if I had been one of the parties concerned; then a motion, when I heard Katharine's voice, clear, firm, and decided.

"Still unrelenting, Katharine," replied her companion. "I obey you. I do not wish to presume upon your compliance with my request. It is the last time that we shall meet face to face. Can you give me by one gentle look or tone, by one last grasp of the hand, a token that you do not despise me, although I know too well I merit only your contempt?"

"Why should I repeat the words of our last interview? Why should I say again what you know as well as I, how utterly futile, how impossible in the nature of things it is for us to come to a verbal understanding which involves feelings that ought to be sacred? You talk of forgiveness! What have I to forgive in you? Shall I forgive you for having deceived yourself with the belief that you loved me, or for waking to the truth that it was a delusion of the imagination? Shall I blame you that I loved another, who also loved and still loves you? Shall I blame you that, boy as you were you were misled by boyish impulses, unused to the world, unacquainted with society—that you were ignorant of your own wants, ignorant of your own nature? Rather, should I ever forgive myself if I had permitted my poor, pitiable claims to your divided heart to have stood in the way of your greater happiness? Believe me, I should despise myself if I had not found somewhere within me strength to say, Go, be free and happy! No matter how strong my love for you might have been I should consider myself a reproach to woman's nature if I had been willing to accept love at such a sacrifice of womanly pride! But why should we try to talk about it? It is useless, and it is unkind in you to allude to the past. Why will you not be happy?"

Mr. Hammond groaned.

"You think I can not understand you," continued Katharine, and there was an inexpressible kindness in her voice. "You are mistaken, George Believe me, I understand you—I anticipate what you would say this moment. But do not say it, for it is wrong—wrong in you to speak, wrong in me to listen; and, what is more, it is wronging her who loves you, and whose happiness ought to be sacred to you and to me. I pardon this interview. The fate of each one of us is sealed—we are not living in a land of dreams, we are not grappling with shadows, but with living, vital realities that take hold on eternity. We must not live this life but God more—goodness, duty more; that you could only writhe from this sleep, this death of the soul—from this cold dream of passion—and find your true happiness! I believe you may yet be happy; but what you feel now is only a delusion. We will not talk any more of it, only saying over and over again the old story. Mother, while I live I will pray for you; when I die, if it is permitted me, I may be nearer to your spirit than I can be here. Seating myself at the farthest possible distance from the door, I set to work steadily at my sewing. At first I distinguished a low monotone; then a silence followed, which was almost as agitating to me as if I had been one of the parties concerned; then a motion, when I heard Katharine's voice, clear, firm, and decided.

"Not a step nearer. I can hear you where you sit; and let me beg of you to shorten this interview as much as possible."

"Still unrelenting, Katharine," replied her companion. "I obey you. I do not wish to presume upon your compliance with my request. It is the last time that we shall meet face to face. Can you give me, by one gentle look or tone, by one last grasp of the hand, a token that you do not despise me, although I know too well I merit only your contempt?"

"Why should I repeat the words of our last interview? Why should I say again what you know as well as I, how utterly futile, how impossible in the nature of things it is for us to come to a verbal understanding which involves feelings that ought to be sacred? You talk of forgiveness! What have I to forgive in you? Shall I forgive you for having deceived yourself with the belief that you loved me, or for waking to the truth that it was a delusion of the imagination? Shall I blame you that I loved another, who also loved and still loves you? Shall I blame you that, boy as you were you were misled by boyish impulses, unused to the world, unacquainted with society—that you were ignorant of your own wants, ignorant of your own nature? Rather, should I ever forgive myself if I had permitted my poor, pitiable claims to your divided heart to have stood in the way of your greater happiness? Believe me, I should despise myself if I had not found somewhere within me strength to say, Go, be free and happy! No matter how strong my love for you might have been I should consider myself a reproach to woman's nature if I had been willing to accept love at such a sacrifice of womanly pride! But why should we try to talk about it? It is useless, and it is unkind in you to allude to the past. Why will you not be

"No, I can not; I have not time." This only, Asa, gives me real satisfaction now, to feel that through God's help I conquered. Love is strong, strong as life, stronger than our frail bodies, for they wear out—that never does. But it may triumph over selfishness, it may lift up the soul to a higher life. If you wish to know more of my past, Alfred will tell you. He will need a friend. Be to him that friend. You are kind, Asa. You have a strong but a proud nature. Perhaps you need trouble to soften you. If you do, it will come: if it does come, bear it—use it well. You may call my mother. The light is growing dimmer—dimmer. Dear Lord, with love the agony and bloody sweat—those knowest human weakness must shrink—but—it is over now—" I did not dare leave her—I rushed to the hall—I called Mrs. Hammond. The mother came, but the daughter had gone.

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 3rd, 1863.

TO THE PEOPLE OF PETERBORO' COUNTY.

People of Peterborough County, a word or two with you. The time for the approaching municipal elections is at hand, and what are you doing? Do you intend as too often heretofore, to let things take their own way, and then exclaim against the results? The results are with you. You are to blame if properly qualified and honest men are not elected to the Municipal offices at the next election. You have no right to keep aloof from these elections. To take part in them is a duty which your obligations as Citizens and Christians devolve upon you, and which you have no more right to shirk than you have to shirk duties which you consider paramount, and which you are so punctilious about observing. Is it of no importance whom you may have as Councillors for next year? of no importance whom you may elect as Trustees? We admit that your acts too often prove that you deem it of no importance, but depend upon it you are mistaken in your opinions. It is of importance whom you elect as your Councillors, and whom you elect as Trustees. In fact, the election of these officers should interest you as much (if not more than) even that of Member of Parliament, inasmuch as your more immediate interests are more intimately connected therewith. Your Councillors, under the present law, have much power in their hands and are possessed of the means of doing much good to a community, if they are only so disposed and have energy enough to give their disposition practical effect. At present most of our Township (and Town ones too, but we leave them for the present) Councils are mere nullities,—simply because, as a general thing, the men that compose them are men of no moral or political weight. The right men for such a place will not offer themselves, and the people do not seem willing to ask them, and so frequently individuals altogether unfitted are elected. A man may be a good farmer or mechanic, &c., but that does not necessarily fit him for being a good Municipal officer. There is something more wanted. There is an innate fitness, ripened by experience, which qualifies some for offices of trust and importance, and which it is impossible for others ever to obtain. There are a devotedness to public interests, a liberality of sentiment, and a regard for intellectual and material progress which characterize some as is proved by their actions; but which will NEVER characterize others whatever their position or influence—as too clearly established by their antecedents. Now, in our opinion, individuals thus qualified are those whom the electors should bring out from their retirements, and from the obscurity in which their modesty keeps them, and honor with their suffrages and confidence. The man whose public spirit is as dwarfed, whose ideas of liberality and progress are so confined that he opposes every movement, however important in its ends and aim, in which personal or local interests are not incorporated, is one that should be permitted during the rest of his mundane existence to live in exclusion "a wretch centered all in self." We would call to mind that it is important that every Township should elect not only a properly qualified Councillor, intellectually speaking, but one that is determined and energetic. Next year the County Council will have considerable important business to attend to. How desirable then, that those composing it should be men of energy, principle and independence.

As to School Trustees we do sincerely hope that some more interest will be evinced in their election than heretofore. We know of no office more honorable or responsible than that of School Trustee; yet how few are willing to assume its duties. The Trustees have in their hands the moulding of the whole of the young of the community. They are autocrats in their section. They can employ good, indifferent, or bad teachers, as they think fit. This very consideration should prompt every intelligent and affection parent to take an interest in the election of the Trustees of the coming year. If you elect Trustees of no education, less refinement, and of a coarse nature, what kind of Teachers can you expect they will employ. It is said, "men don't like to see others better than themselves." Apply this principle in this case, and the character of the teacher would not have to be measured by a very high standard, either morally or intellectually. With these men the question is, not how good or well qualified is the teacher, but how "cheap" can we get them. The consequence of the unpardonable parsimony of the Boards of Trustees, with their heathenish practices of engaging teachers, in that education in many sections has the lowest ebb imaginable, and the acquirements and capabilities of many of our teachers are corresponding. There are honorable exceptions—which should be examples for the rest to imitate, but the existence of which not unfrequently seems to be altogether ignored. To remedy this state of things is in the hands of the people. They can do so by electing for their Trustees men of refinement and enlightened ideas, men whose reflection and practical experience tell them what course to pursue. Will the people of Peterborough then think of this matter a little. Will they consider the interests and prospects of their children paramount to their dollars? The dollars can only be possessed and enjoyed for a few years at best, but the influences that they now bring to bear upon the interests and prospects of their children may tell through all Eternity. People of Peterborough, we have had our say. We have spoken in all friendliness. We hope you will take it in the same spirit. You must acknowledge that there is "more truth than poetry" in our statements. And the truth, however unpalatable, at times, can not be heard without profit. Enlarge the ideas we have just broached upon, and as you do so you will more fully realise the state of things that now is, and the beneficial nature of the changes we have foreshadowed. Try for one year to put things upon a better footing—for a mere experiment, if nothing more. Elect honest, qualified, good, experienced, law fearing men as your Councillors and Trustees, and you may rest assured you will not rue it.

ST. ANDREW'S DAY.

The Sons of Scotia celebrated their patron Saint's Day on Monday last. At 7 o'clock, the members of the St. Andrew's Society assembled in the First Presbyterian Church, where the Rev. Mr. ROGERS preached a most appropriate and eloquent sermon, strongly inculcating upon all present the value and beauty of Charity, and the importance and benefit of cherishing that virtue. He took for his text Levit. xix. 32, 35. After the Sermon, the Society marched down to their Hall, in Scott's Block, to partake of their "Annual Dinner,"—to which over eighty, members and guests, sat down. A. Smith, Esq., of the Toronto Bank, the President of the Society, occupied the chair. He was supported on the right by R. G. CONWAY, Esq., the President of the St. George's Society, the Hon. SYDNEY SMITH, and G. F. ORDE, Esq. On the left, by the Rev. Mr. DOUGLAS and Colonel HAULTAIN, M. P. P. The following Letters of apology were read from W. S. CONGER, Esq., M. P. P., Chas. PERRY, Esq., Mayor, and E. LAWDER, Esq., President of St. Patrick's Society.

PETERBOROUGH, 30th Nov., 1863.

DEAR SIR,—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your esteemed favor of the 27th inst., enclosing complimentary ticket of invitation from the Managers of St. Andrew's Society, to become one of their guests for the evening. Few things have ever afforded me more satisfaction than to meet and spend a social evening with Scotias joval sons; and I regret exceedingly that the state of my health is such as to prevent me at this time from accepting their kind and much prized invitation.

I am, dear Sir,
Very faithfully yours,
W. S. CONGER.

Charles Cameron, Esq., Secretary of the St. Andrew's Society.

PETERBOROUGH, 30th Nov., 1863.

C. Cameron, Esq., Secretary St. Andrew's Society,

SIR,—I beg leave to acknowledge receipt of your note and complimentary ticket to the St. Andrew's Dinner, and regret to say that I will be unable to attend.

I am, Sir,
Your obed't servant,
CHARLES PERRY,
Mayor.

(By Telegraph.)

PORT HOPE, Nov. 30, 1863.

Mr. Cameron, Secretary St. Andrews Society,

Was late for train; please excuse; wish you pleasant evening.

EDWARD LAUDER,
President St. Patrick's Society.

After the edibles were disposed of, CHAS. CAMERON, Esq., the able Secretary, was called upon to read the Annual Report, which will be found in another column.

The Chairman then gave the the toast of "The Queen," which was received with profound respect.

Song,—"God save the Queen," by Mr. TEMPLETON BROWN, who sang the National Anthem in his peculiar happy style.

Then followed the toast of "The Prince of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family," which was also received with becoming honors.

After this came "The Army and Navy," Col. HAULTAIN responded. He was sorry that so unworthy a member of the profession to which for so long a period of his life he belonged, was called upon to answer to the toast that had been given. He thought the time demanded that more attention should be given to the defences of our country than was. We now enjoyed peace, but the peculiar circumstances in which we were placed rendered it necessary that we should be ready for any emergency that might arise. He was happy to see the measures that were being adopted to instruct the Officers of the Militia. He referred to the United States to show what unexpected changes might take place in the course of a very short time. Canada ought to be warned in time.

Capt. SUTHERLAND responded in his usual happy style for the Navy. His connection with the Navy was not very great; he regretted the absence of Capt. REDDIE; he eulogized the Navy of England; the English Navy, in his opinion, was the Navy of the world; he referred the exploits of the American Navy to the fact that British seamen manned the vessels.

To the toast "Our Sister Societies," R. G. CONWAY, Esq., responded in some well chosen remarks.

The HON. SIDNEY SMITH responded to the toast of "Canada." He had no expectation to be called upon until a few moments before giving the toast. He was a Canadian in every respect. It had always been his aim to advance the interests of Canadians. In the hour of danger he would be always found ready to uphold Canada's dignity and fair name, and to defend its liberties.

THOMAS WHITE, Esq., also responded to the toast, which he did in some very appropriate remarks.

In absence of the Mayor, H. LAWDER, Esq. responded for the "Mayor and Corporation."

On behalf of the "Guests," Col. STRICKLAND responded. He stated that the last St. Andrew's dinner he was at, was some thirty years ago, and a happy meeting it was, with the jovial Spirits that enlivened it.

The Regular toasts having been disposed of the Vice-Chair announced the toast of the evening, "Bumpers," which went the different rounds.

"Harmony, Scotland," proposed by CHAS. CAMERON, Esq., responded to by A. MILLARD, Esq.

"Bards of Scotland and Memory of Burns" proposed by J. JOHNSTON, Esq., responded to by J. M. DUNN, Esq.

"Our Wives and Sweethearts," proposed by C. FAIRBURN, Esq., responded to by A. G. GILBERT, Esq.

We forbear giving any synopsis of the different speeches upon these toasts, as we intend to publish them, if possible, somewhat in extenso in our next issue. We may just say that the last toast was handled in a very felicitous style by the two young gentlemen in charge; they, evidently, are great admirers of the Ladies, as all ought to be.

The "Press" and "Bar" were not forgotten."

The healths of the President, ex-President, T. BROWN, Esq., and Mr. W. TELFORD, author of some verses (to be found in another column) read before the Society and heartily received, were warmly drunk by all present.

The company broke up somewhere about the time the "Wee short hours ayont the twal."

were beginning to make their appearance. All separated highly pleased with the evenings entertainment; where the "feast of reason and flow of soul" was not in any way the least of the pleasures enjoyed.

The conduct of the President in the Chair was the "very thing"—it could not have been better, and elicited, as it deserved, the highest encomiums from all.

We may also say too much praise cannot be given to the Committee for the manner in which they carried out the arrangements.

ARE YOU A GOOD CITIZEN?

"Am I a good citizen?" The question is an impertinent one, is it? No it is not; it is a pertinent one. You say you mind your own business, and let other people mind theirs. Perhaps you do—who disputes the fact? We don't. But does that, in your opinion, constitute the sum and substance of a good citizen? If so, we beg to differ from you. Your ideas and ours upon the subject do not accord. You may think yours right—we have the vanity to believe ours are. Drs. differ, and so we may take the same liberty. In our humble opinion the title good citizen involves more than at first sight appears. A good citizen cannot be a very selfish man; he must have a large heart, much charity, and a willing hand to assist along everything that is good and noble. He does not let private business altogether blind him to the higher claims upon him. He is attentive to business, but he remembers that he has other duties. He never forgets that he is a member of a community and of a country. Hence he takes hold of every movement that is calculated to promote the material and moral improvement of those around him. His sympathy and co-operation are always ready. Local and public measures, if intrinsically commendable, have his interest and support. He feels it his duty to show his fellow-citizens a good example in the discharge of those obligations that his membership of a community devolves upon him. He lets principle more than interest or personal predilection sway him in his support of candidates for offices of trust and responsibility. He will not himself shrink from office if the common voice deem him best fitted for it—although his personal feelings and interest would prompt him to do so. Of that with which God has blessed him he feels himself rather the steward—rather the owner. These, we think, are a few of the traits that characterize a good citizen. Are these traits that characterize you? Your idea of "minding your own business and letting others mind theirs" hardly implies the fact. You see elements of a higher and nobler character are required. Good citizens, in the proper acceptance of the term, are rarer than people imagine. A good citizen—which one of us can lay claim to the title. The most presumptuous or the most earnest of us, by rigid self enquiry, may find his claim more defective than he now imagines. If each of us only tried to approximate as closely as he might and as he ought to the standard of good citizenship would there be as much woe and crime, so few and so poorly supported Mechanics Institutes and other institutions of true progress and improvement, so much Municipal incapacity, recklessness and jobbery, and so little vital religion, as we know to our shame and cost to be? Let conscience answer.

ASHBURNHAM NEW SCHOOL.

On Thursday evening the New School in Ashburnham was opened and dedicated to the education of the young, with all due solemnity. The evening was a splendid one and a large number of the inhabitants of the Village were present. We observed, also, quite a sprinkling of Peterborough folks, attracted no doubt by the pleasant anticipation of some good speaking and some very good music. Nor were they disappointed. The Rev. Mr. Burnham presided on the occasion. On the platform were the Rev. Mr. Allen, of Millbrook, and the Rev. Messrs. Beck, Gilmour and Douglas, and Mr. J. M. Dunn, Principal of the Peterboro' Grammar and Union School.

The speeches, embracing various educational topics, seemed to be highly relished by the audience. The names of the Rev. gentlemen are, we think, guarantee of this. The Choir, under the able leadership of Mr. TEMPLETON BROWN, with PROFESSOR HEATHFIELD at the Piano, discoursed music of the sweetest kind, and aided very much to the pleasure of the evening's entertainment.

After speaking was over, votes of thanks were moved to the Chairman (who liberally donated the lot upon which the building stands,) speakers, Choir and Trustees, which we need not say were all carried nem. con.

We think that the excellent teacher, MR. STRATTON, to whose abilities, energy and fitness for his office all the speakers bore testimony, deserves much credit, as indeed do all connected, for the manner in which the affair was got up and conducted.

The School House, we may add, is a very nice one story building, capable of containing about 150 scholars, and the forms no small ornament to the ambitious village.

....Charles Dickens, in a recent article, says a great pitched battle is seldom more deadly to men than the gaiety of a London season is to the pale army of girls who live by the most wretched fripperies of fashion, and fever, perhaps, die by the bayonet than by the needle.

ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY.

THE FIFTH ANNUAL REPORT

Of the Proceedings of the Committee of Management of the St. Andrew's Society, for the County of Peterborough, submitted to Members, &c., at the Annual Dinner, held in the St. Andrew's Hall, on November 30, 1863, St. Andrew's Day:

GENTLEMEN,

In again coming before you at the end of another year, your Committee have much pleasure in being able to report the continued prosperity of our Institution. The new list of members is not quite so full (as yet) as your Committee could be expect; yet they are sanguine that it will be equal, at least, to that of last year, as it is fast filling up: and with this prospect before them, together with the handsome balance in the hands of your Treasurer at the Annual Meeting, held in the Committee Rooms on the 12th inst., your Committee have commenced the operations of another year with the best of encouragement, as may be seen from the following financial statement:

Balance in hands of Treasurer at last Annual Meeting, ... $69 16
Fees from three members for 1863, .. 3 00
Fees from 19 new members till date, . 28 00

Total, ... $100 16

Paid in Charities during the year as follows:

1863. Nov. 26, Paid Robt. Barn, .. $4 00
1863. Feby. 4, Paid Mal. Sinclair, .. 3 00
" 4, " Mal. McGrigor 5 00
May 6, " Jno Richards, 3 00
Nov 5, " M. McDonald. 5 00
" 5, " Jas. Campbell, 2 00
" 5, " Thomas Ewart and Jas. Dunnachy, 8 25 30 25

$69 91

Add collection at Annual Sermon, .. 5 20

Thus making a total of, ... $75 11

in the hands of your Treasurer, at this date, to be placed to the credit of the new account. The amount paid out in charities during the past year, although exceeding that of the preceding year, is still far less than your Committee expected at the commencement of last year to be called upon to pay, in order to relieve in some measure the wants of those calling on them for aid; the fact is, (as then reported) your Committee were afraid at the outset that the amount of funds at their disposal would be altogether inadequate to meet the demands upon them for charity, or at any rate that all would be exhausted during the year. They are now, however, glad to say that such fears have turned out to be groundless, and also to say that instead of such being the case, the amount paid during the year, with the exception of 1861, is the smallest since the formation of the Society in 1858. Your Committee, however, feel proud to say that in every case where charity was solicited and the applicant found deserving, they have always extended the helping hand to the extent that, in their judgment, was really necessary. Your Committee might advert at length to the claims of the Society, but this they do not intend to take up your time by doing, trusting that as there are a number of good speakers to address the meeting this evening, some of each will remember said claims in the course of their remarks; suffice it to say that the Society is purely a charitable institution, intend for the relief of the distressed, and, although it is intended for Scotchmen and their families, yet they have in some instances extended the helping hand to those of other countries. Your Committee have to record with sorrow that since we last met on the same occasion as brings us together this evening, two of our members have been suddenly removed from among by death, having been drowned in the ill-fated steamship "Anglo-Saxon," viz: MESSRS. ROBT. SCOTT and JOHN MCGREGOR.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

CHARLES CAMERON,
Secretary.

LINES FOR THE ST. ANDREW'S SOCIETY, PETERBOROUGH.

Sons of old Scotia's lovely Isles,
Where Nature rich in beauty smiles:
The Lowland meads, or Highland hill,
Where blooms the broom and heather still.
Scotia the ancient history tells
Of warlocks, witch, or fairy spells;
While old tradition points but faint
To your departed Patron Saint—
Saint Andrew's name is not forgot
By every loyal, true hearted Scot—
Though from their birth-place far away
They meet to hold St. Andrew's Day.
True your Society bears his name—
Philanthropy its chiefest aim—
May each in deed, not name possess,
The motto is: relieve distress.
When poverty, with pinching sore,
Brings brother Scotchmen to your shore
With empty purse—in grief they stand,
Poor strangers in a foreign land;
Oppress'd with want, and blank dismay;
Their prospects dark, home far away;
Bright rays of hope, solace their grief;
Why, your Society gives relief.
Hard Winter comes, with drifting snow—
When work is scarce and wages low—
While not a few of brother Scots
Feels cold, and want their piteous lots;
The frost is keen, the house logs crack;
Poor children, rags are on their back;
The stove is cold, the flour is done;
The father's one of Scotia's sons;
The mother weeps with grief and pain;
The father seeks for work in vain;
The children cry "Oh, give us bread;"
There's none—the father shakes his head.
Friends, your Society in this place
Just meets the wants in that man's case:
He hears, applies, relief has got,
From whom? St. Andrew's—brother Scot.
Wishing your cause may have God's speed,
The naked clothed, the hungry feed,
Benevolence, Charity display,
Mitigate suffering, wants allay—
May the free gifts which you expend
Prove the poor Scotsman's needed friend.
True gratitude to those in need—
A friend in want 's a friend indeed.
Your Charity when well bestowed
Relieves the sufferers drooping load;
It soothes affliction, heals distress;
Succors when dark misfortune press;
Your humane acts all must admire;
Love, help, when suffering Scots require;
Long may your free-will gifts be paid
To those deserving of your aid;
Press onward, freely sympathize—
Humanity is a noble prize;—
When penury and want appear
May your spontaneous aid be near;
May love of Country—love of race—
Within each Scot's heart find a place;
Though he in distant lands may roam,
Remember still his old Scotch home.
Sons of old Scotia's honored fame,
Feel proud to bear St. Andrew's name;
Long may you hold St. Andrew's Day
In this far distant Canada.

WILLIAM TELFORD.

ACCIDENTS.

The other day a man named Ned English engaged about RYAN'S Tannery, fell in one of the hot vats, and had his legs terribly scalded.

A man well known in the community by the cognomen of "Drunken LAVERY" was brought in from the bush country for medical assistance. He has a fearful gash upon his forehead, received accidentally, we believe.

ITEMS.

....Artemus Ward's first letter in San Francisco yielded $2,000.

....A Medical college for women has just been started at New York.

....SHANNON, the robber, escaped from Hamilton jail, on Friday.

....A Vermont paper says there is a Mormon in the Legislature of that State.

....A thousand dollars an inch is the selling price of one of the California silver mines.

....A monster national bank, with a capital of $50,000,000, is about to be established in New York.

....There are 38,183 houses of worship in the United States, of which 12,914 are in the Confederacy.

....The census of the State of Iowa, taken last spring, foots up 702,368—an increase of 27,679 over 1860.

....The Assembly at Adelaide, Australia has passed a bill to legalize marriage with the sister of a deceased wife.

....There are nearly fifty Bible colporteurs in Italy. The demand for the scriptures in that country is increasing.

....A new weekly paper entitled the COLORED CITIZEN, and edited by colored people, has just been started in Cincinnati.

....The total number of emigrants arrived at New York to the 18th instant, was 140,586. To same date last year, 68 294.

....A Western editor, in giving an account of a tornado, heads it as follows:—"Very disgraceful Thunder Storm."

....The Levnat Herald confirms the statement that the Porte offered to purchase the rams in the Mersey, and bid Laird's price, $130,000 each.

....The Rev. Isaac Helmuth, Archdeacon of Huron, and Principal of Huron College, has been appointed member of the Senate of the University of Toronto.

....A Russian Count was arrested in New York on Tuesday last, charged with stealing a diamond ring worth $1000 from a jeweller store; the ring was found on him.

....The present total revenue of Russia is £44,374,748, of which £18,000,000 from the tax on brandy. £25,225,111 goes to the army, and £2,941,404 to the navy.

....A new palace for Lord Elgin and the viceregal court is being built at Poonah, which after the end of next year will, instead of Calcutta, become the capital of India.

....One year from the present month the people of the United States will again have to vote for the Electors who are to choose a President and Vice-President to enter office on the fourth day of March, 1865.

....An old minister up town the other day asked a woman what could be done to induce her husband to attend church. "I don't know," replied, "unless you were to put a pipe and a jug of whiskey in the pew."

....By a disaster which occurred to the steamer "Sunbury," on Friday of the week before last, on her passage from Fredericton to St. John, N. B., some ten or twelve passengers were killed, and several others badly injured.

....The Oil Springs Chronicle says, "a certain party in Toronto recently imported a quantity of American oil from the States, and procured its passage through the customs at two-thirds its actual cost in Canadian funds."

....The appointment to the Archbishopric of Dublin of Dean Trench, instead of Canon Stanley, is a great relief to the evangelical portion of the Church of England. The Record says that the influence of the court was exerted in favor of the latter, on account of his having been the tutor of the Prince of Wales, but Lord Palmerston felt that it would be too great an outrage on the feelings of the religious public to appoint an Archbishopric who sympathised with the "Essayists and Reviewers." Canon Stanley has, however, been prompted to the Deanery of Westminster, vacated by Dr. Trench.

THE SEASON AND ITS CHANGES—Winter still lingers in the lap of spring, and the cold east wind is almost always with us. Yesterday, we had rain, and a cold east wind; today, we shall have the same, probably, and to-morrow, a fine sunny day. These great changes make sad havoc with the healths of our citizens, particularly those having weak lungs. For all diseases of this kind, use Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers. 25 cents a box, at all Druggists.

A WANT SUPPLIED.—The public have long felt the want of something that could be depended upon for the cure of rheumatism, sprins, bruises, neuralgia, bowel complaints, &c., and we are happy to say that that want is now supplied in the shape of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer. It is truly a most wonderful medicine, and one that effects an immediate and permanent cure in all cases for which it is recommended. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

SKATING RINK.

The Peterborough Skating Rink is now open for this Season. With the improvements made thereon during the past summer this will now, undoubtedly, be the Rink of the Province. The Committee of management deserve great praise for their successful endeavours in combating against the great difficulties with which they were beset. A new dam having been built and found to fulfil their greatest expectations, the Rink now presents the appearance of that of the city Rinks—being independent of the current of the creek, and the flooding apparatus entirely under command. At least among the attractions is a neat architectural building, erected immediately on the Rink, and to be used as a sort of cloaking room. It is, we believe, the intention of the worthy proprietor MR. BOSWELL, to have everything in connection with this department studiously neat and comfortable; and rendering the Rink during the monotonious winter months a source of health and delightful pleasure.

MR WALTON.

MR. WALTON, as will be seen by our advertising columns, has added the Land and House Agency to his former Insurance business. MR. WALTON'S energy and attention to his duties are too well known to need comment from us. MR. WALTON is the only person in Peterborough who devotes his exclusive attention to the insurance business which we think should be no small inducement for the Public to patronise him. His companies are first class.

AMERICAN NEWS.

The utter route of General Bragg's army is no longer to be doubted. Gen. Grant's despatches state that abandoned waggons, caissons, and occasional pieces of artillery are everywhere to be found in their line of retreat. Sixty pieces of artillery have been captured, and the number of prisoners already reaches five thousand. On Thursday last, Gens. Hooker and Thomas pursued the retreating enemy, who attempted to make a stand at Chickamauga station, but was again forced back, abandoning waguns, ammunition and cassions, and applying the torch to their stores of every description. Wherever the Federals reach portions of the Confederate army they are said to throw down their arms and scatter, leaving behind hands the stragglers, the discontented and the wounded. Yesterday morning the pursuit was renewed before day, Bragg's line of retreat being in the direction of Red Clay, a small village on the East Tennesee and Georgia Railroad. The intention probably is to endeavor to keep the road in tact for the purpose of aiding Longstreet's retreat. On Friday night General Hooker, Palmer and Sherman were ten miles beyond Chickamauga. In the morning General Palmer, after a sharp fight, took four guns and three hundreds prisoners, and General Sherman, advancing from Tyne Station, is reported to have cut off two thousand prisoners.

The army of the Potomac, as stated in our last advanced toward the Rapidan. The plan was to cross the river in three columns, the army having advanced in that manner, which they did without meeting much resistance—the First and Fifth crossing at Culpepper Ford, and the Third and Sixth crossing at Germania ford. The enemy fell back to a point eighty-five miles from Washington.

The Inquirer publishes a report of Gen. Meade's advance, furnished by one of its correspondents at Verdiersville, a post village in Orange Co., Va., 12 miles from Orange Court House. The despatch furnishing the information is dated Saturday noon, when his cavalry and artillery were driving the enemy down the turnpike towards Orange Court House, and were within eight miles of that place. Nothing but skirmishing had taken place since the army had crossed the Rapidan, and its losses were slight and confined to the cavalry.

The left wing was extended out to the wilderness and Spottsylvania Court House. The rebels make but feeble resistence and fall back wherever they are pressed.

It is reported that the confederate force at Fredericksburg has retreated towards Richmond; thus Federals hold the roads that run direct from Frederick-burg to Gordonsville.

Rains have annoyed the army to a great extent, but will delay them but a few hours.

This morning, (Nov. 28,) at 11 o'clock, Federal forces were pushing forward in line of battle on the Orange and Frederick-burg pike towards the first mentioned point, driving the enemy's skiamishers before them.

This morning opened with a rain-storm, but, nevertheless, the whole army was on the advance at an early hour.

The third corps which crossed the Rapidan at Jacob's Mills, and was engaged yesterday six miles from Locust Grove, on the road leading to Culpepper, deployed to the left of the lines. The sixth remained on the right and the first on the left of the sixth. The second retained its position, while the fifth deployed from its first station on the left to Locust Grove, as the reserve to the army.

Brisk skirmishing commenced as the line reached a point a mile and a half to the west of Locust Point. The troops pushed onward, however, driving the Confederate skirmishers, and hastening their retreat by an occasional shell from the batteries, to which the guns of the enemy did not reply.

General Meade and staff had come up at an early hour to Robertson's tavern. Long trains of ammunition waggons and ambulances were moving to the front, and every thing indicated a general engagement should Lee fall into position, and should the weather be favourable.

THE BATTLE OF CHATTANOOGA.—It appears by the following despatch from Gen. Grant to Washington, dated Friday last, that the great defeat of Chickamauga has at last been fully retrieved:—"I am just in from the front. The rout of the enemy is most complete. Abandoned waggons, caissons, and occasional pieces of artillery are everywhere to be found. I think Bragg's loss will fully reach 60 pieces of artillery. A large number of prisoners have fallen into our hands; the pursuit will continue to Red Clay in the morning, for which place I shall start in a few hours." [Red Clay is on the Georgia and Tennessee railroad, near the line between the States.] Our forces, led by Hooker and Thomas, pursued the flying Rebels on Thursday. Bragg attempted to make a stand at Chicamauga Station, but was again forced back. We captured 60 cannons in all, and 2,000 more prisoners, making at least 7,000 in total. The rebels were in full retreat on Dalton, leaving caissons and waggons in their haste. Several caissons and numerous stragglers were also picked up."

LARGE HOG.—Last week MR. JOHN DARLING of the Township of Smith, brought in and sold a hog which weighed 720 lbs. Beat that, who can, he sold it for $5 25 per 100 lbs.

MR. WAY, at SHAW'S Mills, Douro, a short time ago killed two spring pigs 9 months old which weighed together 560 lbs.

MR. THOS. BEATTY, of this town, killed three spring pigs, six months old, which averaged together 220 lbs apiece.

A large quantity of pork has came into this market the present season and found ready sale at prices ranging from $3.50 to $5.

A THICK FOG—A QUIZZER REBUKED.—A talkative individual encountered a quiet old gentleman on the ferry boat one morning, and vainly endeavoured to draw him into conversation—evidently with a desire to make sport of him, but without much success. At length the talker remarked. "I supposed you consider Down East a right smart place; but I guess it would puzzle them to get up as thick a fog as we have here this morning." "Well," said the old man. "I don't know about that. I hired one of your York chaps to work for me last Summer, and one rather foggy mornin' I sent him down into the meadow to lay a few courses of shingle on a new barn I was finishin' off. At dinner-time the fellow came up, and, sez he, "That's a long barn of yours." Sez I, "Not very long." "Well," sez he, "I've been to work all this forenoon, and haven't got one course laid yet." "Well," sez I, "You're a lazy fellow, that's all I've got to say." And so after dinner I went down to see what he'd been about, and don't you belive, he had shingled more than a hundred feet right on to the fog!" "Answer a fool according to his folly said the Wise MAN."

SHARP SHOOTING.

B. F. Taylor, of the Chicago Journal, has the following allusion to sharpshooting in the army:

Sharpshooting is the squirrel hunting of the war, and it is wonderful how utterly forgetful of self the marksman grows; with what sportsmanlike eyes they watch the grander game, and with what coolness and accuracy they bring it down. I find, however, that indifferent as men became to human life, they have the most vivid and minute remembrance of the first man they brought down with a deliberate aim, often nothing, in the instant of time preceding the fatal shot, the fashion of features, color of eyes and hair, even the expression of face, all painted in a picture that shall last the life out.

"My first man," said an artillerryman to me, "I saw but twenty seconds, and shall remember him forever. I was standing at my gun when a rebel infantry soldier rushed up and Made a lunge with the bayonet at one of the horses. I whipped out my revolver, and took him through the breast. He threw up his hands, gave me the strangest look in the world, and fell forward upon his face. He had blue eyes, brown curling hair, a dark moustache and a handsome face."

The gunner paused a moment and added: "I thought the instant I shot that I shall have loved that man had I known him. I tell you what—this war is terrible business." And so it is—and so it is—but "they that take the sword shall perish by the sword."

THE FENIAN BROTHERHOOD.

The London Times publishes a communication giving the following explanation of the new Irish League has taken for itself:—

"In Wright's History of Ireland, pp. 9 and 10, you will find what you so much desire, viz.: 'After the flood the population of the world assembled to raise the Tower of Babal was separated into 72 peoples, speaking so many different languages. Gomer's grandson, Feninsa, Farsa, or Phenius, King of the Scythians, was anxious to make himself acquainted with the 72 languages. With this object he sent out 72 learned men to reside seven years among the 72 different people who spoke them, and on their return he left his kingdom, having placed his son Nennall on the throne, as regent, during his absence, and proceeded with the learned men to the plain of Shenaar, the scene of the dispersal, where this learned monarch founded a school of languages. To this Phenius the Irish annalist ascribes the invention of the Ogham characters, or ancient Irish alphabet, and they tell us that in this college on the plain of Shenaar was cultivated the purest dialect of the Irish language, called the Bearla Feini. Phenius commanded Gadel, the son of Cathur, to digest the Irish language into form and regulation, and to divide it into five several dialects. The first was the Fenian dialect, spoken by the militia and soldiery, the second poetical; the third the historical; the fourth the dialect of the physicians; and the fifth the common idioms, or vulgar Irish, used in general by the people, which after the name of Gadel, the president, was named 'Gavil bealg.'"

THE AMERICAN FUR TRADE.—The St. Paul (Minn.) Free Press has the following remarks on the subject of the American fur trade: "On looking at the books of our dealers, we find that 3,500 bison or buffaloes have fallen victims to the arrow or the bullet on our Northwestern Prairies, to supply civilized men with robes to keep him warm in winter. These robes will always be a standing article for such purposes. They cost about $7 undressed. An equal number of wolves—which fact one hears with pleasure—have also bitten the dust to supply our fair countrymen with fair sleigh robes, worth $2 each, to keep out the biting air while gliding over the snows of the northern waters. The brute family bewail the loss of 950 ursine members. These skins, costing from $10 to $20, are also used for sleigh covers and for military purposes, as are 1,050 of the red fox, worth about $2 50 each. The mink, now mercilessly pursued, since his pelt is worth from $3.50 to $5, contributes 28,000 skins toward these elegant mantles and cloaks that every lady covers. The muskrat species are prolific, and have given us fully 250,000 skins, worth 80 to 85 cents each. Of the more rare and costly furs, 2,258 otters have been captured from their legitimate retreats, to do duty in the shape of gloves, &c., at $6 to $7 per pelt, and 540 fishers have been trapped, yielding the fortunate hunter $8 to $10 apiece. The martin family, one much prized, lost 1,600 members enriching the trapper at the rate of $5 to $10 each. Of the cross fox, a very scarce and rare animal, only 76 have been caught. Good specimens bring $20.

RETRENCHMENT.—Since May last, 1863, when the Reform Administration took office, the departmental expenses have been reduced as follows:—

Provincial Secretary's Office	$3,811
Provincial Registrar	2,390
Receiver General	3,714
Crown Lands	12,594
Public Works	1,600
Attorney General West,	400
Adjutant General	6,849
Customs Department	18,072
	$49,300

Deduct from this $1,560 increase in the Bureau of Agriculture, and we have a total annual saving in these branches of expenditure alone of $37,710.

War the Sole Policy for the South.

(From the Richmond Examiner.)

While a furious invading enemy is laying waste our fair fields, demanding unconditional submission to its government, offering no terms of peace, nor even hinting at negotiation of peace upon any other basis, but avowing the unanimous purpose to subjugate us of all right, of all law and of all property; and while our devoted armies are in the field, with their arms in their hands and their banners flying, to defy, resist, and beat back that foul invasion, we do not comprehend how any man in the confederacy can—we do not say get "honorable peace"—but even talk of honorable peace, save by vanquishing those invading enemies. If the political system of those invading enemies breaks up by reason of reverses in war or financial troubles; if certain States of their "Union" remember that they have States rights, and act upon them by seceding from that Union, and offering us a peace, so far as they are concerned, it will be well; that will aid us materially in the one single task we have to achieve—the task of defeating and destroying the military power of our enemies. But reasonable Confederates would be at a loss to know how we can contribute to that happy state of things, except by continued and resistance in arms. Our sole policy and cunningest diplomacy is fighting; our most insinuating negotiator is the Confederate army in line of battle.

Now we perceive that just as Congress is about to meet, certain newspapers of the confederacy are preparing the way for discussions in that body about some other method of obtaining peace. The other method suggested, in so far as we can comprehend it, consists in the several States of the Confederacy taking the matter out of the hands of the Confederate Government, ignoring the government and the army, and all that army has done and suffered for the independence of the confederacy, and then making peace, each State for itself, as best it can. There would be an honorable peace!

We are sorry to have to mention that such an idea has shown itself. It was believed that it was confined to about two newspapers, both of Raleigh, North Carolina. But something very similar is to be found in two other newspapers of Atlanta. As it is extremely essential that the time of the Congress should not be diverted for one instant from the business of carrying on the war by any vain palaver about peace, when there is no peace, we reluctantly advert to the disagreeable circumstance in order that the small distracting element may be disposed of and made innocuous the more speedily.

MONEY EASILY MADE,

By either Gentlemen or Ladies.

I AM in possession of a beautiful French Art, which has been introduced in this Country only to a limited extent, and that in New York City. It is something which every person stands in great need of, consequently will be extensively patronized. Persons can make money with it at home or abroad. Thousands in France have made small fortunes at it, and are still doing so. I would state what it is, but persons purchasing the knowledge of it do not desire it made public. One Dollar sent to the undersigned will assure the immediate return of a circular giving full information in the Art, and the requisite instructions to pursue it. It is strictly genteel, and the best and only thing ever introduced which every person can make money at. NO LETTERS NOTICED, except those containing the required amount for instructions.

PEOPLE'S PAPER!

SUBSCRIBE FOR THE

"PETERBOROUGH EXAMINER,"

Only $1 Per Year in Advance.

What family should be without Godey's Lady's Book? It costs $3.00 a year. We will, however, furnish both the EXAMINER and LADY'S BOOK for $3.75! that is: both for 25 cents less than what you pay for the LADY'S BOOK alone. Or, to every subscriber paying in advance we will, for an extra 75 cents, furnish Madame Demorest's Mirror of Fashions, and Quarterly Journal de Grande Mode, each number of which contains large and magnificent Fashion Plates, splendid illustrations of all the fashionable and Paris novelties, for Ladies' and Children's Dress, useful information, and the four life-size Patterns, cut ready for use, etc., etc. It should be remembered that each yearly subscriber to Mme. Demorest's Mirror of Fashions is entitled to the selection of 50 cents' worth of extra patterns, or a copy of Mme. Demorest's System for cutting Children's Dresses, or for 50 cents more, the Ladies' System. That is, for 75 cents, we will give to every subscriber of the EXAMINER paying in advance, $1.50 worth. More than this, we will likewise pay the American postage, which is no small item. Those who have paid in advance are entitled to the same privilege. Or, if friends prefer, they can, instead of the above journal, for the extra 75 cents, have Judd's celebrated American Agriculturist, which ought to be in the hands of every farmer. Names should be sent in at once.

To any one sending us 6 subscribers we will give Kinglake's Crimean War; 10 subscribers, Alcock's Tycoon Capital; 20 subscribers, Webster's Dictionary; 30 subscribers, Worcester's largest Dictionary.

The party sending a club can, if he choose, select any other work of a similar value. The cash must in every instance accompany the order.

A Special Premium will be given to the party sending in the largest number of subscribers by the 1st of March. Names can be sent in at any time, and will be credited as received.

Poetry.

Song of the Journalist who read the Song of the Shirt.

Scratch, scratch, scratch,
Paragraph, Items and News,
Essays, Tales and Reviews,
With the bleakest kinds of blues.

Scratch, scratch, scratch,
Marriages, Debts and Dues,
Eulogy, Gossip and Puff,
Accidents, Funds and Fuss.
Scratch, scratch, scratch,
Beetle, Bitt and Bell,
Music, and Cash and Trade,
Who is, and who isn't afraid.

Scratch, scratch, scratch,
Apology, Challenge and Slur,
Of It, of Him and of Her,
Invention, Hashrag and Truth,
Folly, Fashion and Youth,
Suicide, Sermon and Joke,
Metaphysics and Smoke,
With upward and downward's smoke,
Rain, and Vice and Shame,
Virtue, Honor and Fame.

Scratch, scratch, scratch,
"It's easy as nothing to do,"
"I could do it better than you,"
To be considered a "Quiz,"
And nothing at the end of the year.

Scratch, scratch, scratch,
"You're everybody's tool,"
The reader calls you a fool;
"The editor is an ass,"
So says the critical Mass.
If the paper stops they howl,
If its a minute too late they growl.

Scratch, scratch, scratch,
O! Slave of the mighty Press,
The "Devil" demands a "Mass,"
For subscribers that never pay,
Oh! isn't it jolly, say?

Varieties.

A HARD NUT FOR McGEE TO CRACK.—That nucleus of a Canadian aristocracy,—Sir Henry Smith. The miserable man cheated the printer of his election addresses by sneaking behind a legal quibble. Heaven save us from any more "beggars on horseback," or "knights on stilts!" A kettle more honesty, Sir Henry, just a little.—Grumbler.

A MEAN MAN.—The meanest man we ever heard of was a scapegoat, who cried an hour upon the death of a child, and when a neighbor who thought his grief legitimate and sincere, offered consolation, he bellowed out: 'Oh! it's of no use to talk to me. Here's this child died of a fever, and I was at the expense of having it vaccinated, and bought it a new chip hat only a week ago! Boo oo-hoo!'

An editor out West, in speaking of his domestic increases, gives the following;

"Sound the Stage horn, blast the trumpet
That the wailing world may know!
Publish it through all the borders,
Even unto Mexico!
"Seize your pen, oh dreaming poet,
And in numbers as may be,
Spread afar the joyful tidings,
Betsey's got another baby?"

A SPICY PARAGRAPH.—"! what is the use of living?" asked Jack Simmonds, the other day. "We are flogged for crying when we are babies flogged because the master is cross when we are boys; obliged to drink sick or well or starve when we are men; to work still harder when we are husbands; and after exhausting life and strength in the service of other people, die and leave our children in quarrel about the possession of father's watch, and our wives to catch somebody else."

A methodist minister in Kansas, living on a small salary, was greatly troubled to get his quarterly instalment. He at last told the non-paying trustees that he must have his money, as he was suffering for the necessaries of life. "Money?" replied the trustees "you preach for money? We thought you preached for the good of souls!" "Souls!" responded the revrand. "I can't eat souls—and if I could, it would take a thousand such as yours to make a meal!"

A young lady at a ball was asked by a lover of serious poetry, whether she had seen Crabbe's Tales.

"Why no," she answered. "I did not know that crabs had tails."

"I beg your pardon, miss," said he; "I mean have you read Crabbe's Tales?"

"And I assure you, sir," said she, "I did not know that red crabs, or any other crabs, had tails."

A CUTTING REBUKE.—A clergyman had two daughters who were much too fond of dress, which was a great grief to him. He had often reproved them in rain; and preaching one Sabbath day on the sin of pride, he took occasion to notice among other things, pride of dress. After speaking some considerable time on this subject, he suddenly stopped short and said, with much feeling and expression, "But you may look at home. My friends, I do look at home until my heart aches."

SPYTHING PER-MA-NENT.—The Knickerbocker Magazine is responsible for the following:

One pleasant Sunday in Glasgow, a stalwart Highlandman entered a drug store, or apothecary's shop, and said:

"Have ye any spirits of alcohol? The shops are closed and I canna get a quigh o Glenlivat or Islap. I'm thirsty. Canna ye gie a wee drop o' somethin' warming?"

It really seemed a hard case, and the good hearted apothecary helped him to what he supposed to be an uncommonly stiff horn of pure alcohol.

The man who drank it off gave one wild look then spread his two hands suddenly over the abdominal portion of his person, and immediately vacated the premises.

The apothecary was startled. What was the matter? He took down the vessel from which he had poured the devouring fluid, and found he had given the man a bumper of aquafortis! He was half frightened to death. The man had left his hat behind him, and the apothecary rushed out, bareheaded, with it in his hand, his hair flying in the wind, and made hot pursuit after the fugitive; but he was hopelessly gone.

What a life that poor fellow led for three months! He was afraid to open the daily newspapers, lest he should see recorded the mysterious and melancholy death of his victim in the streets. At length, however, his fears died away. Nothing was heard of the missing sufferer until about six months from the event when one Sunday morning, who should walk in but the individual himself!

"Have you got," said he to the astonished apothecary, "any more of that liquor you sold me the last time I was here? If you have, give me a horn. I never tasted anything like it. It went right to the spot. Why it lasted a fortnight! No reduction about that fluid?"

But the apothecary contented himself this time by giving his returned customer a glass of pure spirits, and his old hat which he had left the time before.

SOLDIERS in the ARMY!

AND OUR PEOPLE AT HOME,

Are now offered an opportunity by which they can obtain a

GOOD AND DURABLE TIME-PIECE,

At a very Low Figure.

OUR WATCHES are warranted to keep time one year, and the buyer is allowed the privilege of examination before the payment is required.

Improved Duplex in full Ruby Actions.

A first-class Hunting Time-Piece of silver material, over which is electro-find plated 18 k. gold, most durably wrought, making the imitation so faultless that it cannot be detected from the solid material by the most experienced Judges: acids will not affect it. London made movement. Improved Duplex in full Ruby Actions has sweep seconds, and is not to be excelled in general appearance. This decidedly the one of the best watches ever offered for traders and speculators. Engineers, emigrants and persons travelling will find them superior to any other; alteration of climate will not affect their accuracy. Price, packed in good shape and good running order, only $35, or case of 5 for $200.

Silver Double Time Hunting Levers,

Best quality silver cases, over which electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, similar to our improved Duplex, and superior adjusted movements with "stop," to be used in timing horses, ect.: has four inducts for Washington and Greenwich time, sweep second, and all the improvements. All in all, taking its beautiful and faultless appearance and its superior movement into consideration, we regard it as decidedly the cheapest article of the kind in the market. Price, in good running order, $35, or case of 6 for $200.

☞ We ask no pay in advance, but will forward either of them to responsible parties, to any part of the loyal States, with bill payable to the express-man when the Good are delivered, giving the buyer the privilege of examination, and, if not satisfactory, the watch can be returned at our expense.

The express companies refuse making collections on soldiers, and other parties in the disloyal States, consequently all such orders must be accompanied by the cash to insure attention. We make a deduction on either Watch when the payment is forwarded in advance.

Money may be sent by express at our expense

MANHOOD
AND THE
VIGOR OF YOUTH RESTORED
IN FOUR WEEKS,
By Dr. Sicotte's Essence of Life.

DR. SICOTTE, (OF PARIS) after years of earnest solicitation, has at length acceded to the urgent request of the American public, and appointed an agent in Toronto for the sale of his valued and highly prized Essence of Life. This wonderful agent will restore Manhood to the most shattered constitutions, whether arising from excesses, the effects of climate, or natural causes. The time required to cure the most inveterate case is four weeks; and if used according to printed instructions, which are very simple, failure is impossible. This life-restoring remedy should be taken by all about to marry, as its effects are permanent. It is acknowledged by the medical press to be the greatest discovery ever made. Its developing powers are miraculous. Success in every case is as certain as that science overthrows ignorance.

Dr. Sicotte's Essence of Life is sold in cases, with full instructions for use, at $5, or four quantities in one for $8, and will be sent to any part, carefully packed, on receipt of remittance to his accredit agent.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK,
For 1864.

GREAT LITERARY & PICTORIAL YEAR.

THE PUBLISHER of Godey's Lady's Book, thanking, in that public which has enabled him to publish a Magazine for the last thirty-four years of a larger circulation than any in America, has made an arrangement with the most popular authoress in this country—

MARION HARLAND,

Authoress of "Alone," "Hidden Path," "Moriam," "Moss Side," and "Nemesis,"

Who will furnish Stories for the Lady's Book for 1864. This alone will place the Lady's Book in a literary point of view fare ahead of any other Magazine. Our other favourite writers will all continue to furnish articles throughout the year.

The best Lady's Magazine in the world and the Cheapest.

THE LITERATURE

Is of that kind that can be read aloud in the family circle, and the clergy in immense numbers are subscribers for the Book.

THE MUSIC

Is all original, and would cost 25 cents, (the price of the Book) in the music stores; but most of it is copyrighted, and cannot be obtained except in Godey.

OUR STEEL ENGRAVINGS.

All efforts to rival us in this have ceased, and we now stand alone in this department, giving as we do many more and infinitely better engravings than are published in any other work. Godey's immense double sheet Fashion-Plates, containing from five to seven full length colored Fashions on each plate—other Magazines give only two—are far ahead of any Fashions in Europe or America. The publication of these Plates cost $10,000 more than the Fashion Plates of the old style, and nothing but our wonderfully large circulation enables us to give them. Other Magazines cannot afford it. We never spare money when the public can be benefited.

These Fashions may be relied on. Dresses may be made after them, and the wearer will not subject herself to ridicule, as she would be if she visited the large cities dressed after the style of the plates in some of our so-called Fashion Magazines.

OUR WOOD ENGRAVINGS,

Of which we give twice or three times as many as any other Magazine, are often mistaken for steel; they are no far superior to any others

IMITATIONS.

Beware of them. Remember that the Lady's Book is the original publication and the cheapest. If you take Godey, you want no other Magazine. Everything that is useful or ornamental in a house will be found in Godey.

DRAWING LESSONS.

No other Magazine gives them, and we have given enough to fill several large volumes.

OUR RECEIPTS

Are such as can be found nowhere else. Cooking in all its varieties — Confectionary— the Nursery—the Toilet—the Laundry—the Kitchen Receipts upon all subjects are to be found in the pages of the Lady's Book. We originally started this department, and have peculiar facilities for making it most perfect. This department alone is worth the price of the book.

LADIES' WORK TABLE.

This department comprises engravings and descriptions of every article that a lady wears.

MODEL COTTAGES.

No other Magazine has this department.

Terms to Subscribers in the British Provinces:

One copy one year, $3; two copies one year, $5; three copies one year, $7.

Five copies one year, and an extra copy to the person sending the club, making six copies for $11.50.

Special Clubbing with other Magazines.

Godey's Lady's Book and Arthur's Magazine, one year, $4.

Godey and Harper, one year, $5.

Godey, Harper, and Arthur, one year, $7.

At these prices subscribers in the Provinces will have only the British postage to pay.

Treasury notes and notes of all solvent banks taken at par.

Be careful and pay the postage on your letter.

THE FOUR MAN'S NAME.

SUGGESTED BY READING A DESCRIPTION OF THE LECTURE OF "THE FUTURE OF CANADA."

Let others choose to sing the pomp an' ravelry, Displayed within the Lordly dome by pampered vanity; Where vane is worshipped by man, be mine the lowly theme, To sing the unaspirin' strain, the puir man's hame.

The puir man's hame, wi its humble roof o' straw, Is lookit on wi scorn by the wealthy, proud an' gay; To reside in sic a dwellin, it wad their rank defame, Yet God disdains not to bide in the puir man's hame.

The puir man's hame, tho' unkent to luxury, Proud mammon wi his hoarded gold passes its threshold by; A stranger to his sin abode, there Peace resides—sweet dame, An' Content sits at the table in the puir man's hame.

The puir man's hame, there genius springs to birth, An' sheltered by its humble wa's, live honest pride and worth; There love an' virtue dwellers are, there hope fans her flame, An' fondly look to heaven frae the puir man's hame.

The puir man's hame, there, aft rival'd by the hind, Is the sceptred king upon his throne for dignity o' mind; The lowly children o' the puir, some rise to highest fame— Knox, Burns and Watt were born in a puir man's hame.

The puir man's hame, around its Winter hearth, Sang frae the blast, sit crackin' age, wi youngsters' glee and mirth; Its dozie ingle bleesin' bricht, fell Boreas' rage doth tame— There are pleasures Lordlie's diuna ken in the puir man's hame.

The puir man's hame is the abode of industry; Without the aid of labor how puir o'an kings wad be; Proud aristocrats for want wad die, an' wealth be but a name, If it werena the toil'd workers o' the puir man's hame.

Then let them prate as lang they list o' the pomp and dignity Displayed in either climes by lordly vanity; In Canada wi want them not, wi' their domes o' lofty frame, To fleech the lowly inmates o' the puir man's hame.

Literature.

Three Chapters of my Life.

(Concluded.)

CHAPTER III.

I have told of a childhood and youth of privation and hardship, sore trials to a sensitive self conscious nature. I have described their effect upon me at the time, showing how they hardened and soured my disposition. I have described the gradual change which an interest in others awakened and the good effect which the calling out of my affections and sympathies had exercised in my character.

If I now look back upon my early trials in a trivial and unsubstantial, it is because my capacity for sorrow as for joy is now deep enough to contain a father measure of each. How will it be when from the mountains of spiritual growth whose tops rise above these time-shadows, I look back upon the conflicts of mature life! Will the sorrows, patiently borne and rightly used here, be turned into joy? Will the sum of happiness to which all the rivers of Eden flow, ever be filled there? But to go back in my story. Katherine dead, Mr. and Mrs. Hammond with their children prepare to embark for Europe, driven by the spirit of unrest which mocks the wretched soul with the promise of escape from itself.

Shall I or shall I not, accompany them? That is the question. Love of novelty and adventure, thirst for knowledge, and a highly imaginative temperament, urge me to go. The disagreeable sensations they position hold me back. Besides, did I not promise Katherine to see her brother on his return? But who could say when he might appear? Mr. Hammond urged my going. I was necessary, he said, to the children. As if anticipating some of the drawbacks to my personal enjoyment he assured me I should have all the advantages I reasonably could desire—that I should be gentleman, while the more unusual services I had hitherto rendered should be performed by another. I liked Mr. Hammond. He was invested in my mind with that peculiar interest which a sentimental young woman always feels in an unhappy man—particularly if he be handsome. Yet I never no one could have lived with Mr Hammond and not more felt an interest in him. I thought I saw deeper than the surface. I thought I knew the struggle that was going on within him. I felt that he was wrestling with a great sorrow. I did not know the facts of his past life, but I could easily conclude from my own theory; and secretly I and reverence widely drank I the right would I but yet it in prayer, would enlist the sympathy and interest of many a reader.

And the grand—and if they fail not that.

Circumstances sometimes appear to feel life so violently to the point do they overwhelm we could do not. My disappointment and vexation of purpose with—called—up by my own will or wisdom, but by the sudden and unexpected arrival of Alfred Sydney, Katherine's only brother. Mr. and Mrs. Hammond were absent at the time, at New York. I think the meeting with one so beloved by my dearest friend should not be passed over lightly, yet I do not know what to say in regard to it. It was my melancholy office to repeat to him in detail the last words, and to describe, over and over again, the last days of his idolized sister. I saw a manly heart bowed with grief; and yet, when I told him how she died, it seemed to take a load from his breast, and he said, "Thank God!" Yes, he alone of all earthly beings knew what she had suffered. Well he might say "Thank God!" for he knew she was ripe for the harvest.

I can not describe Alfred Sydney. I thought I saw at once how great and good he was. I have learned that my life is not yet long enough to grasp it all—an never grasp it—because all goodness is eternal, ever widening and deepening; and I do not wish to, at this, standing on this sphere of apparent boundless, I can measure the capacities of my human soul—of his soul, who owned no bound rise to its own growth. Yet, should I try and describe him, I might say he was calm, strong, tender, and true; that he looked all this; that in all he said and did—in his face, in his bearing—he gave the impress of himself. You could see in him a quick, impassioned, fervent human nature, led by the noblest spiritual truth, warmed by a Divine love. Was he faultless? Do not ask me—ask him. To me, so in error as I was, and am now, he was faultless; to himself, with his far reaching aspirations, it was still the call to buckle on his armor for conflict with new foes, and more and more in error temptations.

No, I cannot describe him. I shall not try. I saw much of him the few days he was at home. I talked much through him of his sister's past life. We did not meet as strangers at the first, and not those whole with him was the reflection thrown upon me that we occupied different positions in life. I forgot that I was a governess—forgot that I had ever been poor. Oh, wondrous alchemy of love, changing the very meanest things of life to gold! I was too rich in his confidence, in the offer of his friendship, in his promise to see me at my return from Europe, to think of poverty—too wise in my new circumstances to call that poverty which permitted me daily to the enjoyments of life. All the waters of the sea on which I crossed soon after he left could not wash from my hand that good-by clasp with which he said, "See all you can, learn all you can, be as happy as you can. We shall meet again."

I was absent three years. I traveled the greater part of the time, visiting the cities of Europe, and tasting for a few enchanted months of Poetry and Art. I did see much, I learned much, enjoyed much, suffered—yes, such a one as mine can not escape suffering. Had I not suffered myself, I must have seen, I must have felt, the things suffered whom I saw every day. Perhaps I felt happier than I otherwise should in the consciousness that I was able to temper some of the weary hours of those with whom I was associated. Poor Mrs Hammond! how often she rises before me now, with that smile on her face she always wore, as if to hide the tried to be cheerful as others into the belief that she was happy. How deep and deeper the fire of passion burned into that face, day after day, mocking at that dreadful smile. And Mr. Hammond. I believe he tried sometimes to follow the beckonings of that invisible hand which once pointed upward the path of sacrifice he must achieve; but he never triumphed over the noble part of his nature. Little by little he yielded to the seductions of sensuality, and when he could not conquer his wretchedness and self-reproach, he sought to drown it in dissipation and the various forms of excitement which European society offers to the pleasure-seeker and the unoccupied. For myself, I was not sorry when our pilgrimage was at an end. I was willing, glad to do all I could for the happiness of those who could do no more than turn to my solace for relief, but it began to wear upon me. The children loved; and, God knows, I tried to be faithful to them. They were truly at home in all that is the birthright of childhood. One great, absorbing passion, in its healthy development, swallowed up the gentle instincts of maternity. Wide was the separation between the favored restless-ness and unsatisfied love of the woman, and the quietness and peace of the children. I need not dwell on this part of the picture. I am hastening now to close this third chapter of my life.

I am in a home of my own, now; but it is not what it was years ago, when filled with love and happiness, I went from room to room, in which every tasteful decoration, every convenience, elegance, and comfort had been provided for me by him whom I worshipped—my dear, my noble, my generous husband. For once in my whole life it seemed as if every desire was gratified, as if there was nothing left to wish for. I could not have believed it possible that I should ever be ungrateful for the fullness, the beauty of my life. It did not seem that, in a heart so filled with love and happiness as mine was, room could be found for one carking thought, one selfish emotion. I have learned, I see that this is a great truth. No love but the heavenly can exclude the evils of our selfish nature. I was ambitious; I was expecting; I was worldly. I wished to be first every where. When Squire Robinson invited me, as I thought, by arranging my motives, not by self-ring me the petty sum of two dollars when I was penniless, I longed for the day to come on which I could be to throw upon him a social pecuniary favor for favor he once. This came with my marriage; now had [illegible] changed all pained my wishes that I did not enjoy my triumph. Charlie Robinson was married and lived near us. We moved in the same circle, and I was always glad of an opportunity to assist those who evidently and haughty spirit. Well! I knew these traits in my character gave my husband pain. Well I knew they were unworthy of me; but there they were, along with many others which even the constant pressure of a noble nature could not easily restrain.

But the scene changes. First came loss of property, to bring down my pride; then loss of my children, to bring my heart with anguish. Then I prospered. I felt that the foundations of my earthly happiness were shaken. I seemed to have no foothold in time or eternity. How rebellious I was! how unreconciled! In my heart I longed to curse God and die. For a while even my love for my husband failed to comfort me. I could not bear the house that was swept of its beautiful adornments, the broad-decked of its joy and mirth, the ringing laugh of my children, mocking my memory in dreams. Oh! I could not bear the sight of anything I had loved. I went for change—of scene to my early home. That, too, was changed; my mother was gone, and my sister lived there alone, in the same merry cheerful spirit as ever. She never could forget to be grateful to me for having secured for her the asylum which she now enjoyed in peace. I found but little to console me there, and soon fled back to my only source of strength, my husband's love. While I leaned upon him in my wilfulness now I did not perceive how that love began to fail and flutter. When I discovered this, it was too late to build it up by my repentance or my prayers. Absorbed in my own grief, I had forgotten that he could suffer—that my loss was his loss. I thought because he was calm and sustained he did not feel as I did. Need I fill up the outline? Will not a few lines to all I mean to convey? No, they can not tell all. We do could not measure the happiness or the misery of one human life.

I sit in my own home now—a widow and childless. The sound of children's voices echoes through the house, calling up the cherub faces that once smiled on me but they are not mine, except by adoption. I love all children now.

A young married pair occupy the sunny room in the front of our house. It is their home, but their happiness is not bounded by its four walls. The girl-wife calls me mother. I seem old enough to be her mother; but that does not wound me since she thinks me kind enough to merit the dear name. She was a stranger once and I took her in, for thy sake, dear Lord.

I sit in my own room, writing—the room so full of sacred associations, to which years ago, I came a happy bride—that room I am which was borne the last stay of my earthly affections. I seem to live, day by day, those years that are gone. I seem to watch again that best of whose lessons of patience, of love, and trust of heavenly beatitude pass in me what I am now—humble and thankful beneath my Father's teachings. I seem to feel that clasp—the same that I told so much to my heart in youth of hope and happiness. The dying fingers still cling to my hand, and I know the faint breath was one of love for me. I was cured I could be so calm. I wonder often now I can be so happy; and yet, why should I wonder; Delayed long, perhaps, still it comes at last, the verdure and the flowers over our burned fares and hopes. Grief harrowed the stubborn soil; tears watered the heavenly seed—but I am not writing a sermon, and my story is ended.

It may not be amiss to add, that the desk of letters which Katherine left my husband threw all the additional light on the history of the family which my imagination could not supply. The daughter's lover became the mother's husband, by what arts those can judge who know what arts selfish women have at their command to compass their ends. But the happiness she looked to obtain vanished in the possession of its object. It was not love she enkindled; it was not love that inspired her. That passion, even by the best of us, unworthy the name of true womanhood that can sacrifice the happiness of another to its selfish desires, can only end in misery.

THE WOUNDED AFTER A BATTLE.

B. F. Taylor gives the following scenes occurring after the battle of Chickamauga. The surgeon lays off the green sash and the tasseled coat, and rolls up his sleeves, and spreads aside his cases filled with the terrible litter of silver and steel, and makes ready for work. They began to come in, slowly at first, one man nursing a shattered arm, another borne by his comrades, three in an ambulance, one on a stretcher; then faster and faster lying here, lying there, waiting each his terrible turn.—The silver steel grew cloudy and hard; true right arms are heaped like slips of golden willow; feet that never turned from the foe, forever more without an owner, strew the ground. The knives are busy, the sawing, sawing is bloody work. Ah, the Surgeon with heart and hand, with hand and eye fit for such a place, in a prince among men; cool and calm quick and tender, he sets aching the arteries and fingers the tendons as if they were harp strings. But the cloud thunders and the spirited rain plutters louder and heavier, and the poor fellows come creeping away on broken ranks like corn beaten down with the fury of a storm. "My God!" cried a Surgeon, as looking up an instant from his work he saw the mutilated crowds coming;—"my God! are all my boys cut down!" And yet it thundered and rained. A poor fellow written and a smothered moan escaped him. "Be patient, Jack," says the Surgeon cheerfully; "I'll make you all right in a minute." And what a meaning there was in that "all right!" It was a right arm to come off by the elbow, and "Jack" clapped off a ring that clasped one of the poor, morose fingers, that were to shroud with the earth of Abraham, and put it in his pocket! "all right!" Then "Abraham" comes "how are you?" Mr. Lincoln and put gladness here any hope made at echo that to-day.

"What all their country's wishes blest!" Another thing which distinguishes Indians the intellectual and moral from all the others it is the value of an thought, an animal, as one I knew, an imposing person; the superior instinct in pointing friend to friend, and the kindness of all. An old Indian sat upon a country fence, and some of the officers rode that way. "Hillo, Indian," says the doctor, dismounting a moment on his talk, "what's the matter?" "Oh, sick, sick, Doctor, only a little ill." "But what was the matter with you?" was the reply. You should have heard that word, as an middling pudgy as it used to seem, it grew manly and noble, and I never shall hear it again without a thought for the boy that uttered it, on the dusky slope of the Tennessee, the boy—must I say it?—that sleeps the soldier's sleep within an hundred rods of the spot where I found him. And so it is everywhere; not a whisper nor a plaint. Only one time I knew extreme—the friend Lieutenant, as brave a fellow as ever drew a sword, had been shot through and through the thighs, dearly wounded by the bullet—the ugliest wound but four I ever saw. Eight days before he weighed one hundred and sixty.—Then he could not have swung one hundred and twenty clear to the floor. He had just been brought over the mountains; it is wounds were weary with fever; every motion was torture; they were lifting him as tenderly as they could; they let him slip and he fell, perhaps six inches. And it was like a clash from a precipice to him, and he walked one into a little child, with eyes big pale, thin face, and he only said, "My poor child, how will you feel now?" It was only for an instant; his spirit and his frame stiffened up together, and with a half smile he said "don't tell my body boys, that I made a fool of myself!" The Lieutenant sleeps well, and also, for the poor child—how did they tell her?

A soldier fairly riddled with bullets, like one of those battle flags of Ithaca, lay on a blanket gasping for breath.—"Jemmy," said a comrade, and a friend before this crowd was begun with one arm swung up to a sling, and who was going home on a furlough, "Jemmy, what shall I tell them at home for you?" "Tell them," said he, "that there can't hardly enough of me left to say I've been laid down here, a minute—tell Kate there is enough of me left to love her till I die." Jemmy got his furlough that night, and left the ranks forever.

AN EXPERIMENT BALLOON.—The Journal des Debats at Aix Industries speaks seriously of a balloon enormous enough of containing 250 persons, which is to make aerial journeys from the Place de la Concorde to the Bois de Boulogne. The subject seems just now to occupy men of science very much. Many letters have recently been read at the Academy of sciences from persons who express confidence that it will soon be possible to navigate the air. All these letters have been sent to M. Rainet.

A MAN BEATEN AND ROBBED NEAR KINGSTON BY A SOLDIER.—As Mr. Dobson, residing at Barriefield, was returning home on Wednesday evening, he was waylaid on Barriefield Hill by a soldier, (Mr. Dobson thinks by a 47th Regiment man,) and grievously assaulted, beaten and robbed of what money he had about him, ($5) and it was with the utmost difficulty the poor man escaped strangulation, for the soldier had him by the throat several minutes.—Kingston Whig.

STUBBORN INSURRECTION.—A special correspondent of the Times, writing from Warsaw, says that although the Russians have lately gained advantages over the National Government, the insurgents continue as valiantly and determined as ever, and that the insurrection has again broken out in several districts in which it was thought to have been suppressed. He renews his charges of cruelty against the Russian authorities, and affirms that, although the Grand Duke Constantine positively forbade the flogging of women, General Berg, the newly appointed Governor of Warsaw, had three daughters of a rich brewer, the youngest only twelve years of age, whipped, because they would not disclose the names of the visitors at their father's house.

THE DISTRESS ON THE UPPER SAGUENAY.—The Courrier du Canada announced some days since that the settlers on the Upper Saguenay were in great distress, and suggested as the most practical remedy, the completion of the Kingston Road. We are happy to be able to announce that our contemporary said, in all probability, have his wish gratified in a few days, as we are assured, it is the intention of the Government to apply to the completion of that artery of communication, all the moneys allotted to the county of Chicoutimi for colonization roads, thereby connecting the settlements on the Upper Saguenay with Chicoutimi and Grande Baie. These funds, so applied will furnish to the sufferers a prompt and efficacious relief.—Quebec Mercury.

EUROPEAN CONGRESS.

The third NAPOLEON is the arch agitator of Europe. He is the cynosure of the eyes of all its courts. One scheme after another comes from the fertile and subtle brain of the French Ruler. He heaps his brethen sovereigns over on the qui vive. He is always in the attitude of striking, but it is never known with certainty whether his next move will be a blow or a feint. He now proposes to have a European Congress at Paris. He thinks the times require such a convention, and no doubt wishes to get all the credit of taking the initiative. But this invitation does not seem to have met with that marked attention and cordial favor that NAPOLEON might have expected. The note of invitation itself is a remarkable paper, and not unworthy of the reputation of even such a finished master of finesse as the French Emperor has proved himself to be. Were the mere words to be considered, nothing could be more commendable than the object contemplated by NAPOLEON in convoking such a Convention; nor are the reasons advanced by him to show the imperative necessity of such a meeting, without logical force. But no faith can be put in the man His name is synonymous with duplicity. To repose confidence in him with safety is an absolute impossibility. He would have the world to look upon him as the leading Reformer and Progressionist of the day; but the world are not so inclined to look. The world judge by his antecedents and the verdict is against him. His past policy has been so tortuous in its nature, so inexplicable on every defensible principle, so irreconcilable with what he now lays down as the basis and rule of his future conduct, that everything thing he broaches or proposes to do is viewed with distrust and alarm. It is impossible to tell whether his professions of interest and friendship, are a semblance, or a veritable reality. Every movement is apt to be looked upon as a stratagem to conceal some ulterior scheme of a selfish nature. What his real views and object are in inviting the crowned heads to a Conference, whatever the conjectures, must at best be enigmatical. The reasons he assigns are certainly very plausible, and would be, if they emanated from any other quarter, not without weight. He asserts that the convulsions that have disturbed Europe during the last half century have, in a marked degree, destroyed its equilibrium, and virtually abrogated the conditions of the Peace Treaty of Vienna. He says, "the Treaties of 1815 have ceased to exist; the force of circumstances have over ruled them." He, therefore, wishes to inaugurate a new era of peace and order. He thinks that from the existent unsettled and undefined state of things that there "arise duties without rules, rights without titles, and pretensions without bounds." That in this he is correct must, we think, be the conviction of every reflective and unprejudiced mind. The map of Europe as now laid out presents a very different appearance from what it did immediately after the readjustment of territorial divisions and boundaries by the Vienna plenipotentiaries. Greece, Belgium, Italy, are direct proofs of this averment. Great and unexpected changes have taken place in these countries, and the neighboring nations have not remained altogether uninfluenced thereby. But in connection with these changes there is this telling fact not to be forgotten, that France itself, more than any other power, either by its direct force or its more mediate influence, has been instrumental in bringing about these alterations, to which its ruler now points and invites the attention of the governments of Europe. In view of this, the question naturally arises, what guarantee is there that any possible arrangement that might be arrived at, would be respected in the future? The interrogatory is pregnant with interest, and suggestive of doubts of different kinds to those interested in the the solution of the problem. Would not the same causes that in past years have conspired and combined to change the land marks and constitutions of nations—under similar circumstances, or if the strong will of some ambitious potentate should so wish—be easily invoked to unsettle and revolutionize in the future any agreement or settlement—whether as regards boundary lines or internal policy, that might be determined upon. There is not only a possibility but a very strong probability of such a thing happening. Human nature has not yet much changed; it is pretty near the same to-day as it was fifty years ago.

It is true that NAPOLEON, in the strongest and most emphatic terms, declares that he does not in the remotest degree entertain any idea of personal aggrandisement in the convoking of the congress; and plausibly asserts that his only object in so doing is to arrive "without a shock, at the pacification of Europe." But his protestations of sincerity, disinterestedness and honorable motives are not worth much. He always has been extremely profuse of good intention, fair promises and lofty aspirations; but his acts have been notoriously and wofully but little in keeping therewith. Up to the very time he annexed Savoy and Nice, he strenuously and solemnly protested to the British Minister that its had no intention of so doing. His conduct in the Crimean war snatched the fruits of victory from the hands of the allies. Neither was his conduct in the Italian war such as to establish confidence in his sincerity and promises, as it is evident that his hastily-made peace with the Austrian Emperor so grossly prevented the consummation of those objects for which the Italians were so generally battling. They wanted a united Italy, and they would have had it had it not been for NAPOLEON. And recently his conduct with regard to the Mexican imbroglio has, as we endeavoured to show in our late number, has been characterized by marked duplicity and infamy. He [illegible] by [illegible] opposition [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] his subjects, and to exact a proper indemnity for these losses and outrages. He made overtures to Britain and Spain to join him, with the same object in view. Britain and Spain, which had really weighty reasons and sufficient cause to interfere, joined with the French Emperor. But they soon had cause to repent of the step they had taken. The cloven foot of the eldest son of the Church soon protruded itself. It quickly became evident that NAPOLEON, taking advantage of the internal disturbances among the Mexicans themselves, and of the civil war raging in the United States, had pre-determined upon the conquest of the Great Empire the Montezumas once ruled, and Cortes conquered. Yet notwithstanding this evident pre-determination, up to the very time when concealment was no longer possible, he virtuously was indignant at the imputation of any ulterior motive to himself.

It may be that his motives for the present step are of the purest kind imaginable; but if so, he must have turned over an entirely new leaf. He cannot be otherwise than distrusted, for people are not apt to forget the wholesome truth conveyed in the biblical apothegem: "A true is known by its fruit." None of the Great Powers have yet signified their intention to be present. Italy, Denmark and Turkey have, we believe, accepted the invitation, and in all some twenty of the minor powers are expected to do so. But NAPOLEON would hardly be content with these. His aspirations are too lofty. He aims at higher game. Hence it is that he is now now trying to get Russia to attend. He thinks if he is successful perforce the other great powers would do the same. But whether or not he will be successful, notwithstanding his artful insinuations upon the Polish and other questions in which Russia is so directly interested, is problematical. The latest news is to the effect that Britain while commending the object, has declined to send a representative. Whether, therefore, there will be a Congress or not, and if so, what the issue thereof may be, time alone can tell. Speculation cannot be otherwise than fruitless, and must at best arrive at very indefinite and unsatisfactory results.

TOWNSHIP ELECTIONS.

Elsewhere we publish the Act passed last Session of Parliament for the purpose of amending the 275th Section of the Act respecting the Municipal Institutions of the Upper Province. The Act itself does not seem to be very clearly understood by some of our contemporaries, and we must admit that the wording thereof is not without ambiguity. It does not abolish Wards in those townships where they now exist; the change the Act contemplates is only made in those divided into Electoral Divisions. By the 275th Section referred to, the Council was authorised to divide townships, not already divided into Wards, into two or more Electoral Divisions, and establish polling places therein. But the Act was defective; no provision was made for the nomination of candidates, nor for a casting vote in case of a tie. The present Act, therefore, refers only to those thus divided into Electoral Divisions, and is only intended to remedy the defects of the Act relating thereto. The nomination will hereafter take place in the Town Hall, or in the place where the first meeting of the Council was held for the current year. If only five persons are nominated, they will be elected by acclamation. But if more than five a polling place will be opened in each Electoral Division, but the inhabitants will vote for the five candidates they prefer, and the five having the greatest number of votes at the close of the election will be declared duly elected. In case of a tie the Clerk, whether otherwise qualified or not, has the casting vote. As before hinted, some have understood the Act to apply to all townships, but a reference to the Consolidated Statutes (Sec. 271 to 274 inclusive, and Sec. 275) will show the distinction made between townships divided into Wards and those divided into Electoral Divisions. We think it is a pity that principle was not carried out with reference to all the townships. No doubt much good would be the result. The Ward election system is a bad one. A man thus elected (as a general thing) does not feel that interest for the whole township that he ought. He finds that all he has to do to keep his seat is to curry the favor of his Ward constituents. The consequence therefore not unfrequently is that he bends his energies to gratify and please these, rather than to be solicitous for and to promote the general good. But where the electors vote for all the candidates, the very canvass that, under the Ward system, conspire to secure a candidate election, would tend in the very contrary effect. Any special services rendered by a candidate to his own Ward, instead of being recommendation for re-election would, in all likelihood, very materially assist in effecting his defeat. The candidates motto would have to be the "general good." The result would be that a better, higher principled, and more intelligent class of men would take their seats at our Council boards than, in very many instances, is the case at present. It is to be regretted, therefore, that the provisions of the Act under consideration were not made more extended in their application.

MILITARY SCHOOLS.

Two Military Schools are about to be established—one at Toronto and the other at Montreal. A staff of officers drawn from the army will be placed in charge. Our young men will thus have every opportunity given them of improving themselves in those military sciences and learning of evolutions which have hitherto, from the very nature of things, in not a few instances been given to incapables. But the day of these latter gentlemen, it is to be hoped, is now over. However, at least in Canada. The schools are open to all, without distinction. Cadets passing a successful examination do not necessarily get commissions; but it will hereafter be absolutely necessary that those wishing to get commissions or promotion to have the knowledge required to pass that Board, about to be appointed for the purpose. This eminently useful institution at the Asiatic Metropolis. This, evidently, is a great move, for even the more timid of the Opposition papers do not dare to mount a single note against it.

French Canadian Missionary Society.

On Thursday evening last, accordingly to appointment, a well attended meeting was held in the Wesleyan Methodist Church, on [illegible] Street.

The [illegible] of the President, Rev. [illegible] Rev. Mr. Carroll, Rev. [illegible] and Secretary, the Secretary read the Rev. Mr. Byrne, the agent of the Society, who after a few remarks from the Chairman pointing out the importance of the mission both from a religious and social aspect, gave a very interesting address, containing many facts in connection with the Mission, at Pointaux-Trembles Institute.

During the past year not a few of the people have been led to see the errors of Popery, and are now searching the Scriptures for themselves, some of whom have been hopefully converted to Christ. Several young men are now studying for the ministry, who will, we hope, be of great service to the cause.

From the above and other statements made by Mr. Byrne, it must therefore be evident to the most prejudiced mind that under the blessing of God, a great and good work is being effected.

On the following evening a prayer meeting was held in the basement of the Canada Presbyterian Church, with special reference to the Mission cause, at which Rev. Mr. Carroll with a number of his congregation were present. On the Sabbath Mr. Bryne preached in the Presbyterian and Methodist Churches.

The following gentlemen were appointed office bearers:—President, Rev. John Gilmour; Vice Presidents, Col. Haulain, Dr. Brown and Sheriff Hall; Secretary and Treasurer, J. H. Roper Esq. Committee, Messrs R. Kinges, W. Hall, A. Morrow Sen., Brownscombe Dallis, Edwards, Fairbairn, J. Otsiour, Thos. Donnelly, and all Ministers subscribing to the society.

We are glad to learn that between the collections at the meetings and the amount of subscriptions Mr. Byrne succeeded in realising $133.

TOWN COUNCIL.

MONDAY, December 7th, 1863.

Present, His Worship the Mayor, and Messrs. Toole, Nicholls, Carlisle, Fry, Ormond, Dickson, Cluxton, Douglas, Lundy and Burnham.

The minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed.

A communication from Mr. Sheridan, calling the attention of the Council to quantities of sawdwood being piled up against the fence of the old burying ground, was referred to the committee on Streets and Bridges.

Petitions from Messrs. Thomas Bradburn and John Kennedy, complaining of the passage of a By-law respecting the erection of wooden buildings, and praying for relief, were referred to a special committee.

A. Morrow, Jr., Market Clerk, applied to the Council to have a portion of the Tolls abated, as he had not realized what he had anticipated. Referred to the Finance committee.

Mrs. Plunket presented a petition asking the Council to remit her taxes.

The Mayor stated to the Council that three children who had been deserted by their parents had been left in the office by the woman who had them in charge.

On motion of Mr. Burnham, the Mayor was requested to act as he saw fit with them.

A petition from the Trustees of the Roman Catholic School, asking the Council to remit the School Tax of several Roman Catholics who had neglected to notify the Clerk, was read, and moved by Mr. Ryan, seconded by Mr. Lundy,—That the prayer of the petition of the Roman Catholic Trustees be granted. —Carried.

A report from the Finance Committee, recommending the payment of several accounts was received and adopted.

A By-law for appointing Returning officers for the present year was passed.

The Council then adjourned for one week.

ACCIDENT BY DROWNING.

It is our painful duty to record the death of MR. ALEX. GOW, by drowning in the Little Lake, on Tuesday evening last. It seems that MR. GOW was on the Lake skating with a number of companions. About 10 o'clock p. m., he left these, intending to cross the Lake, and thus reach his residence in Ashburnham by a much shorter route than by going round. In a very few minutes the treacherous ice was heard to crack, and shouts for help immediately followed; but the night was so intensely dark that those on the ice could give no assistence to the unfortunate young man, who, after a short and desperate but fruitless struggle to rescue himself from a watery grave, sank to rise no more. Thus passed away from our midst, in the spring of manhood, one who had endeared himself to all his friends by his high moral qualities and general amiability of character. What a solemn lesson is thus taught to all; truely in our brightest moments, are we in the midst of death. MR. GOW was about 25 years of age, and unmarried. We sincerely sympathize with the relatives in the deep affliction that has befallen them. The body, up to our going to press, had not been recovered. People cannot be too careful in venturing upon newly formed ice.—Several other parties have, we believe, within the last few days, fallen through, but luckily rescued.

AMERICAN NEWS.

Direct news from General Meade lately shows clearly that the Confederates had ceased making any more demonstrations, and that all is again quiet in the army of the Potomac. General Meade has not fallen back to this side of the Rappahannock as reported. There is nothing of importance from the army of the Cumberland, nothing in the way of fighting having occurred. The troops are busy repairing the railroad between Bridgeport and their camps, as a means of conveying supplies. Dispatches from Cumberland gap state that Gen. Foster had driven the Confederates from Clinch river, and was following them up as fast as possible. The check received by the Federal forces on Wednesday, however, will probably enable the Confederates to make good their retreat, a wide distance having been put between the armies by the two former affair. The Confederates admit a victory in the late engagements in Georgia. General Gilmour still continues to fire into Charleston and several buildings have been struck. A woman was severely wound by a shell which was thrown into the city. The position of Longstreet was much changed, previous of opprobrium being cast upon [illegible] Bragg's [illegible]

BRITAIN'S MINERAL WEALTH.

The following statistics are gleaned from an official statement of the mineral wealth of Great Britain, which has lately appeared [illegible]:—There are over 2,000 collieries in operation, employing over 200,000 persons, including 7,000 women. The [illegible] of coal produced [illegible] was 92,435,214 tons. The [illegible] in 1854. The average export of coal from England is about 7,000,000 tons a year. Of iron 7,000,000 were smelted last year, but 36,270 tons besides were imported. The value of the pig iron produced last year was nearly $56,000,000. There are 239 copper mines in the kingdom, of which 210 are in Cornwall and Devonshire, and their produce in the year 1862 over 224,000 tons of ore—but this gave only 14,843 tons of fine copper after refining. The tin mines yielded more in 1862 than in previous years, the aggregate produce having been 14,127 tons of ore, worth, after refining, $5,000,000 of dollars; and it is expected that during the present year the yield of the Cornish mines will be much larger. Tin has been obtained for more than 3,000 years in Cornwall and Devonshire, and yet the mines are more productive than ever. The lead mines yield nearly a 100,000 tons a year, and the silver extracted from the lead ore in one year (1852) amounted to 686,123 ounces. Small quantities of gold have been found from time to time; one mine mine produced last year 5,000, ounces about $100,000. Earthly minerals—baryte, lime, salt, and the valuable clays—produce annually about $8,500,000; and the annual value of all the mineral products is about $225,000,000. The great coal yield, however, is the most striking item in these figures. The duty, amounts to an immense sum.

Annual Meeting of G. D. Sons of Temperance.

The 15th annual session of the Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance met in Toronto on Wednesday. Mr. R. D. Wadsworth, G. W. P., took the chair. There was a very large attendance of delegates. Some two hundred were present. A public temperance meeting was held and effectively addressed by the Rev. W. Rowe, G.W.P., of Morton; Rev. Dr. Short, Port Hope; Mr. Ross, Lobo; Mr. Armour, Bowmanville, and Mr. C. Carswell, of Oshawa.

The officers for the ensuing year are the following:—G.W.P., Br. Rev. Wm. Rowe; G. W. A., Br. Elwood; G.S., Br. Stacy; G. T., Br. Sharrard; G.C., Br. Rev. Dr. Short; G. C., Br. Garvin; G. S., Sergt. Tanner.

The Hon. Mr. Foley was one of the delegates. The Rev. Wm. Rowe and Mr. A. Morse, were appointed delegates to the National Division, to meet at Cleveland, Ohio, next year. The next half-yearly session will be held at Niagara Falls, and the next annual session at Barrie. On Thursday evening another public meeting was held, at which the speakers were A. B. Pardee, Hon. M. H. Foley, J. G. Elwood, Rev. E. B. Bradshaw, A. Farewell, Rev. D. Hay, A. Morse and E. Craswell. We are glad to see the Order in so prosperous and healthy a state. Long may it flourish.

SOUTH AMERICA.

The whole continent of America seems convulsed with war. From the latest news received war between New Granada and Ecuador seems to be inevitable. The Ecuadorian Congress has authorised the Government to declare war against President Mosquera of New Granada. The latter is said to be at the head of 3,000 and Gen. Flores of Ecuador at the head of 5,000 men. According to one report, hostilities had already commenced. In Central America, the war appears to be at an end. Gen. Barrios, on Oct. 26, evacuated San Salvador, and with 1,500 men left for the Department of San Miguel. San Salvador was occupied by the troops of Guatemala, and a Provisional Government organized under the ex-President Duenas. Troops went sent in pursuit of Barrios. The U. S. mail steamer Salvador, while lying in the harbor of La Union, had been fired upon by a guard-boat. On the complaint of Mr. Partridge, U. S. Minister at San Salvador, the new authorities admitted the impropriety of the Commandante of La Union, and removed him.

THE PITCAIRN ISLANDERS.

The descendants of the mutineers of the ship Bounty, who landed at Pitcairn's Island in 1790, had increased to 194 souls in 1856, when the island had become too small for their subsistence, and they were removed by the British Government to Norfolk Island, from which a penal settlement with all its accomodations had just been transplanted. The buildings already erected were ample for all present purposes, and the climate and soil are deemed quite favorable. We are happy to hear that these people maintain their characters for amiability, morality or piety. Their present pastor has been among them for some 40 years, and is loved respected and reverenced by all. It will be remembered that a few years ago he came to be ordained, when he was presented to the Queen. Long may the "mutineer" descendents remain as they are.

MISSIONS.

Three Sermons will be preached in the Bible Christian Church of this Town, on Sunday the 13th instant. At 10½ and 2½ o'clock, by the Rev. J. WHITLOCK; and at 6 o'clock by the Rev. G. COLWELL. Collections will be taken up at the close of each sermon in aid of the Missionary Fund.

On Monday evening, the Annual Missionary Meeting will be held, to commence at 7 o'clock, P. M. The speakers expected are Rev. J. WHITLOCK, late of Prince Edward's Island, Rev. H. HAM, lately from England, and others. The usual collection and subscription will be taken up at the close of the addresses.

NEW YORK MAYOR.

The recent election of GUNTHER over his opponents BOOLE and BLUNT took the City by surprise. BOOLE'S election, the regular Democratic candidate was considered almost certain—his nomination having been endorsed by SEYMOUR and the Tammany Hall faction. The defeat of BOOLE is a terrible blow to those who have hitherto run the Democratic machine. The people are beginning to act for themselves. The vote was as follows:—

For G. H. Gunther, Conservative.....
" F. A. Boole, Democrat and Mayor.....
" C. Blunt, Union.....

So Mr. GUNTHER is Mayor for the next two years.

STEAMER EXPLODED.

We see by the Albany papers that on the 6th inst., the steamer Isaac Newton when opposite Frenchtown Dam, Oil Creek, just below Venango, exploded her boilers. By a few moments the whole upper cabin was demolished, together with the boilers, which were blown to the water's edge. The passengers providentially escaped uninjured. Total loss between three and four hundred thousand dollars.

Export of Specie from New York.

The following table shows that the amount of specie exported from New York for 12 years, for the week ending Nov. 28th 1863, and for the corresponding period in the other years:

1863	$42,350,241	1857	$38,799,187
1862	60,125,514	1856	35,326'454
1861	8,366,199	1855	26,972,877
1860	41,960,036	1854	37,032,081
1859	67,804,733	1853	23,638,069
1858	24,191,786	1852	23.776.561

The Inspector of Grammar Schools.

The Rev. Mr. CHECKLEY visited the Grammar and Union School on Monday last. He expressed himself to the Chairman of the Board, upon whom he called, as highly satisfied with the general appearances of the School; and especially with the efficiency of the Classical Department, which was more particularly the subject of his examination.

THE County Court and Quarter Sessions for Peterborough assembled on Tuesday last, Judge Boucher presiding. The civil business, we learn was very large. More particulars in our next.

THE French Experimental Squadron of iron-clad vessels, which sailed from Brest on the 17th of October, was last heard of near Puchal, in the island of Maderia. The experiments which had been tried had given satisfaction, and the vessels had been found more governable than on their first trial trip.

GIGANTIC PROJECT.—Even a more gigantic project than the formation of Paris into a seaport is now said to be seriously contemplated. It is proposed to dig a canal which, starting from Mailles, will join the Saone, at Chalons, and the branches. One of these branches is to be continued to Dunkirk, and the other to St. Nazaire. M. Cray has published a pamphlet explaining the details.

MOST DISASTROUS Accounts continue to be received from various parts of France of the damage occasioned by the severe storms which have visited that country, and the inundations consequent upon the excessive rain. The banks of the rivers in many places having been broken, and the adjoining lands for miles have been submerged, and over extensive all the sowings for the crops of 1864 are irrecoverably lost.

TRAGEDY AND RIOT IN CLEVELAND.—A little child was run over by the street cars in Cleveland, a day or two ago, and instantly killed. A mod commenced stoning the cars, and would have murdered the conductor and driver on the spot, but for the interference of the police, who locked them up in the city prison for their personal safety. Subsequently the mob tore up a large portion of the track. Warrants were issued against the conductor and driver upon the complaint of the parents of the child and they were held for examination.

THE Leader says that the son of Mr. Foley M.P.P. for North Waterloo, it is announced, is no longer employed in the departments, at Quebec. Some of the journals, in announcing this fact, state that he was only employed as a temporary clerk, at $2 a day; and the Tribune states that he voluntarily resigned his position. If this be the case, it is proper to say that we must reject the notion that his appointment could have any influence on his father's course in the Legislature. The correction of the fact necessarily requires the correction of a conclusion which would otherwise have been perfectly fair.

OUR FORTIFICATIONS.—It is now nearly fifty years since our fortifications have been looked after in any way, we think it is now high time, and that it behooves our government to put them in a proper state of defence, and have our Lakes and Rivers well protected, "one ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure; but while we are protecting ourselves against a foreign enemy we should not forget to fortify ourselves against truisms, frost-bites, chilblains, pains in the back and side, cholic, cholera morbus, the 'Canadian Pain Destroyer' is the most effectual medicine. Sold by all Dealers in Medicine at 25 cts per bottle.

THE CLIFTON NORTHERN LIGHT.—This beautiful skimmer of the dark blue ocean having made the quickest passage from California to Oregon, has filled the world with wonder, and immortalized the names of her builders Messrs. Briggs of South Boston. The hundred packages, each containg 1 gross, or 144 25 cent bottes of Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers for coughs, colds, etc., destined for the California and Sandwich Island markets, must be shipped by the Clipper Northern Light, she being the fastest ship—and the order says, ship with the quickest ship, without regard to price. 25 cents a box, at all Druggists.

THE NEW YORK MERCURY MANIFESTO.—This charming paper, which for twenty-five years has been increasing in popularity, and now claims to be out of sight of all competition, has put forth a fascinating programme for 1864, which we publish in our advertising columns to-day. It is a prosperous paper, and owes its prosperity to the energy, tact, and skill of its publishers. They make large promises for the coming year, but they have the reputation—and they deserve it, of performing what they promise.

A COMPLIMENT TO CANADA.—We learn says the Globe that Dr. Daniel Wilson, of University College, has been invited to deliver a course of lectures before the Lowell Institute, of Boston, and has taken advantage of his Christmas vacation to fulfil the engagement. The Lowell Institute, sustained chiefly by the funds of a wealthy Bostonian, yearly engages one of the most distinguished men of science to deliver lectures, which are attended by the elite of a city where lecturing is an institution, and science is fashionable. The selection of Dr. Wilson to lecture on his favorite subject is a compliment to the University of which he is a distinguished ornament, and to the Province at large.

The Union majority in Sacramento is 1,173; in Stockton, 601; in Marysville, 623.

LAWYERS must have good times in Spain, if the length of the suits is anything to judge by. By the latest news we see that the supreme tribunal of Madrid has just given final judgment in a suit which had been in litigation 340 years, and which involved the succession to the inheritance of Pizarro, the invader and conquerer of Peru. Only 240 years in litigation! That beats Dickens' chancery business. It would be certainly interesting to know the particulars of such a suit, and the result of the decision.

....The New York Tribune says money is in good supply at 7 per cent on call, but there is nothing doing at a less rate, nor are banks disposed to encourage any speculative movement. Parties holding commodities bought at high prices, and stocks at September quotations, are confident that borrowing is at an end by the Treasury., and that after a little legislation, legal tenders and Treasury notes at nominal interest will be resorted to, and another inflation, exceeding that of 1862-1863, be shown. On the other hand, prudent people are sure that the country has passed the necessity for using more currency except that to be supplied by the national banks, and that from this time, varied by occasional advances, prices will return to their natural position.

THE RISE OF A LOTS OF DISSERTATION.—Last spring, a man named BRIGHT, pushed over a bottle of boiling water on a woman on the Five Points in New York, causing her deadly scalding, as she thought, and the question here arose as to the intent for him over charge. A few days ago he was arrested. A. N. Tyler says: The prisoner is a man of about fifty-five years of age, and with at one time a gentleman of standing and taste in this city. He was the possessor of property to the amount of $60,000, which was well invested in real estate in East Broadway and various other parts of the city. He was the owner of several fine horses, and drove one team worth $1,500. It is stated that his extravagance drew largely upon the principal of his property, and then to retrieve his fortunes he sought the gaming table. He was at once surrounded by harpies who lured him on, inviting him to mortgage his property for the purpose of raising money to supply the drains of the gambling-table. Step by step he came down until his property was gone and his health almost entirely destroyed. His social position fled with his wealth, until he became classed with wretched unfortunates and lived as he best could in the filthiest quarters of the town.

THE Baptists and Wesleyans of Nova Scotia are not satisfied with the recent arrangement respecting Dalhousie College, by which that provincial institution comes largely under the Presbyterian management. They would wish it, as a Presbyterian College, all prosperity, but they have decided objections to a Provincial College mainly under one denomination. We believe the plan of the College is this. The College Fund yields £900 per annum. With this sum the Governor endow three professorships. The Presbyterians raise a similar sum, and endow other three; and all other denominations have the right to establish other chairs on the same terms.

THE County of Carleton Board of Public Instruction seem to be pretty strict about the loyalty, whereabouts, and other particulars of intending candidates for pedagogue honors. Each candidate, before examination must answer (satisfactorily, we suppose) the following questions:—

Are you a British subject?
Have you ever been engaged in teaching?
How long have you taught?
What Class Certificate have you had while teaching?
From what Board have you had your certificate?
To what class do you now aspire?
Where do you now reside?

THE REV. JOHN WOOD, of Brantford, was requested by the Americans residing in that town, and connected with various congregations, to preach a sermon on Thanksgiving day. After the service, Mr. WOOD was presented with an address, and a purse-moonaie containing $150 in gold. This present is all the more valuable as coming from individuals not connected with Mr. WOOD'S congregation, and they, the donors, being Americans, whilst Mr. WOOD is an Englishman.

WE learn that Mr. Charles DARTAY, of Cobourg, and Mr. STRONG, of Montreal, recently passed their examinations for engineers in the British army in a very creditable manner.

SHE SLEEPS.

She sleeps, does she sleep? Yes, she sleeps 'till the day
Tries Jehovah sends forth a bright material to day.
"Oh, come from your tombs to judgment, Oh, come,"
For blessedness waits it for those who go home."

She sleeps, does she sleep? Yes, she sleeps 'mongst the dead
But near she is breathing sweet praises to God;
Though here the dread monster could hurl no alarms,
For already she rested on Christ's open arms.

She sleeps, does she sleep? Yes, she sleeps a sweet rest,
Where nothing can mar or disturb her calm breast:
In the cold silent tomb, ah, her body will lay,
But her bright happy spirit like poetry fled away.

She sleeps, does she sleep? Yes, she sleeps without woes,
For in life she would cry, "Let me go! let me go!
I want now soon depart, for my Saviour says come,
Oh, yes, I am going, I am now going home."

She sleeps, does she sleep? Yes, she sleeps not in vain,
She is free from all trouble, all trial and pain;
Like an opening flower she fitted away,
But twenty-four saints to shine there for day.

She sleeps, does she sleep? Yes, she sleeps in the grave,
But her sleep is all rest from earth's troubled waves;
When racked with dire pain, not a murmur would come,
Thus she sweetly sleeps on 'neath Lorne hoped, let me hope

She sleeps, does she sleep? Yes, she sleeps but a while
She is resting from trouble and all earthly toil;
But soon the loud trumpet will bid her arise,
To mingle in songs with Christ in the skies.

She sleeps, does she sleep? Yes, he sleeps not alone,
For two little cherubs before her had gone;
And, oh, what a meeting was granted and given
The choir of bright angels to welcome her to heaven.

She sleeps, does she sleep? Yes, she sleeps not in vain,
We soon will cross Jordan and meet her again,
And then, oh, the joys of meeting at home,
Where parting or sorrow, oh, never can come.

Now the three angel voices sing sweet songs of glory,
And mingle their notes in sweet Heavenly story;
When ages have rolled and fled with the theme,
Still their praises are one, and the best is reborn!

DRUMMED OUT OF THE ARMY.—On Friday in accordance with the sentence of a court-martial, the ceremony of "drumming out" a soldier was performed at Aldershot. The culprit was Private Peter O'Donnell, of the 76th Regiment, whose extraordinary attempt at desertion was noted in the papers about three months ago. It will be remembered that O'Donnell escaped, with his rifle, bayonet, and 20 rounds of ammunition in his possession, into the Long Valley, and for three days kept a pursuing party at bay, being ultimately lost sight of in the direction of Reading. Subsequently he quietly returned to his regiment, was placed under arrest, and tried by court-martial for the offence. Being found guilty on the several counts of desertion, firing at a corporal of the 76th Regiment and a private of the 6th Dragoon Guards, and of losing various articles of regimental apparel, ammunition, &c., he was adjudged to undergo "four years' penal servitude, to be ignominously expelled from her Majesty's service, and to be branded with the letter "D,"—English Paper.

HOW TO FUMIGATE A HOUSE PLANT.—Bessie W., wishes to know how she can destroy the aphis or plant louse upon her roses and geraniums. We have found tobacco smoke to answer the purpose. Coil up a newspaper or other large paper in the from of a cone, pin it so that it will keep its shape, and invert it over the plant. Then if you happen to have some friend at hand who smokes, get him to light a little tobacco in the bottom of the bowl of a common pipe, and when this is well kindled, fill up the pipe with tobacco. Then introduce the bowl of the pipe under the edge of the paper cone and blow through the stem. The fire being at the bottom, their will be copious clouds of smoke driven into the cone. If no smoking friend is at hand, you may manage it yourself, by putting a small five coal at the bottom of the pipe, place the tobacco upon it, and proceed as before. Care should be taken not to drive the hot smoke from the pipe directly against the leaves. Let the plant remain 10 or 15 minutes in the smoke, and then lay it on its side in a sink and give it a thorough drenching from a watering pot.

TOWNSHIP COUNCILS.

REPRESENTATION BY WARDS ABOLISHED.

An Act to extend the provisions of the two hundred and seventy-fifth section of the Act "respecting the Municipal Institutions of Upper Canada," and to provide for the election of Councillors in the several townships of Upper Canada, wherein the same may be divided into Electoral Divisions under the authority of the said section.

(Assented to 16th October, 1863.)

Her Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of Canada, enacts as follows:—

1. Whenever a township in Upper Canada is divided into Electoral Divisions, and polling places established therein, and returning officers appointed therefor, under and by the provisions of the two hundred and seventy-fifth section of chapter fifty-four of the Consolidated Statutes of Upper Canada, a meeting of the electors for such township shall take place on the last Monday but one in the month of December, before the general election, as provided by the said Act, at the hour of the clock in the forenoon for the nomination of candidates for the Councillors to be elected for the said township; and the meeting shall be held in the said township hall, if there be one in the said township, but if there be no township hall, then at that place and at the said hour fixed for the holding of the township hall for the then current year; and the township Clerk shall give the notice required by section ninety-seven of chapter fifty-four of the Consolidated Statutes of Upper Canada.

2. The Township Clerk shall preside at such meeting, or, in his absence, though elected, a Chairman; and the Council shall appoint a Clerk to act in his place; and if the Clerk or the person appointed does not attend, the electors present shall choose a chairman, being freeholders, to officiate from among themselves.

3. Such Clerk or person so appointed, or Chairman so chosen, shall have all the powers of a

RELIEF IN TEN MINUTES.

HOLLOWAY'S

PULMONIC WAFERS.

The most speedy and sure remedy ever discovered for for all Diseases of the Chest and Lungs, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, Bronchitis, Influenza, Whooping Cough, Difficult Breathing, Hoarseness, &c. &c. &c.

THESE WAFERS give the most instantaneous relief, and positively cure when persevered with according to directions, never fail to effect a cure and that speedily. Thousands who have resorted to useless remedies who have tried other means in vain. To all climates and all constitutions they are equally a blessing and a comfort—none need despair, no matter how long the disease may have baffled the skill of others, it may be, provided the organic structure of the vital organs is not hopelessly destroyed. Every one should give them an impartial trial.

To Countries and Public Speakers, these Wafers are peculiarly valuable; they will in one day remove the most severe hoarseness; hoarseness; clear the voice and fit it for use in a few days will, at all times, increase the power and flexibility of the voice, greatly improving its tone, compass and sweetness, for which purpose they are regularly used by many professional vocalists and others.

TWENTY-SIXTH BIRTHDAY

OF THE

STAR PAPER OF AMERICA!

January 1, 1864.

The New York Mercury

FOR THE

COMING YEAR.

AFTER more than a quarter of a century of uninterrupted success, The New York Mercury—standing first on the muster-roll of the Literature Press in the country—points proudly to its past career as a guarantee of new triumphs in the future.

Heretofore, it has eclipsed all rivalry; but it proposes to make the coming year memorable by eclipsing its own past history, and looming up before the world as the most marvelous specimen of a fascinating, brilliant amusing, and comprehensive Literary Newspaper that has ever been published in either hemisphere.

THE GENIUS OF EUROPE

will be laid under contribution to give brilliancy to its columns, and side by side with original productions of the most popular romancists of the Old World will be placed the chef d'œuvres of the most eminent story-writers of the New.

MISS E. E. BRADDON,

Authoress of "Aurora Floyd," "Lady Audley's Secret," "John Marchmont's Legacy," etc., etc., who has suddenly risen, like

A STAR OF THE FIRST MAGNITUDE

in the literary horizon of Great Britain, has been specially engaged to supply The New York Mercury from time to time with the wonderful creations of her genius, at a cost which no other weekly in America could venture to incur.

☞ Among the multitude of distinguished writers and artists who have become familiar to the masses through the vast circulation of the STAR PAPER OF AMERICA, may be mentioned the following, all of whom are still upon its staff:

Dr. J. H. Robinson, Margaret Mount, Ned Buntline, Arthur M. Grainger, Grace Gardner, Felix O. C. Darley, Miss H. B. Sheridan, Cousin May Carleton, W. O. Eaton, George Marshall, Julia S. Ingraham, Edward Willett, Mary Clafl, George Arlbay.

Scores of other distinguished literati, under various nom de plume, contribute to its columns, while the pictorial illustrations are from the inimitable pencil of Felix O. C. Darley, Esq., the best draughtsman of the age.

The War, which has given the coup de grace to so many pretentious publications, and half destroyed those that still survive, has added thousands to the circulation of the New York Mercury.

Its heart-stirring short stories, its military historiettes, its matchless serial romances, its racy bon-mots, its genetal wit and humor, its delicious gossip, its fairy tales for little folks, its rare poetry, its fresh and vigorous editorials the infinite variety of its contents, and the large amount of reading matter that it compises, render it welcome everywhere, and to classes of society. Containing, as it does, of closely-printed matter, it may safely be pronounced the cheapest, as well as the best Literary Newspaper extant.

Those favorite writers, Doctor J. H. Robinson, Cousin May Carleton, and Ned Buntline, are now preparing three stories for The New York Mercury. One of these productions will be commenced in the Opening Number of the New Year. The authors being aware of this fact, are engaged in an emulative contest for precedence, and the result will unquestionably be that the most effective story ever penned by any of the three, will commence in the

NEW YEARS NUMBER

of the great Representative Weekly of the Western World.

The New York Weekly is sold by all newsmen and periodical dealers in America. To subscribers, it is regularly mailed every Saturday morning, for $3 a year; three copies for $8; six copies for $5; eight copies for $12, with an extra copy, free, to the getter-up of the club. Six months' subscriptions received. Always write plainly the name of your Post office, County and State. When you take the notes of all solvent banks at par. Payment must invariably be made in advance.

☞ Specimen copies sent to all applicants. Address all letters and remittances, post paid, to

MONEY EASILY MADE,

By either Gentlemen or Ladies.

I AM in possession of a beautiful French Art, which has been introduced in this Country only to a limited extent, and that in New York City. It is something which every person stands in great need of, consequently will be extensively patronized. Persons can make money with it at home or abroad. Thousands in France have made small fortunes at it, and are still doing so. I would state what it is, but persons purchasing the knowledge of it do not desire it made public. One Dollar sent to the undersigned will secure the immediate return of a circular giving full information in the Art, and the requisite instruction to pursue it. It is strictly genteel, and the best and only thing ever introduced which every person can make money at. NO LETTERS NOTICED, except those containing the required amount of instructions.

PEOPLE'S PAPER!

SUBSCRIBE FOR THE

"PETERBOROUGH EXAMINER,"

Only $1 Per Year in Advance.

What family should be without Godey's Lady's Book? It costs $3.00 a year. We will, however, furnish both the Examiner and Lady's Book for $3.75! that is: both for 25 cents less than what you pay for the Lady's Book alone. Or, to every subscriber paying in advance we will, for an extra 75 cents, furnish Madame Demorest's Mirror of Fashions, and Quarterly Journal de Grande Mode, each number of which contains large and magnificent Fashion Plates, splendid illustrations of all the fashionable and Paris novelties, for Ladies' and Children's Dress, useful information, and the four life-size Patterns, cut ready for use, etc., etc. It should be remembered that each yearly subscriber to Mme. Demorest's Mirror of Fashions is entitled to the selection of 50 cents' worth of extra patterns, or a copy of Mme. Demorest's System for cutting Children's Dresses, or for 50 cents more, the Ladies' System. That is, for 75 cents, we will give to every subscriber of the Examiner paying in advance, $1.50 worth. More than this, we will likewise pay the American postage, which is no small item. Those who have paid in advance can contend to the same privileges. Or, if farmers prefer, they can, instead of the above journal, for the extra 75 cents, have Judd's celebrated American Agriculturist, which ought to be in the hands of every farmer. Names should be sent in at once.

To any one sending us 6 subscribers we will give Kingsley's Guinea War; 10 subscribers, Alcock's Tycoon Capital; 20 subscribers, Webster's Dictionary; 30 subscribers, Worcester's Largest Dictionary.

The party sending a club can, if he choose, select any other work of a similar value. The cash must in every instance accompany the order.

A Special Premium will be given to the party sending in the largest number of subscribers by the 1st of March. Names can be sent in at any time, and will be credited as received.

LADIES' LUGGAGE.

How happy is the single life
Of all those priests and monks!
Not one of them has got a wife
Together him with trunks,
And bandboxes, a load too great
For mules or horses to bear,
Which railways charge for, over-weight,
And coin ink double fare.

Full care, as with your bride you post,
Distracts your anxious mind,
Lest this portmanteau should be lost,
Or that be left behind;
Her baggage as you travel down
Life's hill, weighs more and more,
And still as bolder grows your crown,
Becomes a greater bore.

Counterstocked by Fashion vile and vain,
Hoop petticoats and vests,
With British females, to contain,
Require no end of chests,
To which bags, baskets, bandles, and,
Too numerous to name,
Enough to drive a poor man mad!
And Job with rage inflame.

The cab keeps swaying o'er your head,
With luggage piled above,
Of overturn you ride in dread,
With her whom you should love:
Then you, the station when you gain,
Must see that number scored,
And there about it in the train,
Your heart and soul corrode.

Thus does your wife each journey spoil
Of joys that she partakes,
Thus keeps you on the fret or broil,
Your peace and comfort breaks.
With all these boxes, all her things,
(How many!) to enclose,
The fair Inconstancee on you brings
A wagon-load of woes. —Punch.

Varieties.

MARRIED men are always happier for having been happy once; the memory of happiness is happiness.

The most laconic will on record is that of a man who died in 1'98. It ran thus: "I have nothing; I owe a great deal; the rest I give to the poor."

An indiscreet man confided a secret to another, and begged him not to repeat it. "It's all right," was the reply; "I will be as close as you were."

If a man were to set out by calling everything by its right name, he would be knocked down before he got to the corner of the street.

A man came into a printing-office to beg a paper. "Because," he said, "we like to read the newspapers very much, but our neighbours are all too stingy to take one."

A CLERICAL contributor (we are always happy to receive their contributions for they abound in good things) sends us the following admirable illustration of our "human nature:"

A Western presiding elder boasting of the ample provision made for preachers in his district, said he left the parsonage of A—, while a donation was going on, where he saw one thousand seven hundred feet of sausages, which had been brought in, and it was still coming when he left.

THINK OF THIS.—There is nothing purer than honesty—nothing sweeter than charity—nothing warmer than love—nothing richer than wisdom—nothing brighter than virture—and nothing more steadfast than faith. These, united in one mind, form the purest, sweetest, happiest.

"In our County Court," writes an Eastern friend, "one of our smart young lawyers was well come up with the other day. A witness, in a case of assault, was asked by the junior Counsel, 'How far was you, Sir, from the parties when the alleged assault took place?'

"'Four feet five inches and a half,' was the answer promptly given.

"'Ah!, fiercely demanded the lawyer, 'how came you to be so very exact as all this?'

"'Because,' said the witness, very coolly 'I expected that some confounded fool would likely as not ask me, and so I went and measured it.'"

"The Rev. Dr. B—, a half century ago, was a distinguished minister in Connecticut He had a negro, Cato by name; yet so little of the philosopher was Cato, that it was doubtful whether to call him a wag or a fool. It came to pass one day that a grocer had been emptying some casks of the scuttling of cherry-rum, and a number of hogs in the street had eaten of the cherries till some were staggering about, some were drunk in the gutter, and all of themselves the worse for liquor. Cato saw their dreadful state, and called to his master at the foot of the chaise:

"'Master—Doctor, please come here!'

"The Doctor came at the call, and looked out where Cato pointed at the drunken quadrupeds, and asked, 'Well, what I, Cato lifted up both his hands, and with much emotion cried out,

"'Master, master, only look; poor human nature!'"

WHEN has a man enough? Never till he gets a little more. A very good story of old embargo times and the war of 1812 was told us the other day. Under the impulse of the removal of the embargo, there was a sudden rise in the value of property, and such a demand for it that merchandise was sometimes carried off from vessels before the owners arrived at their places of business, and the parties taking it came in afterward to say that they were at the owners' mercy, and must pay what they chose to ask. A brig was lying in Boston harbor, which had come up new from Plymouth before the embargo was laid, and was now in good condition, fit for sea. The Plymouth owner thought it was a good time to sell the brig, and sent up his son for the purpose, telling him to demand eight thousand dollars for her, and not to take less than six. John went to Boston, fought how things were going said the brig in a moment and hurried home, elated with his bargain. As he neared the house, he saw the old gentleman marching up and down the piazza, and presently rushing out to meet his son and hear the result of the sale.

"Have you sold the brig, John?"

"Yes, father, you may be sure of that."

"For how much, John?"

"For ten thousand dollars!"

"Ten thousand dollars!" cried the old man, with staring eyes. At hearing a price more than double what the vessel cost.

"Ten thousand dollars! I'll be you're sold her to some swindler who don't care what the price is, and never means to pay his notes."

"Notes, sir! you say, father? Why there's no notes in the case. I got the money and put it in the bank; draw, and

The old man's excitement suddenly cooled, and as the young gentleman rose to its place, he said,

"I say, Jeby couldn't you have got a

SOLDIERS in the ARMY!
AND OUR PEOPLE AT HOME,

Are now offered an opportunity by which they can obtain a

GOOD AND DURABLE TIME-PIECE,
At a very Low Figure.

OUR WATCHES are warranted to keep time one year, and the buyer is allowed the privilege of examination before the payment is required.

Improved Duplex in full Ruby Actions.

A first-class Hunting Time-Piece of silver material, over which is electro-find plated 18 k gold, most durably wrought, making the imitation so faultless that it cannot be detected from the solid material by the most experienced Judges; acids will not affect it. London made movement. Improved Duplex in full Ruby Actions has sweep seconds, and is not to be excelled in general appearance. This decidedly the one of the best articles ever offered for trades and speculators. Engineers, emigrants and persons travelling will find them superior to any other; alteration of climate will not affect their accuracy. Price, packed in good shape and good running order, only $35, or case of 6 for $200.

Silver Double Time Hunting Levers,

Best quality silver cases, over which electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, similar to our improved Duplex, and superior adjusted movements with "stop" to be used in timing horses, ect.; in four indexes for Washington and Greenwich time, sweep second, and all the improvements. All in all, taking its beautiful and faultless appearance and its superior movement into consideration, we regard it as decidedly the cheapest article of the kind in the market. Price, in good hunting order, $35, or case of 6 for $200.

☞ We ask no pay in advance, but will forward either of them to responsible parties, to any part of the loyal States, with bill payable to the express-man when the Good are delivered; giving the buyer the privilege of examination, and, if not satisfactory, the watch can be returned at our expense.

The express companies refuse making collections on soldiers, and other parties in the disloyal States, consequently all such orders must be accompanied by the cash to insure attention. We make a deduction on either Watch when the pay must is forwarded in advance.

Money may be sent by express at our expense

MANHOOD
AND THE
VIGOR OF YOUTH RESTORED
IN FOUR WEEKS,
By Dr. Sicotte's Essence of Life.

DR. SICOTTE, (OF PARIS) after years of earnest solicitation, has at length acceded to the urgent request of the American public, and appointed an agent in Toronto for the sale of his valued and highly prized Essence of Life. This wonderful agent will restore Manhood to the most shattered constitutions, whether arising from excesses, the effects of climate, or natural causes. The time required to execute the most inveterate case is four weeks; and if used according to printed instructions, which are very simple, failure is impossible. This life-restoring remedy should be taken by all about to marry, as its effects are permanent. It is acknowledged by the medical press to be the greatest discovery ever made. Its developing powers are astounding. Success is ensured as it is as certain as that science overthrows ignorance.

Dr. Sicotte's Essence of Life is sold in cases, with full instructions for use, at $3, or four quantities in one for $9, and will be sent to any part, carefully packed, on receipt of remittance to his accredit agent.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK,
For 1864.
GREAT LITERARY & PICTORIAL YEAR.

THE PUBLISHER of Godey's Lady's Book, thankful for that public which has enabled him to publish a Magazine for the last thirty-four years of a larger circulation than any in America, has made an arrangement with the most popular authoress in this country—

MARION HARLAND,
Authoress of "Alone," "Hidden Path," "Moss Side," and "Nemesis,"

Who will furnish Stories for the Lady's Book for 1864. This alone will place the Lady's Book in a Literary point of view far above all other Magazines. Our other favourite writers will all continue to furnish articles throughout the year.

The best Lady's Magazine in the world and the Cheapest.

OUR LITERATURE

Is of that kind that can be read aloud in the family circle, and the clergy in numerous cases here are subscribers for the Book.

THE MUSIC

Is all original, and would cost 30 cents (the price of the Book) in the music stores; but most of it is copyrighted, and cannot be obtained except in Godey.

OUR STEEL ENGRAVINGS.

All efforts to rival us in this have ceased, and we now stand alone in this department, giving as we do many more and infinitely better engravings than are published in any other work. Godey's immense double sheet Fashion-Plates, containing from two to seven full length colored Fashions on each plate—other Magazines give only two—are far ahead of any Fashions in Europe or America. The publication of these Plates cost $10,000 more than the Fashion plates of the old style, and nothing but our wonderfully large circulation enables us to give them. Other Magazines cannot afford it. We never spare money when the public can be benefited.

These Fashions may be relied on. Dresses may be made after them, and the wearer will not be an object to ridicule, as she would be if she visited the large cities dressed after the style of the plates in some of our so-called Fashion Magazines.

OUR WOOD ENGRAVINGS,

Of which we give twice or three times as many as any other Magazine, are often mistaken for steel; they are so far superior to any others

IMITATIONS.

Beware of them. Remember that the Lady's Book is the original publication and the cheapest. If you take Godey, you want no other Magazine. Everything that is useful or ornamental in a home will be found in Godey.

DRAWING LESSONS

No other Magazine gives them, and we have given enough to fill several large volumes.

OUR RECEIPTS

Are such as can be found nowhere else. Cooking in all its varieties—Confectionary—the Nursery—the Toilet—the Laundry—the Kitchen. Receipts upon all subjects are to be found in the pages of the Lady's Book. We originally started this department, and have peculiar facilities for making it most perfect. This department alone is worth the price of the book

LADIES' WORK TABLE.

This department comprises engravings and descriptions of every article that a lady wears

MODEL COTTAGES.

No other Magazine has this department.

Terms to Subscribers in the British Provinces:

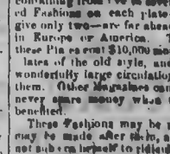
THE BENEFACTOR OF HIS RACE
THE GREAT HEALER OF MANKIND,
The Whole World United!
SICK PEOPLE THINK!
AFTER WHICH, ACT.
Herrick's Sugar Coated Pills.
CHILDREN CRY FOR THEM!



THIS remarkable American remedy is carrying the world by storm. Over five millions boxes are sold annually. Composed entirely of Vegetable Roots, Balsams and Extracts, their effect on the human system is pleasant, satisfactory and essential. Acting directly on the blood, glands, solids and fluids of the body, their use is attended with the happiest effects. In sudden attacks of diseases one or two doses almost always cure. In old standing cases of sickness, small doses repeated frequently—so cleanse the system that good health is the result. No change in employment or diet is necessary. They never cause sore mouth or swelled gums, as other pills do, as many other trade. They are warranted to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded. They are considered cheaper, safer prettier, and in all respects superior to any purgative pill in the world.

☞ The discovery of securing a pill with sugar coating, is claimed by Dr. Herrick. All others are counterfeits, and if used, will do harm and disappoint the sick. Herrick's pills are elegantly put up 20 in a box, with a large sheet of directions, and sold for 25 cents a box; 6 boxes for $1.

Herrick's Kid Strengthening Plaster.

THE GREAT STRENGTHENER AND PAIN DESTROYER. THE BEST AND CHEAPEST HOUSEHOLD REMEDY IN THE WORLD.

These renowned Plasters cure pains, weakness and distress in the back, side and breast, in five hours. Indeed, we contain are they to do this. Just the porous warmth given from recent, softness and ease, on breast for mother, renders them peculiarly adapted to the wants of females and others. Their application is universally sought for the strong muscular feeble woman, and the delicate infant. To each and all they will prove a balm and a blessing. Where one inspires pain, and without exception or trouble. Each Plaster will wear from one to four months, and in rheumatic complaints sprains and bruises, frequently effect cures when all other remedies fail. For diseases with in regard to the backs of each. Public speakers, vocalists, ministers of the gospel, and others, will strengthen their lungs and improve their voices by wearing them across their breast. Price 100 cents.

The above articles are sold by all the druggists throughout the United States and Canada, and by druggists throughout the United States and British Provinces, or will be sent by mail, postage paid, on receipt of price.

Select Poetry.

THE ENGINE DRIVER TO HIS ENGINE.

AIR—"The Iron Horse."

Put forth thy force, my iron horse,
With limbs that never tire,
The best of oil shall feed your joints,
And the best of coal your fire;
So off we tear from Euston square,
To beat the swift south-wind,
As we battle along the North-West rail,
With the special train behind:—

Dash along, crash along, sixty miles an hour!
Right through old England flee!
For I'm bound to see my love,
Far away in the North Countrie.

Like a train of ghosts, the telegraph posts,
Go wildly trooping by,
While one by one the milestones run,
And off behind us fly;
Like foaming wind it fires my blood,
To see your lightning speed,—
Arabia's race ne'er matched your pace,
My gallant steam-born steed!

Wheel along, squeal along, sixty miles an hour!
Right through old England flee!
For I am bound to see my love,
Far away in the North Countrie.

My blessing on old George Stephenson!
Let his fame forever last;
For he was the man that found the plan
To make you run so fast;
His arm was strong, his head was long,
He knew not guile nor fear;
When I think of him it makes me proud
That I am an engineer!

Tear along, flare along, sixty miles an hour!
Right through old England flee!
For I am bound to see my love,
Far away in the North Countrie.

Now Thames and Trent are far behind,
And evening's shades are come,
Before my eyes the brown hills rise
That guard my true love's home;
Even now she stands, my own dear lass!
Beside the cottage-door,
And she listens to the whistle shrill,
And the blast-pipe's mutling roar:—

Roll along, bowl along, sixty miles an hour!
Right through old England flee!
For I am bound to see my love,
At home in the North Countrie.

JOB WARNER'S CHRISTMAS.

The day before Christmas was closing in, to a dreary, cold gray storm drifted all to the eastward, and a snow-storm seemed imminent. But in spite of threatening clouds gay throngs crowded the thoroughfares. The shop windows were brilliant with articles of every conceivable variety adapted for Christmas-gifts. So the human tide ebbed and flowed, surging into shops, rushing to the street the attention of over-worked clerks, and receded with pleasant surprises destined on the following morning to make many households happy.

In front of a large window, brilliantly illuminated, stood an elderly man, somewhat under the middle stature. Job Warner was scarcely fifty; but sedentary habits and long stooping over a desk had bowed his form, and gave him the appearance of being several years older than he actually was. For twenty-five years he had been assistant book-keeper in the counting-room of Beaty and Co., importers of dry-goods and wholesale jobbers. His excellent business capacity would have secured him promotion to the post of chief-book-keeper, but his own humility and absence of pretension had unconsciously influenced his employers to accept him at his own valuation. So, while the firm had prospered, and made money by hundreds of thousands, Job Warner still continued to be assistant book keeper on a moderate salary of seven hundred dollars. With a family daily becoming more expensive, the little book-keeper had found it hard work to make both ends meet. He was compelled to live in very poor and incommodious lodgings, and practice humble rate of self-denial, all which he bore with a meek and uncomplaining spirit, with which he was doubtless credited in the better world, where, we trust, all the inequalities of this life will be made up.

The last year had been rather a trying one to Job Warner. The enhanced price of nearly every article which is included under the head of Necessaries had made a rigid economy needful. Months ago the family had given up using sugar, and butter was only used on Sundays. Frugality had become a habit, and was meekly submitted to as a necessary condition of life. But in spite of his habitual self-denial, the worthy book-keeper was stirred with an impulse to extravagance on this day. In the window before him bloomed a large doll—quite a queen she must have been in the realm of dolls—royally attired in a purple silk dress and a bonnet of the latest style. The eyes of the good book-keeper were fixed in admiration upon this beautiful doll-vision. There was a household pet at home—little Ellie—whom the possession of that doll would equal to the seventh heaven of happiness. True, such a royal lady might spare the idea of entering so humble a home, and her attire might seem out of place in contrast with the calicoes and ginghams with which Ellie and her mother were contented. But when these considerations suggested themselves to Job Warner he triumphantly answered, "Is there any thing too good for Ellie?"

Yes, we have found out the little book-keeper's weakness. He no sooner thought of little Ellie's bright eyes dancing with delight than his habitual prudence forsook him. With an air of desperate resolute a he entered the brilliant shop, and, timed y pushing his way among the well-dressed crowds surrounding the counter, asked with an apologetic cough the price of her Royal Highness in the window.

The clerk looked a little surprised at such a question from a man of so humble appearance, and answered in a short, quick tone, "Five dollars, Sir. Will you take it?"

Five dollars! Job was startled with the price, and answered in no abashed tone that he would not decide just yet.

Outside, he again looked longingly at the doll. Ellie would be so delighted with it—but then five dollars! He reckoned up what a number of articles might be bought for five dollars, and shook his head reluctantly. Mrs. Warner would think he had quite taken leave of his senses. Of course, he must give up all thoughts of it. But no! A daring suggestion occurred to him. Might he not apply to Mr. Beatley for an increase of salary? There had been a general raising of salaries elsewhere. That he knew. His old friend Timothy Fog had but raised six months ago; but somehow Job had never succeeded in summoning up courage to make such a request of his employer. He was not sure, in his humility, whether he was worth any more than seven hundred dollars a year. But his love for Ellie gave him unwonted boldness. With an increase of salary he could buy this magnificent doll for her, and afford his eldest boy a course of lessons in drawing, for which he had a strong taste. Yes, he would ask to have his salary raised that night. A little matter of business had detained Mr. John Beatley, the head of the firm, in his office, so that he would be sure to find him on returning thither.

Mr. Beatley was seated in his office glancing over some papers. He was a large portly man, a little pompous in manner; and a glance from his gray eyes always confused the worthy book-keeper, who, long as he had known him, had never got to feel quite at ease in his company. Job had an undefined idea that his employer was immensely superior to him in every way, and looked up to him with distant reverence.

John Beatley lifted his eyes in surprise as Job aluGed in at the door, his hat under his arm, with an air of nervous trepidation which the consciousness of his errand inspired.

"Have you forgotten anything, Warner?" demanded Mr. Beatley, in a clear, commanding tone.

"No, Sir. Mr. Beatley; or rather, I should say, yes," stammered the book-keeper. "There was a little matter which I wished to speak to you about. But I should not wish to take up your time, if you are busy, Sir, and I will wait till some other occasion."

"If you can say what you have to say in five minutes, Warner, go on," returned his employer.

"It was about an increase of salary, Mr. Beatley," said he, plunging into his subject and talking fast to keep his courage up. "Prices have been rising of late, and I find it very difficult to maintain a wife and four children on seven hundred dollars a year. I do, indeed, Sir. If you would be kind enough to add a hundred or even fifty, I would thank you gratefully Sir."

"An increase of salary, eh, Warner? Seven hundred dollars used to be considered a very fair salary. Of course some get much more. But you know, Warner, that you are not a first-class man of business. You do your work very satisfactory, but—"

"I know what you would say, Mr. Beatley," interrupted Job, humbly. "I know my abilities are small, but I try to be faithful. I hope I always have been faithful to the best of my poor abilities."

"Yes, Warner, you have. Don't think I have any complaint to make; but as to an increase of salary, that requires consideration. Probably the high prices will not always last, and in the mean time you can be more economical."

More economical! And this to Job who had been a close economist all his life. However, he did not venture to reply, but, bowing humbly, withdrew. A minute later his employer, who had got through with the business which detained him, put on his overcoat and followed. On his way back Job paused a moment before the window which had so great an attraction for him. Again he thought how much little Ellie would like it. But he felt satisfied, from Mr. Beatley's manner, that there was little hope of an increase of income, and without that such an outlay would be unpardonable extravagance.

"No," he half sighed, "I must give up the idea of buying it, and little Ellie must be content with something less expensive."

Mr. John Beatley was close behind and heard his speech. "So he wanted to buy that piece of finery," thought he. No wonder he demanded an increase of salary."

The two men continued to walk in the same direction, Job, of course, unconscious of Mr. Beatley's proximity. Suddenly from the darkness of a side street emerged a little girl, a very picture of wretchedness, with ragged dress, pinched and famished-looking features, and feet bare, notwithstanding the inclement season. She looked up piteously in the face of Job Warner.

"I am very cold and hungry," she murmured.

"Poor child! poor child!" ejaculated Job, compassionately. "Have you no home?"

"No; mother died last week, and since then I have lived in the streets."

"Have you had anything to eat to-day?"

"Yes, Sir, a cracker."

"Only a cracker," repeated Job, pitifully. "And your poor feet are bare. How cold you must be!"

"Yes, Sir, I am very cold," said the little girl, shivering.

"And where do you expect to pass the night?"

"I don't know, Sir."

"Where did you sleep last night?"

"In a door way; but they drove me off this morning. I was in another door way again." The poor child burst into tears, sobbing convulsively.

"Don't cry, my dear!" said Job, soothingly. "Don't cry. You shall come home with me, and I will let you sleep in a warm bed and give you something to eat. I am poor, my child, but not so poor as you, thank God! I had intended to buy some little presents for my children, but they will be better pleased if I spend the money in making you comfortable. Take my hand, and we shall soon be at home."

During this colloquy John Beatley withdrew into a doorway. He had felt some curiosity to learn how the book-keeper would deal with this claim upon his benevolence. There was something in the straightforward simplicity and kind heart of Job that touched him, and made him feel not a little compunction for his own bearing in the interview which had just taken place between them.

"He is about to deprive his children of their Christmas presents for the sake of conferring them upon some outcast," said John Beatley to himself. "He has a noble heart, poor fellow! and he shall be no loser by it. After all, seven hundred dollars must be quite sufficient in these times. I will see what I can do for him."

It was the merchant's better nature that spoke. He who not naturally a selfish man, only inconsiderate. Now that his benevolent impulses were excited, he would not rest till they were embodied in action. He knew Job's never bent than done a better night's work than this. The kindness to the little outcast shall be richly recompensed.

With the little girls hand firmly clasped in his Job passed before the door of a small wooden tenement, and turning the knob softly entered.

"Why, Job, how late you are!" said a kind motherly woman, advancing to meet him, "and—merciful goodness! who have you there?"

"A poor child, Mary, without father or mother, who was wandering barefoot and hungry through the streets. I couldn't help bringing her home, could I? Think if it had been little Ellie!"

"You did quite right, Job. Poor little thing! How thin she is! Are you hungry, little girl?"

"Oh, so hungry and cold. May I warm myself by your fire ma'am?"

"Bless me, child, I ought to have thought of it before. Yes, go and sit down on the cricket, and I will bring you some bread and milk."

While the little girl's wants were being satisfied, Mrs. Warner said, "Well, Job, what have you got for the children?"

"I didn't get any thing, Mary. I was just going to get some little things when this poor child came up. I thought maybe we might be willing to keep her a week or so and fit her out with some better clothes, and I am afraid we can't afford to do that and buy presents for the children too. Do you think they would be willing to do without them for this year?"

"I am sure they will; but as all have been up their stockings, I must tell them tonight so that they need not be disappointed in the morning."

The considerate mother went up stairs and acquainted the children that their father had brought home a poor little girl who had no father nor mother, and asked if for her sake they would be willing to give up their Christmas presents. This appeal went to the children's hearts. They were also delighted with the idea of a new playfellow, and in bright anticipations of the morrow lost sight entirely of the stockings that were destined to remain unfilled.

"What did the children say?" asked Job, a little uneasily.

"Dear children!" said Mrs. Warner, wiping her eyes with motherly affection and pride. "They took it like little angels. They are very anxious to see the little girl. I do believe they will regard her as the best Christmas present they could have."

"I wish we could do something more than keep her for a few days," said Job, thoughtfully.

"So do I. If you only had a little larger salary, Job, it might be done. Why don't you ask for more?"

"I did to-night Mary."

"And what did Mr. Beatley say?" inquired Mrs. Warner, eagerly

"He advised me to economize."

"As if you hadn't been doing it all your life," exclaimed his wife, indignantly. "Little he knows what economy is!"

"Hush, Mary," said Job, half frightened. "Of course he can't understand how hard a time we have to get along."

"No, but he ought to inquire. What harm would it do him to give you an extra hundred dollars?"

"I suppose he could afford it," said Job; "but perhaps he doesn't think I am worth any more. As he said, seven hundred dollars used to be considered a fair salary."

"So he refused your application."

"Well no, not exactly. He said he would take it into consideration. But I am sure from his tone that I have nothing to expect. We must get along as well as we can through the hard times, and perhaps things will improve by-and-by."

"What a thoroughly good man you are, Job!" said Mrs. Warner, looking affectionately at her husband, who was dear to her in spite of his shabby coat.

"Of course I haven't got a good wife," he answered, cheerfully; "I won't call myself poor so long as I have you, Mary."

There were few happier or more thankful hearts than those of the shabby book-keeper and his good wife, despite their enforced self-denial and numerous privations. Their souls were filled with a calm and serene trust that the same kind Providence which had guarded and guided them hitherto would continue its beneficient care and protection. Mrs. Warner took up her knitting, and Job, opening the well-used Bible, proceeded to adjust his spectacles, preparatory to reading a chapter, when he was interrupted by a quick, sharp, decisive knock on the outer door.

Taking a tallow-candle from the table Job went to the door and opened it. The wind caused the candle to flicker, so that he did not at first recognize the visitor. When he did his heart gave a sudden bound, and in his surprise he nearly let fall the light.

It was his employer—Mr. John Beatley—who stood before him.

"Well Warner, may I come in?" inquired the merchant, with an unwonted kindness in his tone.

"To be sure, Mr. Beatley, Sir; I shall be most happy if you will condescend to enter my poor dwelling. It isn't suitable for such a visitor. But you are but fifty welcome, Sir. This way if you please."

Mrs. Warner looked up on her husband re-entered the room. Her surprise was little less than this when Mr. Beatley was introduced.

"Mary, this is Mr. Beatley, my respected employer, who has condescended to honor us with a visit. I am sorry we have no better place to receive him in."

"No apologies, Warner," said Mr. Beatley, pleasantly, throwing aside his usual pompous manner. "I don't expect that you could live like a prince on seven hundred dollars. Mrs. Warner, I am glad to make your acquaintance. Your husband has served our house long and faithfully, and I must see what can be done to make his circumstances pleasanter."

No one knew better how to pay a compliment gracefully than John Beatley, and Mrs. Warner heard in gratification, not unmixed with surprise, the assurance of their employer's interest in their welfare.

"I have called, Warner, on a little business," proceeded Mr. Beatley. "You spoke to me to night about having your salary raised."

"Yes, Sir," said Job, humbly; I thought afterward that I might be a little presumptuous in supposing my services to be worth more than seven hundred dollars; but indeed, Sir, it requires a great deal of economy to make both ends meet. I was thinking more of that than my own gratifications, I suppose. As you said, Sir—"

"Never mind what I said, Warner," interrupted the merchant, smiling. "Your application was made unexpectedly, and I spoke without consideration. I have thought over what you said, and decided that your application was just and proper. Prices have advanced considerably, as a little investigation has satisfied me. Therefore I have concluded to grant your request. What increase of salary do you ask?"

"I thought of asking for a hundred dollars more," said Job timidly; "but if you think that that is too much, I should be satisfied and grateful if you could let me have fifty."

"Do you think you could get along on fifty?" asked Mr. Beatley.

"Yes, Sir—with economy, of course. I always expect to practise economy; and I have a good wife, who knows how to make the most of a little."

"That I can readily believe," said the merchant, politely. "You may consider your salary raised, then, Warner," he proceeded; and as you have been able to get along on seven hundred dollars, I hope you will be able to afford some additional comforts in a thousand."

A thousand! repeated Job and his wife, incredulously.

"Yes, my good friends," said Mr. Beatley; "I have decided that my assistant book keeper is fully worth that sum to the firm, and it is my wish to pay those whom I employ what they are justly entitled to."

"How can I ever thank you, Sir?" exclaimed Job, rising and seizing his employer's hand. "I shall consider myself rich with such an income. Mary, did you understand? I am to have a thousand dollars."

"Sir, you are very kind," said Mary, simply. "I need not thank you. Your own heart will tell you how much happiness you have conferred upon us."

"I understand and appreciate what you say," said Mr. Beatley, kindly. "But, Warner," he continued, "there is another matter about which I wish to speak to you. There is a young girl in whom I feel an interest, who is unfortunate enough to stand alone in the world, without father or mother. I have thought that if you and Mrs. Warner would be willing to receive her as one of your family, and bring her up in the same careful manner as your own children, it would be an excellent arrangement for her, while I would take care that you lost nothing by your kindness."

"We shall be very happy to oblige you, Sir," said Mrs. Warner; "but would our plain style of living suit the young lady? We shall, to be sure, be able now to afford a better house."

"I don't think the young lady will find any fault with your housekeeping, Mrs. Warner," said the merchant, "especially as she has probably never been accustomed to living as well as she would with you."

Mrs. Warner looked mystified.

Mr. Beatley smiled.

"The young lady is already in your house," he explained. "In fact, it is the friendless little orphan whom your husband encountered to-night and brought home."

Mrs. Warner's face lighted up with pleasure.

"We will undertake the charge gladly," she answered, "and should have done so if you had not spoken of it. Is it not so, Job?"

"Yes, Mary, it occurred to me as soon as Mr. Beatley spoke of raising my salary."

"And you would really have undertaken such a charge at your own expense?" said Mr. Beatley wonderingly. "Would it have been just to your own children to diminish their comforts for the sake of doing a charitable action?"

"We shall not be able to leave our children money, said Mrs. Warner, simply, "but we hope to train them up to deeds of kindness. There's a great deal of suffering in the world, Sir. We ought to do our part toward relieving it."

"I honor you, Mrs. Warner for your unselfish benevolence," returned Mr. Beatley, warmly; "but in this case I shall claim to do my part. I shall allow you two hundred dollars a year for taking charge of the child. You will of course require a larger and more commodious home, and will, I hope, be enabled to afford your children such advantages as they may require to prepare them to act their parts in the world."

"Two hundred dollars!" exclaimed Job, scarcely crediting the testimony of his ears. "Why, that will make twelve hundred!"

"Mr. Beatley, Sir, I hope you will believe me to be grateful. You have so loaded me with benefits that I don't know how to thank you."

"And I am under obligations to you, Warner, also," said Mr. Bentley. "Prosperity had begun to harden my heart. At any rate, it had made me thoughtless of the multitudes who are struggling with ills which my wealth could alleviate. To-night I was an unseen witness of your kindness to the poor girl who crossed your path. I felt rebuked by the contrast between your conduct and mine, and I resolved, God helping me, to become hereafter a better steward of his bounty."

"Seeing the Sunday, you think too much of the little I did," said Job, modestly.

"Let me keep my own opinion as to that, Warner. By the way, it may be well for me to pay the first quarter of our little change in advance. Here are fifty dollars. At the expiration of six months you may draw upon me for a similar amount. Before I leave you let me take the liberty to suggest that the shops are not yet closed, and you will still have an opportunity of providing Christmas gifts for your children."

"So I shall. Thank you, Mr. Bentley, for kindly reminding me. Who shall forget her doll, father all. Such a doll! Florida plaited; expertly, turning toward him, with, "there is to be no a royal princess!—but not too good for Ella."

"By all means let Ella have her doll," said Mr. Bentley, smiling. "I must bid you good night, Mrs. Warner, but when you have moved I will look in upon you again, and shall hope to make the acquaintance of Ella and her doll."

Job Warner was absent an hour. When he returned he was fairly loaded down with gifts. I can not undertake to enumerate them. Enough that prominent among them was Ella's stately peasant. Can the friendly reader imagine the delight of the children the next morning? Seldom has Christmas dawned on a happier household. Ella was in a perfect ecstasy of delight; nor was the little outcast forgotten. When her rags were stripped off and she was attired in thick, warm clothing, she seemed suddenly to have been lifted into Paradise. When the transports of the children had partially subsided, Job drew toward him the old Bible, and opening it at the second chapter of St. Luke's gospel, read reverently the account there given of the first Christmas-day. Just as he concluded the bells rang out a merry peal, and the little household seemed with vibrent voices to proclaim, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good-will to men!"

A Sad Comment on Fast Living.

From the Boston Traveller.

An old man, who has been living in the most abject poverty for several years, vibrating between Worcester county and Berkshire, Massachusetts and Connecticut, as he was shifted by select men who wished to clear him from their precincts, has at last found a refuge, but perhaps only a temporary one, in the State Alms-house at Monson, Mass. Forty years ago this same man did a heavy grain and shipping business in New York, and was among the most influential and respected of the merchants of the metropolis. About the time of the completion of the Erie Canal, he, with others, conceived a grand scheme of doing an immense foreign trade, and went to Europe, taking most of his wealth with him. Family affairs did not run smooth and he gave up the grand project, went to London, led a gay life, was feasted by Lords, became very intimate with the household of a noble earl, and was presented at court by the American Minister.

Afterwards he crossed to Paris, where some imbroglio obliged him to accept the challenge of a fighting marquis, who sent a ball through his right arm; but our pauper being a poor shot severely wounded his own second instead of the marquis, and he had to to leave the city. Then he went to Munch, and made love to the niece of one of the royal families, was accepted, got drunk at a palatial ball over his conquest, made a bad thing of it, and left Munich with dispatch. He continued in his excesses, gambled away all his property, was a ragabond in England a few years, then in New York, and then throughout Western Massachusetts. His life is a sadder comment on fast living than was ever written.

SOCIAL PARTIES.

This is the season for social parties both in the city and country, whether of a public or private character, we entreat all concerned to consider the danger of introducing into them intoxicating drinks, which are leading astray more of our youth than all other causes put together,—and which open the door to all other temptations.

Many families brought up in temperance principles throughout the country, are placed in a false position, if wine or other intoxicating drinks are furnished at the parties to which they are invited. If they know that liquors are to be offered, they may, indeed, decline the invitation; but sometimes these drinks appear when they are least expected. In this case they have either to countenance what they strongly condemn, or manifest their disapprobation where such a manifestation would be quite out of place. Many young persons in fact, it is to be feared, are thus led, through politeness, into tampering with those drinks, the use of which, as a beverage, or article of entertainment, they know to be wrong. Let us suppose some such young persons finally led astray through the use of intoxicating liquors commenced in this way, (than which daily experience shows us that nothing is more likely,) and then imagine, if we can, the load of guilt that rests upon the respectable and worthy host and hostess who tempted them into the downward path.

"It must be," Christ says, "that offences come, but woe to that man by whom the offence cometh. It were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck and he cast into the sea, than that he should cause to offend one of these little ones."

Then, again, there may be persons present who had formerly acquired the appetite for strong drink, but who, through resolute and persevering efforts, had reformed; and if such be tempted by their kind friends (?) to take one glass of wine or beer, all their past efforts, and all their hopeful information go for nothing. Their last state will, very probably, prove worse than the first.

These considerations should surely induce all good men and women—all who love their neighbors—to banish intoxicating drinks from their parties, whether public or private—and if there be any who, notwithstanding the danger of presenting such temptation, are determined to persevere in the practice—they should surely, in common fairness, put in the margin of their cards the words—"wines and liquors"—that the invited may know what to expect.—Montreal Witness.

PERSECUTION OF LADIES IN WARSAW.—An incident which occurred in Warsaw on the 2nd ultimo is a fair example of the treatment to which the ladies of that city are subjected by the Russian authorities. A house owner was going home in the evening with his wife. He was provided with a lantern, according to the regulations, but his wife was not, as women accompanied by men are not required to carry lanterns. As they were passing through a street where the pavement is so narrow that two persons can only walk on it abreast, they met a friend who walked on with them, and as he had business with the husband of the wife walked on before. Seeing this, a policeman in the street arrested the lady because she had no lantern. All explanations were useless, and the lady and her husband were immediately dragged to the nearest police station, where the commissionary, Rydzewski, ordered five lashes to be given her. On hearing this sentence, the lady remonstrated, representing that she was pregnant, and that if the order was executed it might be her destruction; coldhearted. The wife of Rydzewski deigned to give orders that the number of lashes to be inflicted upon the unfortunate lady should be reduced from five to three in consideration of the publicity of the punishment body, and the sentence was carried out to the letter.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

The United States Congress assembled in Washington on the 7th instant. After the organization of the two Houses, the President's Message was read. We propose, as the Message itself is altogether too voluminous for our columns, to give a somewhat brief synopsis of its contents.

As a literary production, we may remark, en passant we think it is superior to anything before coming from the President. There is no attempt at ostentatious display; but it treats the various subjects it touches upon in a remarkably lucid and nervous manner. He first congratulates the nation upon the richness of the harvest, and the peaceful solution of the various international difficulties growing out of the blockade. After referring to the close of the controversy between the Chilian Government and the United States by the decision of the King of the Belgiums, to whom, as umpire it had been referred, he touches upon the rights of foreigners in the United States, and of United States citizens in foreign parts, and suggests that the laws relating thereto require revision. There is a prospect of a continuous line of telegraph through the Russian territories from the Pacific, and he also recommends to the attention of Congress the international telegraph across the Atlantic. He then touches upon the important subject of Immigration, and submits to the Congress the expediency of establishing a system for the encouragement thereof, especially while thousands of persons destitute of remunerative employment are thronging the United States foreign Consuls, offering to emigrate, if but only slightly assisted to do so,—there is in the United States a great deficiency in the various fields of industry. Indemnification is urged to foreigners who have innocently suffered loss or damage in any way; and he also recommends that the incomes of foreign Consuls should hereafter be relieved of all taxes heretofore imposed upon them. He says that the operations of the Treasury during the past year have been successfully conducted. The receipts for the year ending July 1st amounted to $901,125,674 86. The expenditure for the same time was $890,796,630 55—thus leaving a balance of $6,329,044 21. He narrates the different sources from which this income was derived and the various causes of expenditure. For army details reference is made to the report of the Secretary of War. With regard to the Navy! after noting the difficulty necessarily experienced in keeping up a blockade along so an extended a coast, he speaks in very complimentary terms of this arm of the service. Over 1000 vessels have been captured since the blockade was instituted, and the value of prizes already sent in for adjudication amounts to $13,000,000. The naval force consists of 588 vessels; of these 75 are iron-clad or armour-plated steamers. The number of seamen employed by the Government has increased from 7,500 in 1861 to 34,000 at present. The Post Office department he states to be in a healthy condition—the expenditure nearly equally to the income—the latter amounting to $11,314,206 84, and the former $11,163,789 59—leaving only a deficiency of $150,414 25. Due reference is made to the sale and settlement of Public Lands. During the year 3,841,549 acres were sold. The Indians have been removed to the North-west, and steps are being taken for the acquisition of their possessory rights. He thinks that the system towards the Indians should be remodelled. The question of enlarging the water communication between the Mississippi and the Eastern seaboards, particularly with reference to its special importance in connection with the opening of the Pacific Railway, is urged upon the attention of Congress in a manner that shows the strength of the views that the President holds upon the matter. In his retrospect of the civil war, Mr. LINCOLN shows that a marked change has come over the North, as is evinced in the late elections. Of emancipated slaves 100,000 are employed in the Federal service, about half of which number actually bear arms in the service—thus giving the double advantage of taking so much labor from the insurgent cause, and supplying the places which must otherwise have been filled with white men. He remarks that no servile insurrection or tendency thereto has marked the measures of Emancipation and the arming of the blacks. With regard to the re-construction of the Union, he holds, while the article in the Constitution which requires the Federal government to guarantee to every State a republican government, it also gives it the power of demanding the extinction of Slavery, if inconsistent with such requirement. In the Message is reference to a proclamation accompanying it, offering pardon to all (with some exceptional cases) who may return to their allegiance to the Federal Government. The Message then concludes:

"In the midst of other cares, however important, we must not lose sight of the fact that the war power is still our main reliance. To that power alone can we look for a time when war shall cease. It can only come by a prevalent conviction among the people of the utter helplessness of the rebellion, of its power to shield them from the consequences of their crimes. Until that conviction shall be established it can be done anywhere

AMERICAN NEWS.

There is nothing particularly interesting as far as the war is concerned. From the last advices received from the Army of the Potomac state that the Federals occupy the same position precisely as before the advance. The reports that General Lee has thrown a force across the Rapidan are incorrect. The men are busily engaged in building comfortable winter quarters. A rumor prevailed in the army last week that General Lee had, under a flag of truce, forwarded a request to General Meade for an armistice of three months duration. General Meade is to retain the command of the army of the Potomac, Gen. Longstreet is said to have raised the siege of Knoxville in consequence of heavy reinforcements having been received by General Burnside. On Friday night he was at Morristan, and was expected to make a stand at that place. The Confederate loss at Knoxville is stated at six hundred, principally in Gen. Hood's division. The assult on the 20th failed in consequence of forged orders recalling Gen. Anderson's brigade. The President has signed a pardon exempting E. W. Gantt, of Arkansas, from the penalty of treason he incurred by accepting the office of brigadier-general in the service of the confederate. The pardon reinstates Mr. Gantt in all his rights of property excepting those relating to slaves.

TOWN COUNCIL.

MONDAY, December 14th, 1863.

Present, His Worship the Mayor, and Messrs Toole, Lawson, Carlisle, Ivy, Ormond, Dickson, Nicholls, Clinton, Douglas, Landy, Burnham and Ryan.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

A communication was read from the officers of the Fire Company, asking the Council to allow the members of the Fire Company $2 each.

Mr. John Kennedy, tendered his resignation as Assessor, which was on motion received.

Several accounts were handed over to the Finance committee.

A statement of the receits and expenditures of the Commissioners of the Town Trust was read and submitted.

John Lane presented a petitition, praying that no more proceedings be taken against him on a joint note as he had not received value for the same.

On motion of Mr. Lawson, the members of the Fire Company were allowed to get $2 each as compensation for their services.

A report from the Finance Commiste, recommending the payment of sundry accounts was received and adopted.

A report from the special committee to whom was referred the petition of Thos. Bradburn and John Kennedy reported favorably on the prayer of their petitions, was received and adopted.

On motion of Mr. Claxton, the Finance Committee be requested to take into consideration and report to this Council the last made of investing the Sinking Fund of £200 per annum paid by the Railway Lessies to the Town.

Mr. Claxton gave notice of a resolution he intended to bring forward at the next meeting of the Council, to allow Mr. McNeil a part of the amount he has had to pay for a Licence as Auctioneer.

Mr. Ormond called the attention of the Council, to a discrepancy between the Schedule of Amos J. Fisher and the Assessment Roll. The Clerk was instructed to correct the error.

Moved by Mr. Fry and seconded by Mr. Carlisle, that the Mayor do instruct the Inspector to allow Messrs Kennedy and Bradburn to proceed with their buildings.

The Council then adjourned for one week.

DEATH BY ACCIDENT.

HUGH HOGATE, an aged resident of the 14th Concession of the Township of Cavan was returning home from the village of Mount Pleasant on Wednesday, 9th inst.; the night being intensely dark and very cold, it is supposed he got astray and tumbled down a steep bank at the east end of Mr. THOMAS BEST'S flour mill into the gate, where he perished. He was found by Mr. Best the following morning frozen quite stiff. An inquest was held on the body, when the jury returned a verdict of "Accidental Death."

HAVE YOU TRIED IT?—If not, don't delay another moment, but get a bottle of the "Canadian Pain Restorer." It is far ahead of any other medicine, and was never known to fail. All inflammed pains are immediately and permanently removed by it, and the price places it within the reach of all. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

FIRE.

On Friday about 10 p. m., a fire broke out in the work shop attached to Mr. A. BREWER'S Tin and Hardware store. It was, however speedily put out by the crowd that assembled. This fire showed the folly of the Council in leaving the Engine to be exposed as it is. It was not got in working order till after the fire was out. Damage about $300, insured.

The Poles in England and France have been contributing from 12,000 to 15,000 francs daily for the support of the insurrectionists in Warsaw.

The City Council of Hamilton have adopted a rate in the sixty of 20 cents in the dollar, leaving the School Trustees and Police to collect their own rates.

A large picture just finished in Paris for the Haytien Government depicts John Brown crowned by a negro and mulatto. John is painted twelve feet high.

A Shenectady lady was recently relieved of a tape-worm, which measured eighteen feet and nine inches. The monster was expelled by a very simple remedy, namely—pumpkin seeds.

A loaf of bread at one of the thanksgiving dinners in New York was eleven feet long, ten inches thick, twenty-two inches wide, and required a whole barrel of flour for its construction. It was needed.

The Freshmen of Yale had a meeting the other night, and twenty-four signed a pledge to abstain from intoxicating drinks during their college course.

A bill has been introduced into the Missouri Legislature to sell out the Pacific Railroad to J. C. Fremont, and others for $7,000,000, payable in State bonds.

Gen. Grant has captured within the past seven months four hundred and twelve rebel cannon, namely: 52 on his advance to Vicksburg, 300 at that place, and 60 last week before Chattanooga.

Horse stealing at Kingston is supposed to be conducted by an "organized band" having extensive "lines of communication." Mr F. Gardiner, Waterloo Road, lost a fine animal last Monday night.

An American firm in Liverpool—McHenry & Co.—failed for a large amount some time since, but subsequent prosperity has enabled them to pay all their old debts. One was $235,000 to a London banker.

The old line democratic party is gaining Missouri rapidly, and is gaining rapidly in the Legislature, in consequence of large offers made by eastern capitalists. They propose to take them at about what they have cost the State, some $20,000,000.

Dr. Joseph Burnett, a Boston druggist, placed four Alderneys on his farm in Southboro a few days since at a cost of $1000 and has since sold $1,400 worth of Alderney calves, besides a large quantity of butter at 30 to 40 cents per pound.

From a statement in the Globe, it appears that parties who bring up old Post Office stamps of all kinds make a regular trade out of it, as they are able to obliterate the Post Office mark, and issue them as if they had never been used. Steps are to be taken to put a stop, if possible, to these frauds.

A Washington letter in the New York Times says:—Considerable comment has been made in diplomatic circles upon the reticence of the President in his Message respecting Mexican affairs. The Mexican Legation consider it a good omen. At the French Legation, on the other hand, this silence is accepted as an unfriendly indication.

Three ladies were drowned at Hunter's Point Ferry, N. Y., a few days ago. They were left alone in a carriage, when the horses, becoming frightened at a train of cars passing, plunged into the river. Great efforts were made to extricate the ladies from the floating carriage by breaking the roof off, but not before they were suffocated by the water.

The new King of Denmark is a cousin of the late King, and a German. He was elected as the next King of Denmark and Schleswig by the five powers in 1852. The Prince of Augustenburg claims the Duchies of Schleswig and Holstein, and if Germany backs his claims war must result. It is doubtful whether Austria and Russia will resort to this extreme measure, whatever several petty German Dukedoms may do.

THE CONCERT THIS EVENING.

The affair on behalf of the Organ Fund, of St. John's Church, promises to be very entertaining. From a glance we have had at the Programme, we find the names of Mrs. YARKER and Mr. T. BROWN, opposite that beautiful Duett "The Parting Hour." Mr. HAGERMAN, sings "Treasures of the Deep," and the Misses CLINTON with Mr. HEATHFIELD, perform on the Piano. We hope there will be a large attendance. The Concert is to be in Messrs. Coulter & Stevenson's Hall.

We call attention to the Union School Examination notice in another column. The Examination will be held on Friday and Monday. The Public meeting on Monday will no believe be a pleasant one. There will be Speeches, Music and Recitations. Ladies wishing seats are advised to attend early. The meeting at night will be free.

Mr. JOHN SULLIVAN, of the township of Dentre brought into town on Saturday last, two Pigs, of his own raising, which weighed 1,025 lbs; they sold for $5,25 per cwt—or, $53.81 for the pair.

FIRE COMPANY.

At a meeting of Hesketon Fire Company held in the Town Hall on Tuesday evening last [illegible] the following gentlemen were elected:—

[illegible] Commissioners to consist of Captain [illegible], W. H. Wrighton and L. Yorke [illegible] to examine water and report on the location of the Engine House, &c., and also the probability of the Engine House being completed for the use of the Company and apparatus.

In accordance with the above resolution, your Committee beg leave to report that they have examined the Engine and Hose, and also the cow house, which is supposed to offer the necessary protection for the above apparatus, and find the Engine frozen up, and consequently useless should duty require its service.

The Hose, composed of 400 feet of the old and 100 feet of the new, is also in a most deplorable condition, and if left much longer in its present state of exposure to the wind and weather, and under the immediate control of those neglected orphans of the corporation, [illegible] will become very badly cracked and unfit for service.

Your committee cannot possibly see the consistency shown by certain members of Town Council who, when a former assembly voted $150 for the clothing of the firemen, and $120 for new Hose, and who now, there some petty dispute or selfish motive, and in direct contradiction to their former actions, give us to understand that the cow house, before mentioned, is a very suitable place for the protection of the best expended $2000 ever invested by this Municipality. The only reason assigned by them for the non-completion of the brick building now in course of [illegible] is that it is illegal.

Your committee having made the above very inquiries of a member of the Town Council as to the practability of the building [illegible] in course of erection being completed, have his assurance that in a few weeks it will be fit a condition for our occupation.

In conclusion, your committee hope and trust that the petty opposition of certain members of the Council will cease, and that they will use the few talents of which they are so lucky as to be in possession for the public weal, and not by a continuation of their folly and, opposition suffer destruction to the property of which they are stewards, and the possible disbanding of an efficient Fire Department.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Signed,

D. McNAUGHTON,
W. H. WRIGHTON,
LIONEL YORK.

THE RURAL ANNUAL FOR 1864.

The Rural Annual and Horticultural Directory is a little book published at the commencement of each year by the Editor of the Genesee Farmer, at Rochester, N. Y. It was started in 1856, and a new volume has been issued each year. The volume for 1864 is now before us. Among its contents may be mentioned articles

On the Best Means of Enriching the Soil.
On Swamp Muck, and the Best Methods of Composting and apply it.
On Manures, with a table showing their Relative Value.
On Protection to Orchards.
On the Connection between Roots and Leaves of Plants. (A most valuable article written expressly for the Rural Annual by Thomas Meehan, Editor of the Gardeners' Monthly.)
On Lime.
On the Culture of Roses in Pots.
On the Effect of Cultivation on Plants.
On the best Climate for Sheep.
On the Cultivation of Celery.
On Gathering Fruit.
On the Culture of Hops. (A most valuable article, written for the Rural Annual by T. S. Harison, Esq., giving practical directions for starting and cultivating a hop vineyard. It is the best treatise on the subject yet published.)
On the culture of Flax. (Written for the Rural Annual by D. W. Ray.)
On the Cultivation of Pears. (Written for the Rural Annual by F. W. Lay, of Monroe county, one of the largest pear-growers in the United States.)
On Fruit Culture in the West. (Written for the Rural Annual by D. S. Seofield, of Illinois.)
On Picking and Marketing Fruit. (Written for the Rural Annual by E. N. Hersenden. A most valuable article.)
On the Cultivation of Strawberries near Boston.
On the Best Way to Use Bones.
On Planting Trees.

With many other short articles of interest and value to every one engaged in the culture of the soil.

Price only 25 cents. It will be sent prepaid by return mail on receipt of the price. Address JOSEPH HARRIS, Editor Genesee Farmer, Rochester, N. Y. For sale by all booksellers. SINCLAIR TOUSEY, wholesale agent, New York.

HURON COLLEGE.

The Huron College, under the auspices of the Bishop of Huron, was inaugurated last month. A large number of clerical and other celebrities, both from Canada and the neighboring States were present. The Right Reverend Dr. MCILVAINE delivered the opening address. The staff is composed of the Ven. Archdeacon HELLMUTH, Principal and Divinity Professor; Rev. J. SHULTZ, Professor of Modern Languages, and the Rev. H. EVANS, B. A., as Classical Tutor, and negotiations have been entered into to obtain the services of a gentleman as Classical and Mathematical Professor. The College, we are happy to say, has every prospect of a bright and successful future before it. Its patro, the Bishop of Huron is well known for the evangelical and catholic views he entertained.

A HOAX INDEED!—The Boston Post got off a very good or humorous sort a hoax t'other morning. Coulter got off more of Bryan's Philosophy Wilson, at 25 cents box, for coughs, sore throats, hoarseness, etc., than you can readily conceive. Try the Wilson.

By a notice in another column, it will be seen that the Rate-payers are requested to meet in the Town Hall, on Monday next, to nominate a fit and proper person for Mayor, for the ensuing year. The names of several persons are mentioned. Let there be a good turn out.

MASONIC.—Masons are requested to meet this evening, at the Lodge Room of Peterboro Lodge. District Master Brock will be present.

IRON SHIP OF WAR.

On the 17th ult. [illegible] at the Admiralty [illegible] to the Navy on the [illegible] of Iron Ships of War. [illegible] Admiralty retained [illegible] naval architects delivered their [illegible] from the first Government [illegible] Iron-clad floating battery for that Government. He believed the idea of constructing such war vessels in Europe was not borrowed from America, but rather from the active mind of the French Emperor. The Warrior was unquestionably the best and truly British specimen of our iron ships. The Warrior as well as the Black Prince, was not completely iron-plated, and thus a portion of the vessel was exposed. The Defence and Resistance were built on the same principle, but they were not so much plated, and therefore their sea-going qualities were superior. The Hector and the Valiant were plated right round in the region of the guns, and were of immense strength. After describing the Minotaur, Agincourt, Northumberland, and other iron clad in progress, Mr. REED contended that the Minotaur and vessels of her class were too long, and he firmly believed that the same rate of speed could be obtained from a much shorter vessel. The attention of the Admiralty had been much devoted to this question; and he could assure them that no more iron ships for the Royal Navy would be laid down of such a length as 400 feet. Whilst one of these long vessel had a large portion of each extremity unprosed, a shorter vessel could be armour-plated from end to end, would sail as many knots per hour, and a great saving would be effected to the public. These matters of detail did not escape the attention of those who were now at the head of naval affairs. Naval construction is a peculiar art, resting upon abstruse breadths of science, involving principles and calculations which non-professional men in offices could not prudently interfere in an arbitrary manner; and hence the practice of the profession was to run in grooves, out of which it was most difficult to remove, even in times of the greatest emergency. In fact, it was only by a violent wrench—by giving sudden and unexpected scope to younger men and new ideas that the thing can be done at all, and when it has to be done it is attended by such pain and disappointment to many that it requires great nerve and courage to undertake it. That had recently been proved in his own case, some extremely penetrating and pure-minded people have discovered that his appointment to his present office was a "disgraceful job." He supposed those people did think it disgraceful for a board of admirality to appoint to an office involving much hard work and grappling with difficult and pressing questions, a man who has neither attained the age of sixty, nor taken part in elections in what are called "Government boroughs." (Hisses and cheers.) Mr. Reed then discussed the question of the comparative merits of ships built entirely of iron or with a backing of timber, and expressed an opinion in favor of the latter class. The late disaster to the Prince Consort proved in a remarkable manner the vast strength of the wooden hull of that ship. It was true that she shipped considerable water, but not to the extent of seven feet, as stated; for if she had shipped even five feet of water, every fire to her boiler must have been extinguished, whereas she kept up steam throughout. An officer, who was sent to Kingstown to inspect the vessel after she had come to grief, reported:—"From one end of the ship to the other, not one bolthead had been disturbed." It scarcely ever happened that an ordinary wooden ship, without an iron plate upon her, after encountering a channel storm, returned to port with such trifling damage as that done to the Prince Consort. He could not enter fully into the details of the improvements already effected, and now under consideration, with regard to the construction of iron ships, but one of the chief of these was the introduction of the "unsinkable principle," invented by Mr. Langley, of Deptford. The system consisted of dividing the iron hull into numerous water-tight and fireproof compartments, by means of the decks themselves, and preserving the integrity of these compartments by affording an entrance to them through the hatchways only. He could state with the utmost confidence that the Admiralty was now building a corvette, from which the swifter iron vessel could not hope to escape, and which would be armed in a most effective manner. The Admiralty had to contend with incessant hostile criticism, proceeding from persons free from responsibility.

PORK TRADE OF CINCINNATI.

The following tabular statement, taken from the Cincinnati Price Current of the 26th ult., will afford our readers a definite idea of the extent of the Pork trade in a single city of the West, not only for the present season, but for a number of years extending back as far as 1853. Receipts of hogs for the week ending Nov. 26, 1863:

By Railway	27,484
By River	3,663

BUFFALO & LAKE HURON RAIL'Y.

The semi-annual meeting of the shareholders of the Buffalo and Lake Huron Railway was held in London on the 13th ult. From the report submitted at the meeting, we learn that the gross earnings for the six months' ending on the 1st July last, were greater, by £2,870, than for any previous six months.

The following figures show the gross earnings of the road for the year 1862 and 1863:

	1863	1862
Gross Earnings	£52,941	£47,084
Expenses	33,714	36,176
	19,127	10,908
Renewal of Rails	3,356	3,311
	15,771	7,597

Deducting exceptional expenses, amount paid for interest, loss by American currency, &c., &c., it is found the expenditures exceed the receipts on the road by £3,600. In other words, the income from the road has not paid expenses by that amount.

RELATIONS OF THE UNITED STATES WITH CANADA.

—A correspondent of the Montreal Witness denounces in very sharp and decided terms the conduct of certain public men in Canada, in openly sympathizing with the Southern rebellion. He states that on one occasion a telegram was read in Parliament, announcing the defeat of the national forces, and that it drew members grouped [illegible] with loud applause. Hon. C. S. Cartier, late Premier, being among them. Many of these members have maintained a regular correspondence with leading rebels, have furnished them with arms and munitions of war from Canadian ports, and acted as the medium of communication between them and Europe. The Grand Trunk Railway gave Mr. Vallandigham an extra train on his visit to Montreal. In the face of all these demonstrations mainly led on by the Opposition party, the course of the Canadian Government has been moderate, friendly and conservative. We observe, by the way, that notice has already been given in Congress by Mr. Morrill of Vermont, of a Bill to abolish the Reciprocity Treaty with Canada.—New York Times.

A STRANGE STORY.—Sir James Graham in the last week of May, 1834, with great regret, left the Cabinet of Earl Grey, to whom he was much attached, and surrendered the high office of First Lord of the Admiralty, which was very agreeable to him, on account of the decision of the Cabinet to entertain the question of appropriation of Church property to secular purposes. In the first week of June, 1834, Mr. George Blamire, a native of Cumberland, differing from Sir James Graham as to politics, and very much opposed to him—a barrister of Lincoln's-inn—appears to have been so pleased with Sir James Graham for abandoning office and quitting his party upon principle, urged by a conscientious sense of duty, that he then made his will, leaving to Sir James Graham absolutely all his real and personal property, worth perhaps £40,000. Mr. George Blamire died in the summer of 1843 and his will was then proved, but Sir James Graham, having died in October, 1861, the legacy lapsed, and Mr. George Blamire's property will be divided among his next of kin.

TWENTY-SIXTH BIRTHDAY

OF THE

STAR PAPER OF AMERICA!

January 1, 1864!

The New York Mercury

FOR THE

COMING YEAR.

AFTER more than a quarter of a century of uninterrupted success, The New York Mercury—standing first on the muster-roll of the Literature Press in this country—points proudly to its past career as a guarantee of new triumphs in the future.

Heretofore, it has eclipsed all rivalry; but it proposes to make the coming year memorable, by eclipsing its own past history, and looming up before the world as the most marvellous specimen of a fascinating, brilliant, amusing, and comprehensive Literary Newspaper that has ever been published in either hemisphere.

THE GENIUS OF EUROPE

will be laid under contribution to give brilliancy to its columns, and side by side with original productions of the most popular romancists of the Old Word, will be placed the chef d'œuvres of the most eminent story-writers of the New.

MISS M. E. BRADDON,

Authoress of "Aurora Floyd," "Lady Audley's Secret," "John Marchmont's Legacy," etc., etc., who has suddenly risen, like

A STAR OF THE FIRST MAGNITUDE

in the literary horizon of Great Britain, has been specially engaged to supply The New York Mercury from time to time with the wonderful creations of her genius, at a cost which no other weekly in America could venture to incur.

☞ Among the multitude of distinguished writers and artists who have become familiar to the masses through the vast circulation of the STAR WEEKLY OF AMERICA, may be mentioned the following, all of whom are still upon its staff:

Dr. J. H. Robinson, Margaret Blount, Ned Buntline, Arthur M. Grainger, Isaac Gardner, Felix O. C. Darley, Miss M. E. Braddon, Cousin May Carleton, W. O. Eaton, George Martial, Julia S. Ingraham, Edward Willett, Mary Chef, George Albany.

Scores of other distinguished literati, under various nom de plume, contribute to its columns, while its pictorial illustrations are from the inimitable pencil of Felix O. C. Darley, Esq., the best draughtsman of the age.

The War, which has given the coup de grace to so many pretentious publications, and half destroyed those that still survive, had added thousands to the circulation of The New York Mercury.

Its heart-stirring short stories, its military historiettes, its matchless serial romances, its racy burlesques, its general wit and humor, its delicious gossip, its fairy tales for little folks, its rare poetry, its fresh and vigorous editorials the infinite variety of its contents, and the large amount of reading matter that it comprises, render it welcome everywhere, and to classes of society. Containing, as it does, of closely-printed matter, it may safely be pronounced the cheapest, as well as the best Literary Newspaper extant.

These favorite writers, Doctor J. H. Robinson, Cousin May Carleton, and Ned Buntline, are now preparing three stories for The New York Mercury. One of these productions will be commenced in the Opening Number of the New Year. The authors being aware of this fact, are engaged in an emulative contest for precedence, and the result will unquestionably be that the most attractive story ever penned by any of the three, will commence in the

of the great REPRESENTATIVE WEEKLY of the Western World.

The New York Weekly is sold by all newsmen and periodical dealers in America. To subscribers, it is regularly mailed every Saturday morning, for $4 a year; three copies for $8; six copies for $9; eight copies for $12, with an extra copy, free, to the getter-up of the club. MONEY EASILY MADE,

By either Gentlemen or Ladies.

I AM in possession of a beautiful French Art, which has been introduced in this Country only to a limited extent, and that in New York City. It is something which every person stands in great need of, consequently will be extensively patronized. Persons can make money with it at home or abroad. Thousands in France have made small fortunes at it, and are still doing so. I would state what it is, but persons purchasing the knowledge of it do not desire it made public. One Dollar sent to the undersigned will ensure the immediate return of a letter giving full information in the Art, and the requisite instructions to procure it. It is strictly genteel, and the best and only thing ever introduced which every person can make money at. NO LETTERS NOTICED, except those containing the required amount for instructions.

THE

PEOPLE'S PAPER!

SUBSCRIBE FOR THE

"PETERBOROUGH EXAMINER,"

Only $1 Per Year in Advance.

What family should be without Godey's Lady's Book? It costs $3.00 a year. We will, however, furnish both the EXAMINER and LADY'S BOOK for $3.75; that is: both for 25 cents less than what you pay for the Lady's Book alone. Or, to every subscriber paying in advance we will, for an extra 75 cents, furnish Madame Demorest's Mirror of Fashions, and Quarterly Journal du Grande Mode, each number of which contains large and magnificent Fashion Plates, splendid illustrations of all the fashionable and Paris novelties, for Ladies' and Children's Dress, useful information, and the full-size Patterns, cut ready for use, etc., etc. It should be remembered that each yearly subscriber to Mme. Demorest's Mirror of Fashions is entitled to the selection of 50 cents' worth of extra postage, or a copy of Mme. Demorest's System for cutting Children's Dresses, or for 50 cents more, the Ladies' System. That is, for 75 cents, we will give to every subscriber of the EXAMINER paying in advance, $1.50 worth. More than this, we will, likewise, pay the American postage, which is no small item. Those who have paid in advance can avail themselves of the same privilege. Or, if farmers prefer, they can, instead of the above journal, for the extra 75 cents, have Judd's celebrated American Agriculturist, which ought to be in the hands of every farmer. Names should be sent in at once.

To any one sending us 6 subscribers we will give Kinglake's Crimean War; 10 subscribers, Alcock's Tycoon Capital; 20 subscribers, Webster's Dictionary; 30 subscribers, Worcester's Largest Dictionary.

The party sending a club can, if he choose, select any thing worth of a similar value. The cash must in every instance accompany the order.

A Special Premium will be given to the party sending in the largest number of subscribers by the 1st of March. Names can be sent in all day then, and will be credited as received.

Which is the best paper to Advertise in? Why, the paper that everybody reads. Then

ADVERTISE IN THE "EXAMINER."

It will Pay to do so.

☞ THE EXAMINER is now acknowledged to be a First Class Family Paper. It contains Editorials on the leading topics of the day; digests of the latest Foreign and Home Intelligence; Local News; Market tables, &c.

COAL OIL LAMPS,

OF THE MOST IMPROVED KINDS,

COAL OIL, AMERICAN STONE WARE,

OF EVERY VARIETY,

And other articles too numerous to mention.

Well knowing [after an experience of twenty years in the trade] that the "nimble sixpence is better than the slow shilling," he will sell for small profits, having bought his stock with CASH he is confident that he can sell goods for ready pay cheaper than any other merchant in Peterboro'. As the goods offered for sale by the undersigned are all good for, he does not confine himself to selling them "cheap for cash only," he will cheerfully exchange them for all kinds of country produce, at cash prices. The subscriber does not attempt to enumerate all the articles which he offers for sale.

☞ Call and examine the goods and see how cheap the "yankee" can sell them.

Poetry.

EVERY DAY FACTS.

[4th verse of the "cheese verse."]

Oh, a bonnie wife his cares at the rook,
Is thinking of cares or of beef;
And the man with no chick on his back,
Has never a crash till to pay;
A lad with no cash in his fob,
Monday's brother himself how to spend it,
And a tradesman with never a slump,
Needs't waste all the profits to tend it.

A gal that ain't spanked by a beau,
Ain't afraid that the old folks will know it,
And that that a shiver don't know,
You never need fear that she'll blow it.
A man with his toes frozen off,
Will seldom be pinched with a corn,
And he that buys cow's milk in town,
Will get the same thing—in a horn.

A man that is doomed to be hanged,
Will think of suspense and a choker;
And who with his head cries the dun,
Will be bound for not using the poker.
A man who has nothing to eat,
An appetite will not be looking,
And a chap without shoes to his feet,
Needn't spend any dimes for the blacking.

Varieties.

Why does a clock always look bashful? Ans.—Because it keeps its hands before its face.

A Buffalo paper speaks of a man who "died without the aid of a physician," and adds, that such instance are very rare.

"I know every rock on that coast," cried an Irish pilot. At that moment the ship struck when he exclaimed," and that's one of them."

A "down east" Yankee has recently invented a rat exterminator consisting of a sort of powder mouf. The animal jerks his head of ot the third course!

A lawyer on his passage from Europe, observed a shark and asked a sailor what it was who replied," Well it's a shark, but us fellers calls 'em sea lawyers."

Housewifery.—An ancient art, said to have been fashionable among young girls and wives, but now entirely out of use, or practiced only by the lower orders.

Nothing can be more obliging than church bells. They proclaim a wedding whenever a peal is made to them and announce a funeral whenever they are tolled.

A Yankee pedler commending a scythe, said that one of the same kind of scythes was so sharp that they hung it on a tree in Kentucky, and the shadow cut a man's leg off.

"Josh, does the sun ever rise in the West? 'Never!' 'Never!' you don't say so! Well,you won't catch me emigrating West, if it is always night there. I've a cousin who is always boasting how pleasant it is to be in that region but it must be all moonshine.'

A clergyman, who was consoling a young widow on the death of her husband, spoke in a very serious tone, remarking, "He was one of the few—such a jewel of a christian. You cannot find his equal, you well know. To which the sobbing fair one replied, with an almost broken heart, "I'll bet I will."

"Won't you out open a penny for me, father?" said a little girl, when she came home from school one day. "Cut open a penny? What do you want me to do that for," asked her father. "Cause," said the little girl, "our teacher says that in every penny there are four farthings and I want to see them."

A young warrior was observed to be seized with a sudden quaking and shivering all over his body. Whereupon some one asked him what was the matter. "My flesh," replied he, "trembles at the forethought of these dangers whereunto my undaunted heart will carry me."

"Why, Mr. B." said a tall youth to a little person, who was in company with half a dozen huge men, "I protest you are so small I did not see you before."— "Very likely," replied the little gentleman;" I am like a sixpence among six copper cents, not readily perceived, but worth the whole of them."

Partingtonian Philosophy.—Mrs. Partington sometimes gets things mixed up but in regard to marriage her ideas are tolerable clear,and she is, we are happy to see, "sensible to the last." "If ever I'm married" said Ike looking up from the book he was reading, and kicking the stove door to energetically—"If ever I'm married—" "Don't speak of marriage, Isaac, till you are old enough to understand the bond that binds congenial souls. It is the first thing children think of now-a-days, and young boys in pinafores, and young girls with heads trimmed into spittoon curls,and full of love sick stories, are talking of marriage before they get into their teens. Think of such ones getting married! Yet there's Mr. Spaid, when heaven took his wife away, went right to a young lady's cemetry and got another, so more fit to be the head of a family than I am to be the Board of Mayor and Aldermen." She tapped the new box that her friend, the colonel, had given her with her eyes resting upon the gold heart in laid in the centre of the lid, as if hearts were trumps in her mind at that time, while Ike, without finishing his sentence, kept on with his reading accompanying himself with a pedal performance on the stove door, and a clatter upon the round of his chair with the handle of a fork in his hands.

Tom Marshall's Last.—The Cleveland Plaindealer of the 6th, tells the story of Hon. Thos. F. Marshall which it pronounces his "very last." From the fact that Mr. Marshall has been sojourning in this city for some time, we may claim it as "local matter," in a measure. The Plaindealer has it in this wise.

In coming to this city a few weeks since from Cincinnati, he stopped over in Delaware, a flourishing village, in the interior, for a day or two. Just before leaving there, he asked the agent to check his valise for Cleveland. The agent, a tall and verdant-looking young man, chalked "Cleveland" on the valise, and went away. The brilliant Kentuckian didn't exactly understand this way of checking, but a sudden thought struck him, and he started in pursuit of the agent. After a protracted search, Marshall found him.

"Look here," said Tom," I want that of chalk."

"What for?" asked the astonished agent.

"So that I can have something to show for my baggage in Cleveland," said Tom, with perfect gravity.

The verdant looking agent brushed his long soap locks from his eyes, closely surveyed Tom's face for a moment or two, and said, solemnly, "We gin'rally give a small piece of brass to holders of baggage, but I reckon 'taint necessary in your case.

There was just time to go across the street and return before the train started and the form of the tall Kentucky [illegible]

SOLDIERS in the ARMY!

AND OUR PEOPLE AT HOME,

Are now offered an opportunity by which they can obtain a

GOOD AND DURABLE TIME-PIECE,

At a very Low Figure.

Our Watches are warranted to keep time one year, and the buyer is allowed the privilege of examination before the payment is required.

Improved Duplex in full Ruby Actions.

A first-class Hunting Time-Piece of silver material, over which is electro-find plated 18 k. gold, most durably wrought, making the imitation so faultless that it cannot be detected from the solid material by the most experienced Judges; acids will not affect it. Lendon made movement. Improved Duplex in full Ruby Actions has sweep seconds, and is not to be excelled in general appearance. This decidedly the one of the best articles ever offered for traders and speculators. Engineers, emigrants and persons travelling will find them superior to any other; alteration of climate will not affect their accuracy. Price, packed in good shape and good running order, only $35, or case of 5 for $200.

Silver Double Time Hunting Levers,

Best quality silver cases, over which electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, similar to our improved Duplex, and superior adjusted movements with "stop," to be used in timing horses, ect.; has four ludzens for Washington and Greenwich time, sweep second, and all the improvements. All in all, taking its beautiful and faultless appearance and its superior movement into consideration, we regard it as decidedly the cheapest article of the kind in the market. Price, in good running order, $35, or case of 6 for $200.

☞ We ask no pay in advance, but will forward either of them to responsible parties, to any part of the loyal States, with bill payable to the express-man when the Good are delivered, giving the buyer the privilege of examination, and, if not satisfactory, the watch can be returned at our expense.

The express companies refuse making collections on soldiers, and other parties in the disloyal States, consequently all such orders must be accompanied by the cash to insure attention. We make a deduction on either Watch when the payment is forwarded in advance.

Money may be sent by express at our expense.

MANHOOD AND THE VIGOR OF YOUTH RESTORED

IN FOUR WEEKS,

By Dr. Sicotte's Essence of Life.

Dr. SICOTTE, (OF PARIS) after years of earnest solicitation, has at length acceded to the urgent request of the American public, and appointed an agent in Toronto for the sale of his valued and highly prized Essence of Life. This wonderful agent will restore Manhood to the most shattered constitutions, whether arising from excesses, the effects of climate, or natural causes. The time required to cure the most inveterate case is four weeks; and if used according to printed instructions, which are very simple, failure is impossible. This life-restoring remedy should be taken by all about to marry, as its effects are permanent. It is acknowledged by the medical press to be the greatest discovery ever made. Its developing powers are miraculous. Success in every case is as certain as that science overthrows ignorance.

Dr. Sicotte's Essence of Life is sold in cases, with full instructions for use, at $3, or four quantities in one for $9, and will be sent to any part, carefully packed, on receipt of remittance to his accredit agent.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK, For 1864.

GREAT LITERARY & PICTORIAL YEAR.

The Publisher of Godey's Lady's Book, thankful to that public which has enabled him to publish a Magazine for the last thirty-four years of a larger circulation than any in America, has made an arrangement with the most popular authoress in this country—

MARION HARLAND,

Author of "Alone," "Hidden Path," "Miriam," "Moss Side," and "Nemesis,"

Who will furnish Stories for the Lady's Book for 1864. This alone will place the Lady's Book in a literary point of view [illegible] any other Magazine. Our other favourite writers will all continue to furnish articles throughout the year.

The best Lady's Magazine in the world and the Cheapest.

THE LITERATURE

Is of that kind that can be read aloud in the family circle, and the clergy in [illegible] numbers are subscribers for the Book.

THE MUSIC

Is all original, and would cost 25 cents, (the price of the Book) in the music stores; but most of it is copyrighted, and cannot be obtained except in Godey.

OUR STEEL ENGRAVINGS.

All efforts to excel us in this have ceased, and we now stand alone in this department, giving as we do many more and infinitely better engravings than are published in any other work. Godey's immense double sheet Fashion-Plates, containing from five to seven full length colored Fashions on each plate—other Magazines give only two—are far ahead of any Fashions in Europe or America. The publication of these Plates cost $10,000 more than the Fashions of the old style, and nothing but our wonderfully large circulation enables us to give them. Other Magazines cannot afford it. We never spare money when the public can be benefited.

These Fashions may be relied on. Dresses may be made after them, and the wearer will not subject herself to ridicule, as she would be if she visited the large cities dressed after the style of the plates in some of our so-called Fashion Magazines.

OUR WOOD ENGRAVINGS,

Of which we give twice or three times as many as any other Magazine, are often mistaken for steel; they are so far superior to any others.

IMITATIONS.

Beware of them. Remember that the Lady's Book is the original publication and the cheapest. If you take Godey, you want no other Magazine. Everything that is useful or ornamental in a house will be found in Godey.

DRAWING LESSONS.

No other Magazine gives them, and we have given enough to fill several large volumes.

OUR RECEIPTS

Are such as can be found nowhere else. Cooking in all its varieties—Confectionary—the Nursery—the Toilet—the Laundry—the Kitchen Receipts upon all subjects are to be found in the pages of the Lady's Book. We originally started this department, and have peculiar facilities for making it most perfect. This department alone is worth the price of the book.

LADIES' WORK TABLE.

This department comprises engravings and descriptions of every article that a lady wears.

MODEL COTTAGES.

No other Magazine has this department.

Terms to Subscribers in the British Provinces:

One copy one year, $3; two copies one year, $5; three copies one year, $7.

Five copies one year, and an extra copy to the person sending the club, making six copies for $11.50.

Special Clubbing with other Magazines.

Godey's Lady's Book and Arthur's Magazine, one year, $4.

Godey and Harper, one year, $5.

Godey, Harper, and Arthur, one year, $7.

At these prices subscribers in the Provinces will have only the British postage to pay. Treasury notes and notes of all solvent banks taken at par.

Be careful and pay the postage on your letter.

Herrick's Sugar Coated Pills,

CHILDREN CRY FOR THEM!

This remarkable American remedy is carrying the world by storm. Over five million boxes are sold annually. Composed entirely of Flowers, Roots, Balsams and Extracts,—their effect on the human system is pleasant, searching, and unexceptionable, being directly on the blood, which is the source and feeder of the body, and all sorts of humors, from a pimple to their use is attended with the happiest effects. In all diseases of the stomach, one or two doses relieves always cures. In old standing cases of sickness, small doses are repeated frequently—no change in the system that should be noticed. No change in employment or diet is necessary. They never cause nausea, vomiting, pain, nothing harsh, cut, as do many other kinds. They are warranted to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded. They are sanctioned, endorsed, prescribed, and in all respects superior to any purgative pill in the world.

☞ The discovery of coating a pill with sugar commenced with Dr. Herrick. All others are counterfeits, and if used, will do harm, and disappointment. Herrick's pills are elegantly put up. 25 in a box, with a large variety of directions, and sell for 25 cents a box; 6 boxes for $1.

THE FOOTSTEPS OF DECAY.

[The following is a translation of an ancient Spanish poem, which, says the Edinburg Review, is surpassed by nothing with which we are acquainted in the Spanish language, except the "Ode of Luis de Leon."]

Oh! let the soul its slumbers break—
Arouse its senses and awake,
To see how sure
Life, in its glories, glides away,
And the stern footsteps of decay
Comes stealing on.

And while we view the rolling tide,
Down with our flowing spirits glide
Away so fast.
Let us the present hour employ,
And deem each future dream a joy,
Already past.

Let no vain hope deceive the mind
No happier let us hope to find
To-morrow than to-day
Our golden dreams of yore were bright,
Like them the present shall delight—
Like them decay.

Our lives like hasting streams must be,
That into one engulphing sea
Are doomed to fall—
The sea of death whose waves roll on
O'er king and kingdom, crown and throne
And swallow all.

Alike the river's lordly tide,
Alike the rivulets humbly glide
To that sad wave;
Death levels poverty and pride,
And rich and poor sleep side by side
Within the grave.

Our birth is but a starting place;
Life is the running of the race,
And death the goal;
There all our glittering toys are brought
That path alone, of all unsought
Is found of all.

See, then, how poor and little worth
Are all of those glittering toys of earth
That lure us here.
Dreams of a sleep that death must break,
Alas! before it bids us wake,
We disappear.

Long ere the damp of death can blight,
The cheeks pure glow of red and white
Has passed away.
Youth smiled, and all was heavenly fair—
Age came and laid his finger there,
And where are they?

Where is the strength that spurned decay,
The step that roved so light and gay,
The heart's blithe tone?
The strength is gone, the step is slow,
And joy grows wearisome and woe
When age comes on!

STORY OF EMILE ROQUE.

I.

It may be very bad taste in me, but I must confess to a strong love for many of those old French painters who flourished during the last century, and at whom it is now quite the fashion to sneer. I do not allude to the Poussins, of whom the best was more Roman than Frenchmen, and whose most striking pictures seem to me to wear no nationality of sentiment; there is nothing lively and mercurial in them; hardly any thing that is cheerful. But what a gayety there is in the Vanloos—all of them! What a lively prettiness in the little girl-faces of Grenze! what a charming coquetry in the sheep and shepherdesses of Watteau!

To be sure the critics tell us that his country swains and nymphs are far more arch and charming than ever any swains were in nature; and that his goats even browse, and listen, and look on, more coquettishly than ever live goats did; but what do I care for this?

Are they not well drawn? Are they not sweetly colored? Does not the gorgeousness of the very atmosphere invite the charming languor you see in his groups? Is it not like spending a summer Sunday, stretched on the grass at St. Cloud—gazing idly on Paris and the plain—to look on one of the painted pastorals of Watteau?

Are not his pictures French from corner to corner—beguilingly French—French to the very rosette that sets off the slipper of his shepherdess? If there are no such shepherdesses in nature, pray tell me, do you not wish there were—throngs of them, lying on the hillsides all about you, just as charming and as mischievous?

Watteau's brooks show no mud; why should the fact of his fountain nymphs be made for any thing but dancing? Watteau's sheep are the best behaved sheep in the world; then why should his country swains look red in the face, or weary with their watches? Why should they do any thing but sound a flageolet, or coquet with pretty shepherdesses who wear blue sashes, and rosettes in their shoes? In short, there is a marvellous ha ping about Watteau's pictures, whatever the critics may say of their untruth: if fictions, they are charming fictions, which, like all good fictions, woo you into a wish "It was true."

But I did not set out to write critics upon paintings; nobody reads them through when they are written. I have a story to tell. Poor Emile!—but I must begin at the beginning.

Like Watteau as I do, and loving to look for ten minutes together into the sweet girl-face of Greuze's "Broken Jug," I used to loiter when I was in Paris for hours together in those rooms of the Louvre where the more recent French paintings are distributed, through the south windows, even in winter. Going there on a passport days, I came to know, after a while, the faces of all the artists who busy themselves with copying those rollicking French masters of whom I have spoken. Nor could I fail to remark that the artists who chose those many rooms for their easels, and those many masters for their subjects, were for more cheerful and gay in aspect than the pinched and sour-looking people in the Long Gallery, who grubbed away at their Da Vincis, and their Sasso Ferratos.

Among those who were the joyous faces, and who courted the sunny atmosphere which hangs about Vanloo and Watteau, I had frequent occasion to remark a tall, athletic young fellow, eastern four-and-twenty, who seemed to take a special delight in drawing the shepherdesses and the well-behaved goats about which I was just now speaking.

I do not think that he was a great artist; I feel quite sure that he never imagined it himself; but he came to his work, and appeared his easel—rubbing his hands together the while—with a glee that made me sure he had fallen altogether into the spirit of that sunny nymph-world which Watteau has created.

I have said that I thought him no great artist; nor was he; yet there was something quite remarkable in his copies. He did not finish well; his coloring here no approach to the scrupulous mellowness of the originals; his fingers were frequently out of drawing; but he never failed to catch the expression of the face, and to intensify (if I may use the term) the joviality that belonged to them. He turned the courtly levity of Watteau into a kind of mad mirth. You could have sworn to the identity of the characters; but on the canvas of the copyist they had grown riotous.

What drew my attention the more was, what seemed to me the artist's thorough and joyful participation in the riot he made. After a rapid half dozen touches with his brush, he would withdraw a step or two from his easel, and gaze at his work with a hearty satisfaction that was most cheering, even to a looker-on. His look seemed to say, "There I have you, little nymphs; I have taken you out of the genteel society of Watteau, and put you on my own ground, where you may frisk as much as you please" And he would bent the measure of a light polka on his pallet.

I ought to say that this artist was a fine-looking fellow withal, and his handsome face, aglow with enthusiasm, drew away the attention of not a few lady visitors from the pretty Vanloos scattered around. I do not think he was ever disturbed by this; I do not think that he tweaked his mustache, or gave himself airs in consequence. Yet he saw it all; he saw everything and every body; his wore the same open, easy, companionable look which belongs to the frolicking swains of Watteau. His freedom of manner invited conversation, and on some of my frequent visits to the French gallery I was in the habit of passing a word or two with him myself.

"You seem," said I to him one day, "to admire Watteau very much?"

"Oui, Monsieur, vous avez raison: j'aime les choses riantes, moi."

"We have the same liking," said I.

"Ah vous aussi: je vous en felicite, Monsieur. Tenez," drawing me forward with the most naive manner in the world to look at a group he had just completed—"Regardez! n'est ce pas, que ces petites dames la rient aux Anges!

I chanced to have at that time an artist friend in Paris—De Courcy, a Provincial by birth, but one who had spent about half his life in the capital, and who knew by name nearly every copyist who made his appearance at either of the great galleries. He was himself busy just then at the Luxembourg; but I took him one day with me through the Louvre, and begged him to tell me who was the artist so enraptured with Watteau?

As I had conjectured, he knew, or professed to know, all about him. He sneered at his painting, as a matter of course: his manner was very sketchy; his trees stiff; no action in his fingers; but, after all, tolerably well—passablement bien—for an amateur.

He was a native of the South of France; his name, Emile Roque; he was possessed of an easy fortune, and was about to marry, rumor said, the daughter of a government officer of some distinction in the Department of France.

Was there any reason why my pleasant friend of the sunny picture should not be happy? Rumor gave to his promised bride a handsome dot. Watteau was always open to his pencil and to his humor. Had no his copies might be, he enjoyed them excessively. He had youth and health on his side; and might, for aught that appeared, extend his series of laughing nymphs and coquetish shepherdesses to the end of his life.

The thought of him, or of the cheery years which lay before him, came to my mind very often, as I went journeying shortly after, through the passes of the Alps. It comes to me now, as I sit by my crackling fireside in New England, with the wind howling through the pine-tree at the corner, and the snow lying high on the ground.

II.

I had left Paris in the month of May; I came back toward the end of August. It is a dull month for the capital; Parisians have not yet returned from Baden, or the Pyrenees, or Dieppe. True, the Boulevard is always gay; but it has its seasons of exciting gayety, and latter summer is by no means one of them. The shopmen complain of the dullness, and lounge idly at their doors; their only customers are passing strangers. Pretty suites of rooms are to be had at half the rates of autumn, or of opening spring. The bachelor can indulge without extravagance in apartments looking upon the Madeline. The troops of children whom you saw in the spring-time under the lee of the terrace wall in the "little Provence" of the Tuileries are all gone to St. Germain, or to Trouville. You see no more the tall caps of the Norman nurses, or the tight little figures of the Breton bonnes.

It is the season of vacation at the schools; and if you stroll by the Sorbonne, or the College of France, the streets have a deserted air, and the garden of the Luxembourg is filled only with invalids and strolling soldiers. The artists even, have mostly stolen away from their easels in the galleries, and are studying the live fish-women of Boulogne or the bare-ankled shepherdesses Auvergne.

I soon found my way to all the old haunts of the capital. I found it easy to revive my taste for the cuisine of the Rotonde, in the Palais Royal; and easy to listen and laugh at Scinville and Gonsout. I went, a few days after my return, to the strange charming colonade of the Louvre. The sun was hot at this season upon the wing of the palace where hang the pictures of Watteau; and the galleries were nearly deserted. In the salon where I had seen so often the beaming admirer of nymphs and shepherdesses, there was only a sharp-faced English woman, with bright corpulent on nose and cheeks, working hard at a Diana of Velon.

I strolled on carelessly to the next corner room, serving as antechamber to the French galleries, and which every visitor will remember for its great picture of the battle of Eylau. There are several paintings about the walls of this salon, which are in constant request by the copyists; I need hardly mention that favorite picture of Gerard, L'Amour et Psyche. There was a group about it now; and in the neighborhood of this group I saw, to my surprise, my old artist acquaintance of the Watteau nymphs. But a sad change had come over him since I saw him last. The gay humor that shone in his face on my spring visits to the gallery was gone. The openness of look that seemed to challenge regard, if not conversation, he had lost utterly. I was not surprised that he had deserted the smiling shepherdesses of Watteau.

There was a settled and determined gloom upon his face, which I was sure no painted sunshine could enliven. He was not busy with the enameled prettiness of Gerard; far from it. His easel was beside him, but his eyes was directed toward that fearful mele-dramatic painting—La Medusa of Gericault. It is a horrible shipwreck story: a raft is floating upon an ocean waste; dead bodies that may have been copied from the dissecting-halls, lie on it; a few survivors, emaciated, and with rigid limbs, cluster around the frail spar that serves as mast, and that sways with the weight of a tottered sail; one athletic figure rises above this dismal group, and with emaciated arm held to its highest reach, lifts a fluttering rag; his bloodshot eye, lighted with a last hope, strains over the waste of waters which seethe beyond him.

It was a picture from which I had always turned away with a shudder. It may have truth and force, but the truth is gross, and the force brutal. Yet upon this subject I found Emile Roque engaged with a fearful intensity. He had sketched only the principal figure of the dying group—the athlete who beckons madly, whose hope is on the waste. He had copied only a fragment of the raft—barely enough to give foothold to the figure; he had not even painted the sea, but had filled his little canvas with a cold, white monotone of color, like a dossed waste in winter.

I have already remarked the wonderful vitality which he gave to mirth in his frolicsome pastrols; the same power was apparent here; and he had intensified the despair of the wretched castaway, fluttering aloft his last rag of hope, to a degree that was painful to look upon.

I went near him but he were no longer the old tokens of ready fellowship. He plainly had no wish to recognise, or be recognized. He was intent only upon wreaking some bitter thought, or some blasted hope, in the face of the shipwrecked man. The despairing look, and the bloodshot eye, which he had given to his copy of the sea-away, haunted me for days. It made that kind of startling impression upon my mind which I was sure could never be forgotten.

I never think, even now, of that painting in the Louvre, with the cold north light gleaming on it, but the ghastly expression of the shipwrecked man—as Emile Roque had rendered it on his copy—starts to my mind like a phantom. I see the rag fluttering from the clenched, emaciated hand; I see the pallid, pinched flesh; I see the starting eyes, bearing resemblance, as it seemed to me afterward, and seems to me now, to those of the distracted artist.

There was a cloud over the man; I felt sure of that; I feared what might be the end of it. My eye ran over the daily journals, seeking in the list of suicides for the name of Emile Roque. I thought it would come to that. On every new visit to the Louvre I expected to find him gone. But he was there, assiduous as ever; toiling still upon the horrors of Gericault.

My acquaintance of the Luxembourg, De Courcy, who had given me all the information I possessed about the history and prospects of this artist, was out of the city; he would not return until late in autumn. I dropped a line into the Poste Restante to meet him on his return, as I was very shortly on the wing for Italy. I can recall perfectly the expression in my letter. After entreating him with one or two unimportant commissions, I said: "By-the-way, you remember the jolly-looking Emile Roque, who made such a frenzy out of his love for Watteau and his shepherdesses, and who was to come into possession of a pretty wife and a pretty dot?

"Is the dot forthcoming? Before you answer, go and look at him again—in the Louvre still; but he has deserted Watteau; he is studying and copying the horrors of La Medusa. It does not look like a betrothal or a honeymoon. If he were not an amateur, I should charge you to buy for me that terrible figure he is working up from the raft scene. The intensity he is putting in it is not Gericault's—my word for it, it is his own.

"When he is booked among the suicides (where your Parisian forms of madness seem to tend), send me the journal, and tell me what you can of the why."

In the galleries of Florence one forgets the French painters utterly, and rejoices in the forgetfulness. Among the Carracci and the Guidos what room is there for the fever-like Watteau? Even Greuze, on the Walk of the Pitti Palace, would be Greuze no longer. It is a picture life one leads in those old cities of art, growing day by day into companionship with the masters and the masters' subjects.

How can he cope with the sweet master of Michael Angelo! How he goes through Sunday's Dore-Hall, or hopes into a poetic sympathy with the marble flock of Niobe!

Who wants letters of introduction to the "nice people" of Florence, when he can chat with the Fornarina by the hour, and listen to Raphael's Papa Julio?

Yesterday—I used to say to myself—I spent an hour or two with old (forsaken flower and pretty Angelica Kaufman—nice people, both of them. To-morrow I will call on Titian, and lunch off a plate of Curio Dolci's. In such company one grows into a delightful "Middle-Age" feeling, in which the vanities of daily journals and hotel bills are forgotten.

In this mood of mind, when I was hesitating one day of mid-winter, whether I would use myself in a Claude Lorraine or between the Arno and the house, the valet of the inn—where I was staying, put a letter in my hand bearing a Paris post-mark.

"It must be from De Courcy," said I; and my fancy straightway conjured up an image of the dapper little man disporting among all the gayeties and the grandeurs of a Paris world; but I had never one thought of poor Emile Roque, until I caught sight of his name within the letter.

After acquitting himself of the sundry commissions left in his keeping, De Courcy says:

"You were half right and half wrong about the jolly artist of Watteau. His suicide is not in the journals but for all this it may be. I had no chance of aiding him either at his new game in the corner salon, for the bird had flown before my return. I heard though, very much of his strange copy of the crowning horror of Gericault. For would you have been the only one in the market as purchaser of his extravaganza. A droll story is told of an English visitor who was startled one day by, I dare say, the same qualities wich you discovered in the copy; but the Critos, with sense of your scruples, addressed himself, in the very best way he could, to the artist himself, requesting him to set a price upon his work.

"The old Emile Roque whom I had known—in fact, whom we had known together—would have met such a question with the gayest and most gallant refusal possible.

"But what did this bewitched admirer of Gericault do?

"He kept at his work—doggedly gloomily.

"The Englishman stubbornly renewed his inquiry—this time placing his hand upon the canvas, to aid his observations by the mush of pantomime.

"The painter (you remember his stalwart figure) brushed the stranger's hand aside, and, with a pantomimic look and great energy of expression (as if the poor Briton had been laying his hand on his very heart) said: "C'est a moi, Monsieur—a moi!" beating his hand on his breast the while.

"Poor Emile! The jovial times of Watteau's nymphs are, I fear, gone past forever.

"But I forget to tell you what I chiefly had in mind when I began this mention of him. Some say his love has craned him—some say no. The truth is, he is not to marry the Virginie C——, one time his affianced.

"There are objections. Rumor says they came from Monsieur C——, sous chef o the office of Finance, and rumor adds that the objections are insurmountable. What they are, Heaven only knows. Surely a daintier fellow never sued for favor; and as for scandal, Emile Roque was what you call, I belive, a Puritan." (I do not think it necessary to correct De Courcy's strange use of an English term.)

"The oddest thing of all I have got to tell you. This broken hope diverted Emile from Watteau to the corner salon of the Louvre; at least I infer as much, since the two events agree in time. It is evident, furthermore, that the poor fellow takes the matter bitterly at heart; and it is perfectly certain that all the objection rests with the father of the fiancee.

"So far, nothing strange; but notwithstanding this opposition on the part of Monsieur C——, it is known that Emile was in constant and familiar, nay, friendly communication with him up to the time of his disappearance from the capital, which occurred about the date of my return.

"Read me this riddle if you can! Is the rendering of the horrors of Gericault to restore Emile to favor? Or shall I, as you prophesied four months ago (ample time for such consummation!) still look for his enrollment among the suicides?"

With this letter in my hand (there were others in my heart), I gave up for that day the contention of Claude, and mused myself instead along the Arno. Beyond the houses which hang on the further bank of the river, I could see the windows of the Pitti Palace and the cypresses of the Boboli gardens, and above both the blue sky which arched over the tower Galileo upon the distant hills. I wished the distracted painter might have seen them on the sunny side of the houses, which were full of memories of Angelo and Cellini, to forget his troubles. If an unwilling father were all, there might be no suicide. Still, the expression in his copy of the castaway haunted me.

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 24TH, 1863.

MUNICIPAL.

The nomination for Mayor came off on Monday, the 21st inst. Comparatively but very few were present. Chas. Perry, Esq., the pro and incumbent, was proposed by Mr. Norman Stevenson and seconded by Mr. A. Williams. Captain Kennedy was proposed by Mr. T. Chamberlin and seconded by Mr. W. Corbridge. After a few words from each of the candidates, the crowd dispersed—each man to his own home—to ponder and discuss the merits and demerits of the respective candidates, till the day of election comes, and seals the fate of one or other of the two. So the rate-payers have two candidates before them. Their choice must, therefore, fall upon one of them. Which one, then? There is no use of saying that this and that one would have made a better Mayor. People must look and take things as they are. We think, however, that there can be but little doubt as regards Mr. Perry's election. We believe, whatever may be the individual opinions upon certain points, that his administration upon the whole, has given very general satisfaction to the rate-payers of the Town, who, we think, will only be consulting their own interests by electing him to the mayoralty for the ensuing year. It is the Council, however, that has the direction of the affairs of the Town, and, therefore, it is of the utmost importance that fit and proper persons be elected as Councillors. We think, indeed, that more attention should be given to the election of these than even of Mayor. Let, therefore, the tax-payers look around for good men and true, to be their Councillors. There are important matters to be attended to by the next Council which will not be attended to if the proper men are not be elected. Let such, then, be chosen.

UNION SCHOOL.

On Friday and Monday last, the public examination of this Institution came off. The various English departments were examined on Friday, and the Classical and French on Monday. The scholars are said, by the examiners, to have acquitted themselves in a very creditable manner, showing that both teachers and scholars had been busy during the term, now closing. The French department under Miss Kyle is said to have been very satisfactory. The Rev. M. Boyd and Mr. Burnham examined the higher classes in Greek and Latin, and expressed themselves highly pleased with the thorough manner in which the classes had been taught. Indeed, very few, perhaps, can be found their superiors as far as they have gone.

On the evening of Monday there was a public meeting in the large lecture room of the building, which was numerously attended—the room being densely crowded. Col. Haultain presided, and we observed on the platform some of the Trustees, Dr. Burnham, Revds. Messrs. Rogers, Carroll and Allen of Millbrook. Among the audience, His Honor Judge Bouchier, C. A. Weller, Esq., and Rev. Mr. Madden, and several other influential gentlemen. The meeting was opened by prayer by the Rev. Mr. Rogers.

Col. Haultain, in taking the chair, said that he was glad to see so many present. It was a proof of the deep interest taken in the cause of education.

Mr. Dunn remarked, he was sorry he could not furnish the names of those who distinguished themselves at the late examination, but said that they would be published in due time. He said this was the last time he would stand in the capacity of Principal or teacher. He was about to give up the profession, not that he despised it, or thought it ought to be despised, for the highest names of antiquity had been engaged in the profession, and, he might add, the highest and best of modern times. He remarked, the most capable men were fast giving it up. This was the result of the erroneous system of changing teachers, and the trifling remuneration men of the highest talents received for their labor; and, also, because the teacher sometimes only made the calling a stepping stone to some more remunerative and prominent profession. But he had contemplated for some time giving up the profession as soon as the platform could testify, and only waited for a favorable opportunity of carrying out his intentions. He spoke in high terms of respect of his fellow teachers, and especially of the honorable manner in which he had ever been treated by his pupils [since he had been among them; expressed himself as feeling a deep interest in the School, and would continue to do so—indeed, would use every means in his power of keeping up its usefulness.

Rev. Mr. Allen, in his usual free and happy style, complimented Peterborough upon the handsome building that had been erected for educational purposes. He spoke in complimentary terms of the School and the Principal; urged upon the boys the importance of improving their time—to strive not only for the high positions of earth, but for that knowledge which maketh wise to salvation; spoke favorably of the present system of education, considering it as the best in the world.

Rev. Mr. Carroll was very felicitous in his remarks. He chiefly spoke of the profound respect, esteem and christian love which he entertained now and always towards the Principal; he always considered him a very hard working and efficient teacher; said that if fault could be found (which he thought could not) it was making the scholars work hard. He also compared the present advantages with those of his boyhood, and considered that the Union School conferred advantages on the Town such as few institutions did.

Dr. Burnham next spoke. He referred to the want of sitting accommodation in the room; laid the blame on the Trustees; he was desirous that the people of the Town should be comfortable when they came to hear their children's reading and recitations, and hoped the Board would get no peace till they should provide seats enough for all who might come. He made some of the differentiations of the teacher's profession, as he had to do with so many varied characters of children, and views their children, of parents; said that a teacher to be successful must be a physiologist, as he had to study character so much, and deal with each varied individualities. He remarked that he never expected any teacher to get along without some fault-finding; indeed, he thought the teacher was not worth much who was not found fault with; but said he was often pained to find even Trustees bringing in petty charges for which there was often not the least foundation, thus only exhibiting weakness when there should be wisdom. He expressed his deep felt regret that Mr. Dunn was resigning, as he always considered him a very efficient Principal, a very hard worker, and most energetic teacher, and doubted their getting one so efficient in his place.

Rev. Mr. Boyd next spoke. He said he had been twenty-seven years a trustee, or in some way connected with the School in Peterborough, and in that time a great many of the examination papers came through his hands. He referred to the satisfactory manner in which the School had been conducted and the creditable manner in which the pupils has acquitted themselves; spoke in very flattering terms of the girls, as being very accurate, orderly and neat, and hoped they would continue so—and thus be fitted for occupying their true place in the future, and be the means of bestowing happiness, as he hoped they would also be happy.

Col. Haultain also bore testimony to the thorough manner in which the classes had been taught; agreed with Mr. Rogers concerning the girls' department. He expressed his regret at Mr. Dunn's resignation, as he could re-echo all that had been said concerning the Principal by the previous speakers.

Several essays were read by the boys and some recitations were delivered. The intervals were filled up with singing under the able management of Miss Kyle. Miss Kennedy accompanying on the melodeon; the whole was instructive and amusing. At the close, the pupils presented Mr. Dunn with three costly law volumes and a nice inkstand. An address was read by one of the pupils, which was replied to by the Principal extempore, as he had not seen the address before, and which will be found appended.

The whole was the spontaneous offering, we learn, of the pupils, and certainly shows the esteem in which Mr. Dunn was held by them. After singing "God save the Queen" Rev. Mr. Allen pronounced the benediction, when all dispersed apparently happy and pleased.

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen.

Once more we have arrived at the Christmas vacation. There are some present who were not here last year, but this slight difference is no cause for lament, as we can expect nothing less from the constant changes so perpetually, so systematically, and so beautifully taking place in this, our happy world. There is every reason to hope that we have during the past year made the most satisfactory progress in our studies; for with the kindest of teachers, whose patient and untiring efforts have ever been for our benefit and instruction, if we have not done well, the fault lies wholly within ourselves.

To you, our much esteemed Principal, we owe the deepest debt of gratitude. When we look back to the past we can see to our sorrow many occasions upon which, with youthful carelessness, we have erred and committed faults displeasing to you, where we might, with a little thought, have given pleasure rather than pain. We will never cease to admire your mild and christian principle of appealing to reason instead of resorting to force, when you would correct our shortcomings. We have found in you a kind friend, ever ready to assist us in any difficulty, and a councillor upon whose prudent advice we might always place the firmest reliance. As a token of our regard, we hope you will accept this small offering and not despise a gift coming from so many young and grateful hearts, trusting that you may be led thereby in after years to think sometimes of those who were your pupils in the Peterboro Grammar School but we all unite in wishing you a prosperous and happy future, and that success may crown all your labors.

Another of our teachers is about to leave us; she also will be deeply regretted by all who have had the pleasure of receiving her kind and gentle instructions. May her future be blessed with all the happiness which true virtue and modesty deserve. And to you, kind friends, we would say, farewell; probably we shall never again be all assembled in this room, but may we each live such a life as will ensure our final meeting in the promised land, where partings and sorrows are unknown.

Signed by the committee.

MINISTERIAL.

There was a splendid Ministerial Demonstration at Ottawa on the evening of Tuesday last. Nearly 250 tickets at $5 each were sold, and about as many persons present; a great turn out of the leading merchants, barristers, clergy and lumberers of Ottawa and its neighbourhood. The guests were Mr. Attorney General Sanfield Macdonald, Mr. Atty. General Dorion, Mr. McDougall, Mr. Huntingdon, Mr. Letellier, and Mr. Howland. Among those present were the Roman Catholic Bishop, Mr. McD. Dawson, Ex-M.P.P., Mr. Perrault. M.P.P., Hon. Mr. Shead, M.L.C., Mr. Patrick, Mr. Fellowes, Mr. O. S. Gildersleeve, Kingston; Mr. Wilson, Warden of Prescott and Russell; Mr. N. G. Robinson, Warden of Clarence; Mr. T. McGuay, Warden of Ottawa; Mr. T. Keeler, Warden of Leeds and Grenville; Mr. G. W. Stacey, Mr. A. Yielding, Ex-M.P.P. for the city of Ottawa; Mr. Champagne, President of the Jean Baptiste Society; Dr. Grant, President of St. Andrew's Society; Mr. H. Merrill, Mr. Alex Workman, Ex-Mayor; Mr. Geo. Hembach, Mr. Allen Gilmour, and a great portion of the city Council.

The dinner may be considered as a complete success, and must do much to extend ministerial influence in that section of the country.

THE SKATING RINK.

A number of the subscribers enjoyed the pleasure of skating on Monday last, on which day the Rink was in skating condition. The committee intend if possible having good skating to-morrow, and members would do well to secure their badges at once, without which the rules of the Club forbid them the use of the Rink. The Treasurer will be on the Rink all day to-morrow to deliver badges, which are $1 each to all over fifteen, and fifty cents for all under that age.

INTELLECTUAL IMPROVIDENT.

It may be said, speaking abstractly, that popular amusements anywhere lived. They excite general interest so long only as they are novel—and the Temperance movement for the elevation of the race. The "Sons of Temperance," an Order formed for the suppression of the most destructive vice of drunkenness, is the offspring of a popular favor. While the thing was new crowds repaired to its shelter. A few years have rolled away, and though the Society has still an existence in Peterborough, it is very sadly reduced; indeed a few weeks since its vitality seemed well nigh spent. It is difficult to comprehend the reason of this. Did drunkenness no longer abound? or had liquor drinking ceased to exert the most pernicious of all social influences? the problem would be easy of solution. But we know that no such change has taken place. That, on the contrary, the evil has grown much more universal, and as the traffic has increased, adulteration in every conceivable form has been studied and practised, thereby making greater than ever the baneful effect upon the parts physical, mental and moral. The friends of humanity are at the present time more loudly called upon to be up and doing than they have been at any period of our past history. The Peterborough Division, as we have hinted, has suffered sigh unto death. The apathy shown to the cause by those who lead in the warfare for the truth strictly caused this deplorable prostration. Our ministers of the Gospel for the most part have stood aloof; and many of our—to all appearances—most devoted Christians seem to treat the cause with perfect indifference. Closely allied as it is with the cause of Christ, it looks strange (to say nothing of inconsistency) that the friend of the one is not the warm, zealous friend of the other. To the Christian, the cause may well appeal. If it cannot find friends among the followers of Him who went about doing good, how can it hope to find them elsewhere. Hitherto the Society has been composed, for the most part, of persons in the middle and lower walks of life. Here and there a Dr. Short has formed an exception. The tradesman, journeymen and apprentice have principally supported it. These form a firm and excellent foundation—but such material when left alone and unaided soon exhausts itself. To make Division meetings interesting and inviting, they require to be patronised by those whose occupations and tastes lead more immediately to the pursuit of the various branches of scientific and literary knowledge. An effort is, we are happy to say, being made by the Peterborough Division to enlist the services of some of this class of persons—a noble effort in the right direction. The Division now combines with in it many promising young men, supports semi-monthly essays upon subjects calculated to improve the mind. It has also a manuscript magazine, and the brethren occasionally engage in pleasant and profitable debate. By this means an admirable school of instruction is presented to the aspirant after knowledge (which every one should be) whose daily duties do not trench too much upon the hours of evening. Standing upon the bright ground work of total abstinence he can wander with the brethren during a social evening into various mines of knowledge, and thus pleasantly acquire much valuable information. The Division therefore presents great attractions to the young men of Peterborough, and as to increase in numerical strength there is every reason to believe it will present still greater. We believe it is contemplated by the Division, as soon as circumstances will permit, to engage the services of celebrated lecturers on popular subjects, after the manner of the Ontario Literary Society of Toronto, and, also to form a circulating library. These are laudable undertakings, and affording, as they do, advantages of priceless value, should be warmly appreciated. We would, therefore, suggest to the ministers and other christian men of the Town the propriety of lending the good work their aid; and we would recommend all our young men to become Sons of Temperance, and, with the brotherhood, strive to pursue the ways of wisdom, whose paths are those of pleasantness and peace. And, finally, we would counsel the brethren not to lose sight of the great object of their Society: the overthrow of intemperance;—and remember, above all things, the entire dependence of human efforts upon Divine aid.

The American Debt.—An American paper makes a curious calculation, to the effect that the estimated value of all the property of the United States, real and personal, is about thirty thousand millions of dollars, and that the war debt will, at the end of 1864, amount to four thousand millions, or about one-seventh of the whole. This will not, of course, represent the entire expenditure, there being much destruction of private property besides, but it is a fearful proportion. The seventh acre, seventh cow, seventh dollar, &c., of every man's property will be clean gone! But the remarkable part of the calculation is that the whole debt of the United States will, in the event anticipated, just amount to the valuation of the slaves some three or four years ago. The slave-holders asked their Northen opponents:—Are you prepared to pay us four thousand millions, which is the market value of our slaves? Well, the North will soon have paid the price, and a great deal of her best blood besides. Will she obtain the equivalent?

OPPOSITION FEED.

The "loyal" Opposition, as they like to style themselves, had a great feed at Toronto last week. There were present quite a number of Opposition notabilities—among whom may be mentioned the Hons. John A. Macdonald, Cartier, Galt, Cayley, Cauchon, and Messrs. Buchanan, Cowan, &c. Theoldmen, it is said, was got up mainly by G. E. Gowan, and was only a dollar. People generally like cheap dinners and good fun, and therefore 200 or 300 met to have a regular jollification. We believe they had a good time; whether the Committee will have a good time or not footing the bill, which we opinionate will be no small one, is quite another thing. The "great guns" made long speeches, glorifying themselves and their doings and pitching into the Government in a manner and to a degree that must have been edifying to the faithful. The political result of the meeting may be estimated at nil. One remarkable fact to be noticed is that hardly a mercantile man of note was present from the Toronto community. To those interested we may say that our Member had the distinguished honor of occupying a very prominent seat on the right of the Chairman.

PRESIDENT DAVIS' MESSAGE.

President Davis sent his Message to the Confederate Congress on the 7th inst. He is very despondent over the losses of the strongholds of Vicksburg, Port Hudson and many other points. He says these losses are no improvement in our relations with foreign countries since his message last January. On the contrary, there is great divergence in the conduct of European nations, assuming a character positively unfriendly. He says: "The marked partiality of Great Britain in favor of our enemies is strongly evinced in their discussions regarding the blockade, as well as in their marked difference of conduct on the subject of the purchase of supplies by the two belligerents. This difference has been conspicuous since the commencement of the war." Davis, in his message, dwells upon the Confederate financial difficulties. It says that the public finances demand the strictest and most earnest attention. A prompt and efficacious remedy for the present condition of the currency is necessary to a successful performance of the government. He recommends taxation instead of further sales of bonds or issues of treasury notes, adding that the holders of the currency now outstanding can only be protected by substituting for it some other security. The currency must be promptly reduced to prevent the present inflated prices, reaction reaching rates more extravagant. He calls upon the people to come to the rescue of their country. He recommends putting an end to the substitute business, and a modification of the exemption law, so that armies in the field may be largely increased as rapidly as possible. He regrets the suspension of the exchange of prisoners, and that communication with trans-Mississippi is so obstructed. He concludes as follows: "The enemy refuses propose for the only peace possible between us. The only hope for peace now is in vigor of our resistance."

Reported Death of Lord Elgin.

It is with much regret that we announce the reported death of Lord Elgin. When mail left Calcutta on the 14th ult. he was very ill and a late number of the Times announced his death; but the announcement is believed by many to be premature. We sincerely hope it may turn out so. No public man of Britain has earned for himself a more honorable name for honor, uprightness and dignity of character and statesmanlike skill during the last fifteen year than Lord Elgin. He is now, we believe, acknowledged to have been the best Governor that Canada has ever had. His career, likewise has been one of marked success. In his present, we say present for we are hopeful that the report of his death may be incorrect] Government, by his amiability of manner, public spiritedness and broad comprehensive policy, he has gained the esteem and good will of all classes, and established a reputation that will be lasting. His death in the vigor of his manhood and the zenith of his usefulness, would indeed be a national misfortune.

[Since writing the above, which should have appeared in our last, we fear the report of Lord Elgin's death is only too true. His successor has already been appointed.]

Christmas and New Years Gifts.

Cox & Davidson have laid in an ample supply of juvenile and other books in various styles of binding. Toy Books, Games, Puzzles, &c., very suitable for the coming gift-bestowing season. The excellent A. L. O. E. series of juvenile books and others published by Nelson & Sons of Edinburg, combining as they do much instruction with amusement, and being so neatly and cheaply got up, can't be surpassed for the purpose they are intended. The editions of the English Poets, and a host of others elegantly bound in Morocco and beautifully illustrated, got up by the leading publishing houses of London and Edinburg, together with a good collection of first class works, admirably suited for presents, Cox & Davidson have been largely supplied, and their stock is well worthy the attention of the book buying public in view of the approaching "merrie Christmas and happy New Year" times. See advertisement.

LAKEFIELD ANGLICAN CHURCH.

The Ladies of Lakefield propose holding a Bazaar, in the course of the ensuing Summer, to aid in securing a Fund adequate either to the erection of a new Church in their village, or to the enlargement of the present Building. The sum required to carry out the plans, furnished gratuitously by Kivas Tully Esq., is $2000.

Should their friends and neighbours in Peterboro and elsewhere feel disposed to assist them in their undertaking such assistance will be thankfully accepted and acknowledged.

Contributions will be received by any Members of the Congregation at Lakefield, and at Peterboro by Mrs. Clementi.—Communicated.

The Examination of Ashburnham school takes place to-day:—Parents and others interested are invited to attend.

We invite the attention of Masons to advertisement in another column.

THE WAR.

During this war at least one hundred thousand men have been killed, four hundred thousand have been disabled for life; two and a half million have been subjected to death, and to sickness, worse than wounds; in the armies of both sides. The amount of property destroyed during the war may be roughly estimated at five hundred millions of dollars. The injury inflicted upon Federal commerce and carrying trade may be roughly estimated at five hundred millions of dollars. This is rather under than over the mark; for the rebel Maffit cruiser alone has destroyed eleven millions of dollars worth of ships and cargoes, and Semmes has certainly destroyed much more. The war debt of the North and South amounts to about five thousand millions of dollars. Estimating the whole population in the United States in 1860 at twenty-six millions—and this is not a few hundreds of the official figures—it follows that the war has been instrumental in causing the death of one man out of every two hundred and sixty people, and the crippling or otherwise disabling of one man out of every fifty-two people. Also, that it has destroyed the destruction of property valued at a hundred millions of dollars and an expenditure of about five thousand millions.—N. Y. Herald.

Is it or is it Not to Be.—We say it is and must be considered the most wonderful medicine ever discovered for the radical cure of all rheumatic complaints, coughs, colds, sprains, bruises &c. We speak of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer;" it not only removes all pain instantly, but effects permanent cures. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

How do they do it?—How very rich and pompous people enjoy themselves, we know not; but if you wish to enjoy relief from a cold, cough, sore throat or shortness of breath, try Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers. 25 cents per box. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

The British American Magazine has come to hand, as richly freighted with good things as ever. We are glad to hear that the publishers are meeting with encouragement—but hardly as great, we fear, as they ought. We think every Canadian should take it. Try it for 1864.

The Extreme North-East of North America.

At a recent meeting of the Chicago Academy of Sciences, Dr. Kennicott gave some interesting particulars of a large tract of land called the Barren Ground, in the occupation of the Hudson Bay Company, being the extreme northeast portion of North America, east of Hudson Bay, within the isothermal line, whither he had been under the auspice, of the Academy and other learned societies to make collections and preservations in natural history. The speaker described the Barren Land as of vast extent, covering thousands of square miles which had never yet been trodden by the foot of the white man, and probably was unknown to the Indian. Nothing but lichens and mosses grow on this vast territory, and the animals and flora which are found on it are very marked and peculiar. He said that the immense tract of land bore about the same relation to the prairie as the prairie bears to the wooded country. With very few exceptions there was nothing to be seen but the lowest kind of flora. Being within the isothermal line, the temperature was not governed by the parallels of latitude. His visit there was in the winter, and he had felt the weather quite warm. The speaker spoke of the migration of birds northward, across the tract during the spring. In high wind, when they flew low, he had shot several of them; and found upon examination of the seeds they had eaten, that they were such as could have come only from the State of California or the neighborhood of Oregon. He stated that he had observed several specimens of granite and very fine copper, the latter so pure that the Indians had no difficulty in making it into spear heads; and he had lit his pipe at fire caused by the spontaneous combustion of a peculiar kind of coal which had been burning for thousands of years. The artificial heat produced by these fires was very considerable, and where the heat existed, quite a peculiar odour of plants was produced. The country abounded with lakes, but the geographical description of them, which had been generally furnished by the Indians, could not be relied upon. The lecturer spoke of the aquatic habits of the Esquimaux to be found on the Copper River, and made some interesting allusions to the magnetic pole and the discoveries of Sir John Ross and his nephew in connection therewith. In reply to Professor Andrews, the lecturer said that he had not observed any description of fungi growing on the Barren Ground. The color of the lichens and moss was from a grayish white to a dull brown. He had seen trees thirty feet high growing on the rock with not more than a peck of earth for their roots. They offered very little resistance to the wind, and were frequently blown down. The Indians made their bows from the roots. He spoke at length upon the indigenous animals to be found on the Barren Ground, and their peculiarities, mentioning the musk ox, the Barren Ground rein deer, the Barren Ground bear and the polar bear. He also referred to the snowbirds, the redhead duck, and white owls, which were to be seen in great quantities, and spoke of the black birch and an evergreen fir as the only description of trees which he had seen.

The Age of Chivalry Revived.—The Hon. Gerrit Smith, one of the best known abroad of American public men, is now in our city. Having heard that his old friend and companion in many a well fought battle in behalf of the slave, Mr. Giddings, was to be made the subject of a criminal prosecution in Canada, on the 15th Dec., he [illegible] to stand by him in his trial with such moral support and comfort as a friend could give. Mr. Smith is one of the wealthiest men in New York, and liberal in proportion, while the means of Mr Giddings, like those of most public servants, have not at any time been very affluent, and we surmise that Mr. Smith's visit had as its object material aid, if required; but he finds that the prosecution is only a civil affair, and that Mr. Giddings is at present with his family in Ohio. Some gentlemen who are familiar with Mr. Smith's high reputation as an orator and philanthropist, have, we understand, asked him to deliver a public lecture respecting the [illegible] in the United States; of course, however, should the suggestion be carried out, notice will be given.—Montreal Witness.

A Kind Offer.—His Excellency the Lieutenant Governor of New Brunswick has volunteered to plant several of the streets in Fredericton with trees, free them in and fix them up to good shape at his own expense. The Council had the matter under discussion at its last meeting. The remarks of several of the members of the Council upon the subject exhibited a degree of ignorance, and a want of common sense, amazing that could hardly be displayed by any other body in the Province. The Council declined to accept the offer because the Governor had not paid his taxes, although the question of the liability of the Governor to be taxed by the Corporation of Fredericton is now by the consent of both parties before a legal tribunal.—Globe.

THE CHAMBER OF DEATH.

Perhaps no public man has had the courage to send to the Chamber of Death, as it is called in the London Times Office, and ask the editor to let him have a look at his "Life." Sometimes, however, these "Lives" appear before the breath is out of the body, as recently observed in the case of Lord Clyde. The Times takes great care about these matters. Some years ago a report was brought to the office at 11 o'clock at night that Lord John Russell was dead. Mr. Walter, who goes to the office much more frequently than is supposed, happened to be there. A consultation immediately took place with writers and editors, and a gentleman of tact and experience was sent off in the middle of the night to Lord John's residence, Chesham place, to inquire into the truth or falsehood of the report. He soon discovered that it arose out of exaggerated reports of a slight indisposition, which had been magnified into the death of the noble lord; but, short as was his absence from the office, in the interim single means had been taken to meet the emergency—the fatal casket had been opened, the record of a life which would form in itself no unimportant chapter in the history of the country, displayed, and an army of biographers, editors and printers, were prepared to raise the ghost of the departed nobleman, and fix the picture in its frame before the morning light had dawned upon the sleepers of London. When the messenger returned, and it was found that the intelligence was false, the memoir was recommenced to its resting place in the casket, the Chamber of Death closed, the paragraph columns replaced, and the world was informed that, the Times was rejoiced to be able to state that the illness of so distinguished a nobleman was wholly without foundation.

NEW IMPLEMENT OF WAR.

Chloride of Nitrogen will it is said, soon be utilized as an implement of war. Its employment would seem likely to put an end to all war. Mr. Isham Baggs, an English chemist, in announcing his discovery, proposes to carry up his composition in balloons, and drop it from the air in the midst of armies and fortresses. "The very mention of this compound," he says, "as a proposed element in modern warfare, may possibly provoke a smile among chemists who know that the most accomplished of their number would scarcely dare to experiment with it larger than a grain of mustard seed, and even then only at a respectful distance and under guard at the moment of its detonation. And yet not one of these chemists will be bold enough to deny that with two or three chemically clean carboys of this terrible compound present in a city or fortress, however strong, the slightest cutting of phosphorus, or a single drop of olive oil coming in contact with it would in one instant decide the fate of the place and the inhabitants." Mr. Bagge then proceeds to affirm that he has discovered a method of overcoming the contingent difficulties, and that he is able to manufacture this deadly material with perfect safety, and in any required quantity, and that it can be safely conveyed to its destination.

Authorized Explanation of the Bible.—The following important announcement appears in the London Guardian:—"We are happy to see that the objections brought against certain portions of the Bible are about to be met by leading theologians of the Church of England in a very practical way. If a false and unfair system of interpretation has been applied to the text of the Scripture, the best way of confuting it is to apply a true and legitimate one. The honor of originating the plan is due to the Speaker of the House of Commons, who consulted several of the bishops on the subject, and the Archbishop of York, at his instance, undertook to organize a plan for producing a commentary which should 'put the reader in full possession of whatever information may be requisite to enable him to understand the Word of God, and supply him with satisfactory answers to objections resting upon misrepresentations of its contents.' The plan has received the sanction of the Primate. A committee, consisting of the Archbishop of York, the Bishops of London, Lichfield, Llandaff, Gloucester and Bristol, Lord Lyttleton, the Speaker, Mr. Walpole, Drs. Jacobson and Jeremie, takes the general supervision of the work. The Rev. F. C. Cook, preacher at Lincoln's-inn, will be the general editor, and will advise with the Archbishop of York and the Regius Professors or Divinity at Oxford and Cambridge upon any questions which may arise. This really promises to be a work second only in importance to the LXX or the English version made by order of King James. Perhaps it will be quoted as 'the XXX.' The names of the editors and contributors, while they ensure orthodoxy, gives promise that the commentary that put forth almost with the sanction of the Church of England as a body will not be the utterance of any narrow school or section of it."

The Reciprocity Treaty.—Among the subjects which will doubtless receive the early attention of the new House of Representatives, is the Reciprocity Treaty with Canada. A joint resolution will probably be passed, directing the President to give notice to the British Government that this treaty must terminate at the earliest possible moment, viz.: ten years from the 11th of September, 1854. It is proposed, however, to introduce a resolution authorizing the President to appoint three commissioners to confer with the same number of British commissioners, and substitute for the present treaty a new one, based upon more perfect principles of reciprocity, and protecting the agricultural interests of the United States, which now suffer by the free trade allowed. There is a large manufacturing interest in the North-west which should also be protected, in case a new treaty is negotiated—the manufacture of flour. Between the Canadian competition, the enormous winter rates of freight, the difficulty of speedy shipments, and the lack of capacity in the different outlets for our exports, the manufacture of flour in the Northwest has become a losing business. There are other features of the present Reciprocity Treaty which will need overhauling and amending. Ten years of practical experience have furnished the statesmen of both countries with the data for framing a juster and wiser treaty. We trust that our North-western members will early inform themselves upon this matter of such vast practical importance, and see to it that the interests of the people of their section shall not be neglected.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Love and Death.—Yesterday morning, a woman named Ann Purcell, was found frozen to death near the stone mill, on the west side of the river. Clasped to her breast was a child about six years old, and it was the little girl's cries that attracted the attention of a passer by. When discovered, the child's dress was fastened to its mother's, and her hands were so benumbed with cold that she could not extricate herself. The child was soon cared for, and the lifeless body of the mother removed to Dunlop's Tavern. Dr. Bardett, Coroner, held an inquest, and from the evidence, it appeared that the woman had come from Kingston about three weeks ago, where her husband was sick in the hospital, and that she was a common vagrant. A verdict of death from disipation was returned. The little girl has been kindly cared for by the grantee. Deceased has brothers and sisters near Kingston, who have been made acquainted with the facts. The widow of her husband is Edward Purcell, and he is not known whether he is dead or alive.—Belleville Intelligencer.

[ADVERTISEMENT.]

Mr. Editor,—Allow me, through the columns of your paper, to correct the gross misrepresentations of my opponents, in reference to what fell from His Honor when asked to refer the case to arbitration. His Honor said that my cases were attended with so much acerbity that it was extremely disagreeable for him to dispose of them. But I have the best authority for stating that His Honor did not say, nor wish to leave the impression on the public that my cases were dishonorable, or that I was frequently in Court, but that they were so warmly contested that it worked up the feelings of my opponents, so much so that he would willingly refer them if applied for at the proper stage of the trial; and I think it is not unreasonable to expect some harshness while defending so preposterous a suit as that brought by my opponents; and not having at that time the proper document to prove my statements, I could not patiently endure the injustice which they were about to inflict; but, fortunately, I have since obtained a paper which is proof of my statement, and shows the utter falsehoods of my opponents. I have also the satisfaction of stating that during the ten years I have done business in this town, I have not had a bill of mine disputed that I put in Court for collection, except the one above referred to, and by nobody but J. & T. Douglas. Now, Mr. Editor, in conclusion, I would entreat of the "men of mushrooms," who have such large outstanding accounts, not to again attempt to degrade Society by false and treacherous statements about their neighbor—and if they want to expose any of my business at Court, they will please resort to the noble means of the press, whereby a man can have an opportunity of saying a few words in his own defence.

I do, Mr. Editor, with all due respect to my fellow-townsmen, respectfully ask you to give the above one insertion in your valuable journal, for the justice of myself and friends.

I am yours truly,
GEORGE TANNER.

BY-LAW No.

A BY-LAW to authorize the Warden to issue Debentures on the credit of the Non-Resident Land Fund.

WHEREAS, it is necessary to raise funds for the erection of a new Jail and it is deemed advisable to raise the same by the issue of Debentures upon the credit of the Non-Resident Land Fund.

The corporation of the County of Peterboro' hereby enacts:—That the Warden of this County be and he is hereby authorized to issue Fifteen Debentures, for the sum of One Thousand Dollars each; two of which shall be made payable on the first day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five; and two on the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six; and two on the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven; and two on the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight; and two on the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine; and two on the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy; and two on the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one; and two on the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two; and one on the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three; the said Debentures to bear interest at the rate of six per cent per annum, to be paid half-yearly on the first day of July and the first day of January in each and every year.

And be it enacted, that the aforesaid Debentures, and interest on such Debentures as aforesaid, shall be payable at the office of the Treasurer of the County at Peterborough.

County Council Chamber, Peterborough, 21st November, 1863.

The above is a true copy of a proposed By-Law to be taken into consideration by the Municipality of the County of Peterborough, at the County Council Chamber, in the Town of Peterborough, on TUESDAY, the 22nd day of MARCH, 1864, at the hour of twelve o'clock, noon, at which time and place the members of the Council are hereby required to attend for the purpose aforesaid.

SUBSCRIBE FOR THE

"PETERBOROUGH EXAMINER,"

Only $1 Per Year in Advance.

What family should be without Godey's Lady's Book? It costs $3.00 a year. We will, however, furnish both the EXAMINER and LADY'S BOOK for $3.75! that is: both for 25 cents less than what you pay for the LADY'S BOOK alone. Or, to every subscriber paying in advance we will, for an extra 75 cents, furnish Madame Demorest's Mirror of Fashions, and Quarterly Journal du Grande Mode, each number of which contains large and magnificent Fashion Plates, splendid illustrations of all the fashionable and Paris novelties, for Ladies' and Children's Dress, useful information, and the four life-size Patterns, cut ready for use, etc., etc. It should be remembered that each yearly subscriber to Mme. Demorest's Mirror of Fashions is entitled to the selection of 50 cents' worth of extra patterns, or a copy of Mme. Demorest's System for cutting Children's Dresses, or for 50 cents more, the Ladies' System. That is, for 75 cents, we will give to every subscriber of the EXAMINER paying in advance, $1.50 worth. More than this, we will likewise pay the American postage, which is no small item. Those who have paid in advance are entitled to the same privilege. Or, if farmers prefer, they can, instead of the above Journal, for the extra 75 cents, have Judd's celebrated American Agriculturist, which ought to be in the hands of every farmer. Names should be sent in at once.

To any one sending us 6 subscribers we will give Kinglake's Crimean War; 10 subscribers, Alcock's Tycoon Capital; 20 subscribers, Webster's Dictionary; 30 subscribers, Worcester's Largest Dictionary.

The party sending a club can, if he chooses, select any other work of a similar value. The cash must in every instance accompany the order.

A Special Premium will be given to the party sending in the largest number of subscribers by the 1st of March. Names can be sent in at any time, and will be credited as received.

TWENTY-SIXTH BIRTHDAY

OF THE

STAR PAPER OF AMERICA!

January 1, 1864.

The New York Mercury

FOR THE

COMING YEAR.

AFTER more than a quarter of a century of uninterrupted success, The New York Mercury—standing first on the muster-roll of the Literature Press in this country—points proudly to its past career as a guarantee of new triumphs in the future.

Heretofore, it has eclipsed all rivalry; but it proposes to make the coming year memorable by eclipsing its own past history, and looming up before the world as the most marvellous specimen of a fascinating, brilliant, amusing, and comprehensive Literary Newspaper that has ever been published in either hemisphere.

THE GENIUS OF EUROPE

will be laid under contribution to give brilliancy to its columns, and side by side with original productions of the most popular romancists of the Old World, will be placed the chef d'oeuvres of the most eminent story-writers of the New.

MISS M. E. BRADDON,

Authoress of "Aurora Floyd," "Lady Audley's Secret," "John Marchmont's Legacy," etc., etc., who has suddenly risen, like

A STAR OF THE FIRST MAGNITUDE

in the literary horizon of Great Britain, has been specially engaged to supply The New York Mercury from time to time with the wonderful creations of her genius, at a cost which no other weekly in America could venture to incur.

☞ Among the multitude of distinguished writers and artists who have become familiar to the masses through the vast circulation of the STAR WEEKLY OF AMERICA, may be mentioned the following, all of whom are still upon its staff:

Dr. J. H. Robinson,	Cousin May Carelton,
Margaret Blount,	W. O. Eaton,
Ned Buntline,	George Martial,
Arthur M. Grainger,	Julia S. Ingraham,
Grace Gardner,	Edward Willett,
Felix O. C. Darley,	Mary Chief,
Miss M. E. Braddon,	George Albany.

Scores of other distinguished literati, under various hours de plume, contribute to its columns, while its pictorial illustrations are from the inimitable pencil of Felix O. C. Darley, Esq., the best draughtsman of the age.

The War, which has given the coup de grace to so many pretensious publications, and half destroyed those that still survive, had added thousands to the circulation of The New York Mercury.

Its heart-stirring short stories, its military historiettes, its matchless serial romances, its racy burlesques, its general wit and humor, its delicious gossip, its fairy tales for little folks, its rare poetry, its fresh and vigorous editorials the infinite variety of its contents, and the large amount of reading matter that it comprises, render it welcome everywhere, and to classes of society. Containing, as it does, of closely-printed matter, it may safely be pronounced the cheapest, as well as the best Literary Newspaper extant.

Three favorite writers, Doctor J. H. Robinson, Cousin May Carleton, and Ned Buntline, are now preparing three stories for The New York Mercury. One of these productions will be commenced in the Opening Number of the New Year. The authors being aware of this fact, are engaged in an emulative contest for precedence, and the result will unquestionably be that the most effective story ever penned by any of the three, will commence in the

of the great REPRESENTATIVE WEEKLY of the Western World.

The New York Weekly is sold by all newsmen and periodical dealers in America. To subscribers, it is regularly mailed every Saturday morning, for $3 a year; three copies for $8; six copies for $5; eight copies for $10, with an extra copy, free, to the getter-up of the club. "Six months' subscriptions received. Always write plainly the name of your Post office County and State. We take the notes of all solvent banks at par. Payment must invariably be made in advance.

☞ Specimen copies sent to all applicants.

Address all letters and remittances, post paid, to

Poetry.

THE CALEDONIAN.

There's a land where the heather and thistle were,
Where the foot of a slave ne'er trod;
Where the blue bells bloom o'er her martyr graves,
And hallowed is that sod.
There's a land whose sons are staunch and brave,
Whose mountains are lofty and grand,
Whose shores are kissed by the blue sea waves
And Scotia is that land.
CHORUS.—'Tis an honored place that same proud land,
The home of the Caledonian.

There's a land whose lands have struck their lyres
To none but the loftiest strains;
Whose inspiring tones would call forth fire
From the dullest cowards veins.
There's a land where noble WALLACE fell,
The first in freedom's van,
Whose name still sounds like a magic spell
And Scotia is that land.
CHORUS.—'Tis teeming with heroes that mountain land,
The home of the Caledonian.

The foot need never blush to own
The land that gave him birth,
For her name is known from zone to zone,
As the noblest spot on earth.
And should any one by ambition be led
To tread on the land of the free,
The thistle would rise its stately head
Saying, you mustna meddle wi' me.
CHORUS.—It's a sturdy plant that guards on land,
The pride of the Caledonian.

Varieties.

The young fellow who engaged himself to half a dozen young women is undoubtedly a man of promise.

Many persons write because they have nothing to do, not duly considering that they have nothing to say.

When a lady, fishing for a lover, cunningly adjusts her features for the purpose, each of them is at an acute angle.

Prejudices are like rats, and a man's mind like trap; they get in easily, and then perhaps can't get out at all.

Jones writes to a friend and closes by saying, "I am glad to be able to say that my wife is recovering slowly."

When the wind whistles through your key hole, it expects you to whistle with it. It is sounding the key-note.

There is many an unfortunate who shows heart like a sunbeam always appears loveliest in its breaking asunder.

An author had better ask himself why he is going to write a book than be asked afterward why he has written it.

The Charleston Courier says the wages of a Southern soldier for a month will not suffice to purchase a pair of gloves.

HOW DO THEY DO IT?—How very rich and pompous people enjoy themselves, we know not: but if you wish to enjoy relief from a cold, cough, sore throat or shortness of breath, try Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers. 25 cents per box. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

"Why don't you give us a little Greek and Latin, occasionally ?" asked a country deacon of the new minister. "Why do you understand those languages ?" "No, but we pay for the best, and we ought to have it."

Joanes Scotus being in company with Charles the Bald, King of France, that monarch merrily said, 'What is the difference between a Scot and a not ?' Scotus, who sat opposite the king, said, 'Only the breadth of the table.'

An American tourist was visiting Naples and saw Vesuvius during an eruption.—"Have you anything like that in the New World" was the question of an Italian spectator. "No," replied the other; "but we have a Niagara that would put it out in five minutes."

MATRIMONIAL CHANGE.—A lady who was very modest and taciturn before marriage, was observed by a friend to use her tongue pretty freely afterwards. "There was a time," said he, "when I almost imagined she had none." "Yes," said the husband with a sigh, "but it's very long since."

"My dear madam, can you give me a glass of grog ?" asked a fatigued traveller in Arkansas, as he entered a cabin on the road side.

"I ain't got a drop, stranger," replied the woman.

"But a Gentleman told me you had a barrel."

"Why, good gracious," replied the woman, "what do you reckon one barrel of whiskey is to me and my children, when we'er out of milk !"

A lady entered a retail dry goods store a short time since, and among other things asked for some cambric of bay color.—"What color is that, ma'm?" inquired the youth. "Why, the color of your drawers there." "No, ma'm," continued the clerk, "I don't wear no drawers !" It was with considerable effort that the embarrassed lady exclaimed to the juvenile dealer in tape and twist, that she alluded to the painted fixtures behind him, with handles upon them.

NOSES.—The French and English have each nine proverbs relating to the nose.—Here follows the wisdom of the nasal vernacular; 1. Follow your nose. 2. He cannot see beyond his nose. 3. An inch is a good deal on a man's nose. 4. He would bite his own nose off to save his face. 5. He has a nose of wax. 6. As plain as the nose on one's face. 7. To hold ones nose on the grindstone. 8. To lead one by the nose. 9. To put one's nose out of joint.

ADVANTAGE OF BEING IN DEBT.—It requires a great coolness and experience to steer a course down the rapids of the Sault St. Marie; and a short time before our arrival, two Americans had ventured to descend them without a boatman and were consequently upset. As the story was reported to us, one of them owed his salvation to singular coincidence. As the accident took place immediately opposite the town, many of the inhabitants were attracted to the bank of the river to watch the struggles of the unfortunate men, thinking any attempt at a rescue would be hopeless. Suddenly, however a person appeared, rushed toward the group, frantic with excitement. "Save the man with the red hair !" he vehemently shouted; and the exertions which were made in consequence of his earnest appeals proved successful, and the red-haired individual, in an exhausted condition, was safely landed. "He owes me eighteen dollars," said his rescuer drawing a long breath, and lookingly approvingly on his assistants. The red-haired man's friend had not a creditor at the Sault, and in default of a competing claim, was allowed to pay his debt to nature.—"And I'll tell you what it is, stranger," said the narrator of the foregoing incident, complacently drawing a moral therefrom, "a man will never know how necessary he is to society, if he don't make life valuable to his friends as well as to himself."—Blackwood

MONEY EASILY MADE,

By either Gentlemen or Ladies.

I AM in possession of a beautiful French Art, which has been introduced in this Country only to a limited extent, and that in New York City It is something which every person stands in great need of, consequently will be extensively patronized. Persons can make money with it at home or abroad Thousands in France, have made small fortunes at it, and are still doing so. I would state what it is, but persons purchasing the knowledge of it do not desire it made public. One Dollar sent to the undersigned will ensure the immediate return of a circular giving full information in the Art, and the requisite instructions to pursue it. It is strictly genteel, and the best and only thing ever introduced which every person can make money at. NO LETTERS NOTICED, except those containing the required amount for instructions.

ATTENTION is directed to the rate of premiums adopted by this Company, which will compare favorably with that of any other institution in Canada. Investments of Company's funds to the large amount of nearly five hundred thousand dollars have been completed in Canada, and as all business transactions are finally disposed of in the Province, the Scottish Provincial offers all the facilities presented by a purely local Company, while it possesses the additional advantage of a large capital, and an influential and responsible body of shareholders in Great Britain.

Policies effected on or before 31st January next will receive a full year's bonus over those effected thereafter.

SOLDIERS in the ARMY!

AND OUR PEOPLE AT HOME,

Are now offered an opportunity by which they can obtain a

GOOD AND DURABLE TIME-PIECE,

At a very Low Figure.

OUR WATCHES are warranted to keep time one year, and the buyer is allowed the privilege of examination before the payment is required.

Improved Duplex in full Ruby Actions.

A first-class Hunting Time-Piece of silver material, over which is electro-find plated 18 k. gold, most durably wrought, making the imitation so faultless that it cannot be detected from the solid material by the most experienced Judges; acids will not affect it. London made movement. Improved Duplex in full Ruby Actions has sweep seconds, and is not to be excelled in general appearance. This decidedly the one of the best articles ever offered for traders and speculators. Engineers, emigrants and persons travelling will find them superior to any other; alteration of climate will not affect their accuracy. Price, packed in good shape and good running order, only $35, or case of 5 for $200.

Silver Double Time Hunting Levers,

Best quality silver cases, over which electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, similar to our improved Duplex, and superior adjusted movements with "stop," to be used in timing horses, &c.; has four indexes for Washington and Greenwich time, sweep second, and all the improvements. All in all, making its beautiful and faultless appearance and its superior movement into consideration, we regard it as decidedly the cheapest article of the kind in the market. Price, in good running order, $35, or case of 6 for $200.

☞ We ask no pay in advance, but will forward either of them to responsible parties, to any part of the loyal States, with bill payable to the express-man when the Good are delivered, giving the buyer the privilege of examination, and, if not satisfactory, the watch can be returned at our expense.

The express companies refuse making collections on soldiers, and other parties in the disloyal States, consequently all such orders must be accompanied by the cash to insure attention We make a deduction on either Watch when the payment is forwarded in advance.

Money may be sent by express at our expense.

MANHOOD

AND THE

VIGOR OF YOUTH RESTORED

IN FOUR WEEKS,

By Dr. Sicotte's Essence of Life.

DR. SICOTTE, (OF PARIS) after years of earnest solicitation, has at length acceded to the urgent request of the American public, and appointed an agent in Toronto for the sale of his valued and highly prized Essence of Life. This wonderful agent will restore Manhood to the most shattered constitutions, whether arising from excesses, the effects of sickness, or natural causes. The time required to cure the most inveterate case is four weeks; and if used according to printed instructions, which are very simple, failure is impossible. This life-restoring remedy should be taken by all about to marry, as its effects are permanent It is acknowledged by the medical press to be the greatest discovery ever made. Its developing powers are miraculous. Success in every case is as certain as that science overthrows ignorance.

Dr. Sicotte's Essence of Life is sold in cases, with full instructions for use, at $3, or four quantities in one for $9, and will be sent to any part, carefully packed, on receipt of remittance to his accredit agent.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK,

For 1864.

GREAT LITERARY & PICTORIAL YEAR.

THE PUBLISHER of Godey's Lady's Book, thankful to that public which has enabled him to publish a Magazine for the last thirty-four years of a larger circulation than any in America, has made an arrangement with the most popular authoress in this country—

MARION HARLAND,

Authoress of "Alone," "Hidden Path," "Miriam," "Moss Side," and "Mosscroft."

Who will furnish Stories for the Lady's Book for 1864. This alone will place the Lady's Book in a literary point of view fare ahead of any other Magazine. Our other favourite writers will all continue to furnish articles throughout the year.

The best Lady's Magazine in the world and the Cheapest.

THE LITERATURE

Is of that kind that can be read aloud in the family circle, and the clergy in immense numbers are subscribers for the Book.

THE MUSIC

Is all original, and would cost 25 cents, (the price of the Book) in the music stores; but most of it is copyrighted, and cannot be obtained except in Godey.

OUR STEEL ENGRAVINGS.

All efforts to rival us in this have ceased, and we now stand alone in this department giving as we do many more and infinitely better engravings than are published in any other work Godey's immense double sheet Fashion-Plates, containing from five to seven full length colored Fashions on each plate—other Magazines give only two—are far ahead of any Fashions in Europe or America. The publication of these Plates cost $10,000 more than the Fashion Plates of the old style, and nothing but our wonderfully large circulation enables us to give them. Other Magazines cannot afford it. We never spare money when the public can be benefited.

These Fashions may be relied on. Dresses may be made after them, and the wearer will not subject herself to ridicule, as she would be if she visited the large cities dressed after the style of the plates in some of our so-called Fashion Magazines.

OUR WOOD ENGRAVINGS.

Of which we give twice or three times as many as any other Magazine, are often mistaken for steel; they are so far superior to any others

IMITATIONS.

Beware of them. Remember that the Lady's Book is the original publication and the cheapest. If you take Godey, you want no other Magazine. Everything that is useful or ornamental in a house will be found in Godey.

DRAWING LESSONS.

No other Magazine gives them, and we have given enough to fill several large volumes.

OUR RECEIPTS

Are such as can be found nowhere else. Cooking in all its varieties — Confectionary — the Nursery—the Toilet—the Laundry—the Kitchen Receipts upon all subjects are to be found in the pages of the Lady's Book. We originally started this department, and have peculiar facilities for making it most perfect. This department alone is worth the price of the book

LADIES' WORK TABLE.

This department comprises engravings and descriptions of every article that a lady wears.

MODEL COTTAGES.

No other Magazine has this department.

Terms to Subscribers in the British Provinces:

One copy one year, $3; two copies one year, $5; three copies one year, $7.

Five copies one year, and an extra copy to the person sending the club, making six copies for $11.50.

Special Clubbing with other Magazines.

Godey's Lady's Book and Arthur's Magazine, one year, $4.

Godey and Harper, one year, $5.

Godey, Harper, and Arthur, one year, $7.

At these prices subscribers in the Provinces will have only the British postage to pay.

Treasury notes and notes of all solvent banks taken at par.

Be careful and pay the postage on your letter.

The Whole World United!

SICK PEOPLE THINK!

AFTER WHICH, ACT.

Herrick's Sugar Coated Pills,

CHILDREN CRY FOR THEM!

THIS remarkable American remedy is carrying the world by storm. Over five million boxes are sold annually. Composed entirely of Flowers, Roots, Balsams and Extracts,—their effect on the human system is pleasant, satisfactory, and successful.—Acting directly on the blood, glands, solids and fluids of the body, their use is attended with the happiest effects. In sudden attacks of disease, one or two doses almost always cures. In old standing cases of sickness, small doses—repeated frequently—so cleanse the system that good health is the result. No change in employment or diet is necessary. They never cause sore mouths, swelled joints, aching limbs, etc., as do many other kinds. They are warranted to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded. They are considered cheaper, safer, prettier, and in all respects superior to any purgative pill in the world

☞ The discovery of coating a pill with sugar emanated with Dr. Herrick. All others are counterfeits and if used, will do harm, and disappoint the sick. Herrick's pills are elegantly put up, 50 in a box, with a large sheet of directions, and sell for 25 cents a box; 5 boxes for $1.

IT IS HARMLESS TO USE AT ANY TIME.

A teaspoonful of it taken in a glass of water in the morning clears the head, brightens the eye and gives tone and elasticity to mind and body when exhausted nature fails to assert her supremacy.

ITS EFFECTS ARE MARVELLOUS.

Try it, and if it does not produce satisfactory results, when used according to directions, return the pills to the agent of whom you got it, and he will refund the money paid for it.

We only ask a fair, unprejudiced and impartial trial. Sold at every Drug Store and Country Store throughout Canada. Price 25 cents per bottle.

Dunn's Vegetable

BALSAMIC ELIXIR!

This purely Vegetable Medicine is warranted to cure

COUGHS, COLDS, CATARRH, ASTHMA, CROUP, INCIPIENT CONSUMPTION,

and all diseases of the THROAT, CHEST, and LUNGS. Dunn's Elixir has stood the test of more than THIRTY YEARS! A few doses will effect a cure when all other medicines have failed. It does not dry up the Cough but removes it by expelling the phlegm, and thus eradicating THE RAMAIN OF THE DISEASE. Its combined properties facilitate expectoration, gives ease to the Throat and Lungs, and allows rest thereby, and as much by a direct and poisonous attack upon the disease itself but by ASSISTING NATURE TO EFFECT A CURE.

Explicit directions accompany each bottle, together with a pamphlet containing certificates of cures and other interesting matter. Read the pamphlet attentively

IT IS PLEASANT TO TAKE.

There is no difficulty in administering it to children, as they are fond of it, and, if permitted, would take it to excess.

Price 25 cents, 50 cents, and $1.00 per bottle.

Select Poetry.

TO ANNA.

BY A MEMBER OF THE 93RD OHIO.

The day has fled! Some unseen hand
Is jeweling the heavens' breast,
That mortals in this earthly land
May love the mansions of the blest.
But what is Heaven or star to me?
Alone! alone! afar from thee.

'Tis silent night! How sweetly sleep
The birds that sang their evening song;
But I a lonely vigil keep,
As night's slow moments drift along.
Sweet slumber from my heart is flown,
I am so far from thee—alone!

To-day, in battle's proud array,
We met our country's hated foe;
We fought, we charged, we won the day,
We saw the hills with crimson flow;
But in the hour of victory
I wept to share my joy with thee.

The sabre's flash, the heavy tread
Of legions into conflict brought,
The field all covered with the dead,
Have faded from my midnight thought,
And comes the wish for thee!—most dear
Thee far away! Would thou were near!

Our country lives! It shall not die:
We'll fight its battles o'er and o'er;
But when its flag again shall fly
On every stream, by every shore,
In that great hour of victory,
How sweet to be once more by thee!

STORY OF EMILE ROQUE.

III.

Why should I go on to speak of pictures here—except that I love them? Why should I recall the disgusting and wonderful old men of Denner, which hang with glass over them within the window bays of the Palace of Belvidere at Vienna? Why should my fancy go stalking through the great Rubens Museum, with its red arms, fat bosoms, pin-cushion cheeks, and golden hair?

Why does my thought whisk away to that gorgeous salon of Dresden, where hangs the greatest of all Raphael's Madonnas?

The face of the Virgin is all that makes perfection in female beauty; it is modest, it is tender, it is intelligent. The eyes are living eyes, but with no touch of earthiness, save the shade of care which earth's sorrows give even to the holy Virgin. She wears the dignity of the mother of Christ, with nothing of severity to repulse; she wears the youthful innocence of the spouse of David, with no touch of levity; she wears the modest bearing of one whose child was nursed in a manger, with the presence of one "chosen from among women." She is mounting on clouds to heaven; light as an angel, but with no wings; her divinity sustains her. In her arms she holds lightly but firmly the infant Jesus, who has the face of a true child, with something else beyond humanity; his eye has a little of the look of a frightened boy in some strange situation, where he knows he is safe, and where yet he trembles. His light, silky hair is strewn by a wind (you feel it like a balm) over a brow beaming with soul; he looks deserving the adoration the shepherds gave him; and there is that—in his manner, innocent as the babe he was—in his look, Divine as the God he was, which makes one see in the child

—"the father of the man."

Pope Sixtus is lifting his venerable face in adoration from below; and opposite, St. Barbara, beautiful and modest, has dropped her eyes, [though religious awe and love are beaming in her looks. Still lower, and lifting their heads and their little wings only above the edge of the picture, are two cherubs, who are only less in beauty than the Christ; they are twins—but they are twin angels—and Christ is God.

The radiance in their faces is, I think, the most wonderful thing I have ever seen in painting. They are listening to the celestial harmony which attends the triumph of the Virgin. These six faces make up the picture; the Jesus, a type of divinity itself; the Virgin, the purity of earth, as at the beginning, yet humble because of earth; the cherubs, the purity of heaven, conscious of its high estate; the two saints, doubting, yet full of hope.

I wrote thus much in my note-book, as I stood before the picture in that room of the Royal Gallery which looks down upon the market-place of Dresden, and with the painting lingering in my thoughts more boldly than sermons of a Sunday noontime, I strolled over the market-place, crossed the long bridge which spans the Elbe, and wandered up the banks of the river as far as the Findlator Gardens. The terrace is dotted over with tables and benches, where one may sit over his coffee or ice, and enjoy a magnificent view of Dresden, the river, the bridge, and the green battle-field where Moreau fell. It was a mild day of winter, and I sat there enjoying the prospect, sipping at a demitasse, and casting my eye from time to time over an old number of the Debats newspaper, which the waiter had placed on my table.

When there was no political news of importance stirring, I was always in the habit of running over the column of Faits Divers—"Different Things" translates it, but does not give a good idea of the piquancy which usually belongs to that column. The suicides are all there; the extraordinary robberies are there; important discoveries are entered; and all the bits of scandal, which, of course, every body reads and every body says should never have been published, are jotted down under Faits Divers.

In the journal under my hand there was mention of two murders, one of them of that stereotype class growing out of a drunken brawl, which the world seems to regard indifferently, as so many necessary punctuation-marks in the history of civilization. The other drew my attention very closely.

The Count de Roquefort, an elderly gentleman of wealth and distinguished family, residing in a chateau a little way of the road leading from Nismes to Avignon, in the South of France, had been brutally murdered in his own house. The Count was unmarried; none of his family connection resided with him, and, aside from a considerable retinue of servants, he lived quite alone, devoted, as was said, to scientific pursuits.

It appeared that two days before his assassination, he was visited by a young man, a stranger in that region, who was received (the servants testified) kindly by the Count, and who passed two hours closeted with him in his library. On the day of the murder the same young man was announced; his manner was excited, and he was ushered, by the Count's order, into the library as before.

It would seem, however, that the Count had anticipated the possibility of some trouble, since he had secured the presence of two "officers of the peace" in his room. It was evident that the visitor had come by appointment. The officers were concealed under the hangings of a bay-window at the end of the library, with orders from the Count not to act unless they should see signs of violence.

The young man, on entering, advanced toward the table beside which the Count was seated, reading. He raised his head at the visitor's entrance, and beckoned to a chair.

The stranger approached more nearly, and without seating himself, addressed the Count in a firm tone of voice to this effect:

"I have come to ask, Monsieur le Comte, if you are prepared to accept the propositions I made to you two days ago?"

The Count seemed to hesitate for announcement; but only, it appeared, from hearing some noise in the servants' hall below.

The visitor appeared excited by his calmness, and added, "I remember you for the last time, of the vow I have sworn to accomplish if you refuse my demand."

"I do refuse," said the Count, firmly. "It is a ruth—"

It was the last word upon his lips; for before the officers could interfere, the visitor had drawn a pistol from his breast and discharged it at the head of the Count. The ball entered the brain. The Count lingered for two hours after, but showed no signs of consciousness.

The assassin, who was promptly arrested, is a stalwart man of about thirty, and from the contents of his portmanteau, which he had left at the inn of the adjoining village, it is presumed that he followed the profession of an artist.

The cause of the murder is still a mystery; the Count had communicated nothing to throw light upon it. He was a kind master, and not known to have an enemy in the world

I had read this account with that eager curiosity with which I believe all—even the most sensitive and delicate—unwittingly devour narratives of that kind; I had finished my half-cup of coffee, and was conjecturing what could possibly be the motive for such a murder, and what the relations between the Count and the strange visitor, when suddenly—like a flash—the conviction fastened itself upon me, that the murderer was none other than Emile Roque!

I did not even think in that moment of the remote similarity in the two names—Roque and De Roquefort. For any thing suggestive that lay in it, the name might as well have been De Moutfort or De Courcy; I am quite sure of that.

Indeed, to association of ideas, no deduction from the facts named, led me to the conclusion which I formed on the spur of the moment. Yet my conviction was as strong as my own consciousness. I knew Emile Roque was the murderer; I remembered his copy of the head of the castaway in Gericault's Wreck of the Medusa!

When I had hazarded the conjecture of suicide, I had reasoned loosely from the changed appearance of the man, and from the suicidal tendency of the Paris form of madness. Now I reasoned, not from the appearance of the man at all, but from my recollections of his painting.

There is no resignation in the face of Gericault's shipwrecked man; there is only animal fear and despair, lighted with but one small ray of hope. The ties of humanity exist no longer for him; whatever is near or dear to him is forgotten in that supreme moment when the animal instinct of self-preservation at once brutalizes and vitalizes every faculty.

Such is Gericault's picture; but Roque had added the intensity of moral despair: he had foreshadowed the tempest of a soul tossed on a waste—not of ocean—but of doubt, haste, crime! I felt sure that he had unwittingly foretokened his own destiny.

Are there not moments in the lives of all of us—supreme moments—when we have the power lent us to wreck in language, or on canvas, or in some wild burst of music (as our habit of expression may lie), all our capabilities, and to typify, by one effort of the soul, all the issues of our life?

I knew now that Emile Roque had unwittingly done this in the head from the Medusa. I knew that the period was to occur in his life when his own thought and action would illustrate to the full all the wildness and the despair to which he had already given pictured expression.

I can not tell how he knew this, any more than I can tell how I knew that he was the murderer.

I wrote De Courcy that very day, referring him to the paragraph I had read and adding: "This artist is Emile Roque, but who is the Count De Roquefort?" It occasioned me no surprise to hear from him only two days after (his letter having crossed mine on the way), that the fact of Roque's identity with the culprit was fully confirmed. —— De Courcy added: "It is not a wide now, but, I fear, a guillotine. I so frightful! Who could believe it of a man we saw rioting among the nymphs of Watteau?"

IV.

I returned to Paris by the way of Belgium. I think it was in the Hotel de Saxe, of Brussels, where I first happened on a budget of French papers which contained a report of the trial of poor Roque. It was a hopeless case with him; every one foresaw that. For a time I do not think there was any sympathy left for him. The testimony all went to show the heinous and benevolent character of the beloved Count. The culprit had appeared to all who saw him within the year past, of a morose and harsh disposition.

I say that for a time sympathy was with the murdered man; but certain circumstances came to light toward the close of the trial, and indeed after it was over, and the poor fellow's fate was fixed, which gave a new turn to popular sympathy.

These circumstances had a special interest for me inasmuch as they cleared up the mystery which had belonged to his change of manner in the galleries of the Louvre, and to his relations with the Count de Roquefort.

I will try and state the circumstances as they came to my knowledge through the newspaper reports of that date.

In the first place, the Count, after the first visit of Emile Roque, had communicated to those in his confidence nothing respecting the nature or the objects of that visit; and this, notwithstanding he had such reason to apprehend violence in its repetition, that he had secured the presence of two officers to arrest the offensive person. To these officers he had simply communicated the fact of his expecting a visit from an unknown individual, who had threatened him with personal violence.

The officers were quite sure that the Count had spoken of the criminal as one unknown to him; indeed, he seemed eager to convey to them that he had no previous knowledge whatever of the individual who so strangely threated his peace.

Nothing was found among the Count's papers to forbid the truthfulness of his assertion on this point; no letter could be discovered from any person bearing that name.

The mother of this prisoner, upon learning the accusation urged against him, had become incapacitated, by a severe paralytic attack, from appearing as a witness, or from giving any intelligible information whatever. She had said only in the paroxysm of her distress, and before her faculties were withered by the shock: "Lui aussi! Il s'y perd!"

Not one of the companions of Emile Roque (and he had many in his jovial days) had ever heard him speak of the Count de Roquefort. Up to the time of his departure for the South, he had communicated to no one his intentions, or even his destination. His old friends had, indeed, remarked the late change in his manner, and had attributed it solely to what they supposed a bitter disappointment in relation to his proposed marriage with Virginie C——.

I have already alluded (through a letter from De Courcy) to the singular fact, that Emile Roque counted his familiarity and intimacy with Monsieur C—— long after the date of the change in his appearance, and even up to the time of his departure for the South.

It was naturally supposed that Monsieur C—— would prove an important witness in the case. His testimony, however, so far from throwing light upon the crime, only doubled the mystery attached to the prisoner's fate.

He spoke in the highest terms of the character which the criminal had always sustained. He confirmed the rumours which had coupled his name with that of one of his own family. The marriage between the parties had been determined upon with his full consent, and only waited the final legal forms usual in such cases for its accomplishment, when it was deferred in obedience to the wishes only of M. Roque himself!

The witness regarded this as a caprice at the first; but the sudden change in the manner of the criminal, from that time, had satisfied him that secret anxiety was weighing on his mind. His high regard for the character of M. Roque had prompted (and that alone had prompted) a continuance of intimacy with him, and a vain repetition of endeavors to win from him some explanation of his changed manner.

One fact more, which seemed to have special significance in its bearing upon the crime, was this: In the pocket of the prisoner at the time of his seizure was found a letter, purporting to be from the murdered Count, and addressed to a certain Amedee Brune. It was a tender letter, full of expression and devotion, and promising that upon a day not very far distant, the writer would meet his fair one, and they should be joined together, for woe or for weal, thenceforth, through life.

The letter was of an old date—thirty odd years ago it had been written; and on comparison with the manuscript of the Count of that date, gave evidence of authenticity. Who this Amedee Brune might be, or what relation she bore to the criminal, or how the letter came into his possession, none could tell. Those who had been early acquaintances of the Count had never so much as heard a mention of that name. A few went so far as to doubt the genuineness of his signature. He had been a man remarkable for his quiet and studious habits. So far as the knowledge of his friends extended, no passing gallantries had ever relieved the memory of his life.

The accused, in the progress of the inquiries which had elicited these facts, had maintained a dogged silence, not communicating any statement of importance even to his legal advisers. The sudden illness which had befallen his mother, and which threatened a fatal termination, seemed to have done more to penetrate his hope and courage than the weight of the criminal accusation.

The fiancee, meantime, Mademoiselle C——, was, it seems, least of all interested in the fate of the prisoner. Whether incensed by his change of manner, or stung by jealousy, it was certain that before the accusation had been urged she had conceived against him a strong antipathy.

Such was the state of facts developed on the trial. The jury found him guilty of murder; there were no extenuating circumstances, and there was no recommendation to mercy.

How the President got rid of a Bore.

(Cincinnati Commercial.)

Mr. Lincoln has been greatly bored by visitors of late, notwithstanding his indisposition. The Honorable Mr. Blowhard, and the honorable Mr. Doolittle have been calling on his Excellency, to congratulate him on his message and his proclamation; gentlemen in the humble walks of civil life have been here for the first time, and couldn't leave without seeing the wife of George Washington; persons with ideas to grind have insisted upon a little and then the great American rail splitter; and between them all they have given our benevolent Chief Magistrate very little leisure or peace of mind. An individual, whom the President knew to be a copperhead of a customer, called at the White House, a day or two ago, and insisted upon an interview. Just as he had taken his seat Mr. Lincoln sent for his physician, who immediately made his appearance.

"Doctor," said he, holding out his hand, "what are these marks?"

"That's variolod; or mild smallpox," said the doctor. "They're all over me! It is contagious, I believe," said Mr. Lincoln. "Very contagious, indeed," replied the Esculapian attendant. "Well, I can't stop, Mr. Lincoln; I just called in to see how you were," said the visitor. "Oh, don't be in a hurry, sir!" placidly remarked the Executive.

"Thank you, sir; I'll call again," replied the visitor executing a masterly retreat from a fearful contagion.

"Do, sir," said the President, "Some people said they could not take very well to my proclamation, but now, I am happy to say, I have something that everybody can take." By this time the visitor was making a desperate break for Pennsylvania avenue, which he reached on the double-quick.

A CLASSIC TOILETTE.—According to testimony, which is scarcely to be disputed, the sun could never have shown upon a less lovely object than a Roman lady in the days of Cæsars, when she opened her eyes in the morning—or, rather let us say, as she appeared in the morning, for before she opened her eyes a great deal had to be done. When she retired to rest her face had been covered with a plaster composed of bread and ass' milk, which had dried during the night, and, consequently, presented in the morning the appearance of cracked clay. The purpose of the ass's milk was not only to preserve the delicacy of the skin, but to renovate the lungs, and so strong was the belief in the efficacy of the specific, that some energetic ladies bathe themselves in it seventy times in the course of a single day. As for Poppea, the favorite wife of Nero, she never set out on a journey without taking in her train whole herds of she-asses, that she might bathe whenever she pleased so to do. The plaster of Paris but having wakened in the morning in a cracked condition, it was the duty of a host of female slaves to restore it into perfect beauty. To clear the field for further operations, the first of these gently washed away with luke-warm asses' milk the already crumbling mask, and left a smooth face, to be colored by more recondite artists. The slave whose vocation it was to paint the cheeks, delicately laid on the red and white, having moistened the pigment with her own saliva. The apparent nastiness of this operation was diminished by the consumption of a certain number of scented lozengers, which if the slave neglected to take, she suffered corporal punishment.—Dickens' All the Year Round.

THOUGHTS FROM THE HEBREW.

Do not despise every one; think not everything impossible; for every man has his reason, and everything has its place.

Be very lowly, humble in spirit; for man is a worm, and his ambition vanity.

A myrtle among nettles is still a myrtle.

When the shepherd is angry with the sheep he sends them a blind guide.

Look not on the vessel, but that which it contains.

If a word be worth a shekel, silence is worth two.

However many counsellors thou mayest have, yet forsake not the council of thine own soul.

In my own city my name, in a strange city my clothes, procure me respect.

This world is like an ante-chamber in comparison with the world to come. Prepare thyself for the ante-chamber, that thou mayest enter the palace.

SAFE GUARDS.

"I will conclude my address," says the Rev. Henry Venn., "by observation confirmed by the Word of the Church of God, and by promise; it is this: Whoever perseveres, and increase in the Lord, and in the comfort Ghost, to live and die in not ashamed, must be constantly prayer; must constantly read God's word, begging him to explain it, and give faith in it; and must walk with those who walk conscientiously before God: who are always aspiring to what they have not attained—in whose manners, spirit, and discourse there is what reaches the heart, and tends to humble, quicken, and comfort the soul. In all my reading and acquaintance, for forty years, with religious people, I never saw an instance of one decaying and coming to nothing, who observed these rules—never saw one who presumed, on any consideration, to give over attention to them, who did not fall away."

THE NEW YEAR.

Another year has gone! We have reached another of the four mile stones that intervene between us and Eternity. Another year gone! How short a time to look back upon; but what an amount of happiness and woe has been crowded in that time! What changes have taken place—but little, if at all, anticipated at its commencement. Many who began the year vigorous with life and buoyant with hope, now sleep beneath the cedar-shed end of the valley. Reverses have come upon some; while others have been enabled to climb high up the ladder of fortune and fame. The death knell of the departing year which will sound before many hours have gone by, should be pregnant with solemn and impressive lessons to each of us. It should teach us the value of time and the importance of improving it. May it do so.

In retrospecting the year, and the troubles and trials through which other lands have been called to pass, how grateful we should be to the Supreme Director of events for having cast our lot in a land where prosperity dwells, and peace scatters its blessings. We have only to contrast our condition with Poland, Mexico and the Southern States to realize this. Only those involved in all the miseries of war can estimate the true value of peace. It is pleasant, therefore, to think that kinder feelings are growing up between our neighbors and ourselves. At one time it looked as if we, too, would have been forced practically to experience the horrors of war. But, thank God, that by the prudence of our rulers, the storm was averted. We cannot be sufficiently thankful! Had war taken place, the condition of the Southern States for a time, at least, would have been ours. By the aid of Britain's strong arm we might have eventually triumphed—but not until many of Canada's fair homes had been desolated—many of her noble sons slain—her daughters widowed—and all her industrial relations interrupted. In a word, she would have been put back many years in the road of progress. As it is, Canada is fast developing those essentials which are destined to give her a prominent position among the nations of the world. May her future career be a bright, prosperous and peaceful one. May her connection with the mother country ever continue, productive of mutual honor and benefit; and long may the question, a monarchy or a Republic, which? be practically ignored by a people contented and happy in their present relations.

We conclude these few random thoughts by wishing our friends and readers A HAPPY NEW YEAR.

DISMISSALS.

Sympathy is a pleasant element of human nature. Nothing can be sweeter in the hour of trial and trouble than sympathy. It dries up sorrow, it dispels grief, it uplifts the drooping. Now, our Opposition friends, whatever their other failings, cannot be charged with want of sympathy. True, their sympathy is a peculiar kind of sympathy; but it is sympathy, after all. In power, they sympathised; and now, out of power, they sympathise. In power, they sympathised with the Grand Trunk in its troubles; with the Montreal Corporation, to the tune of £100,000; with different other Corporations; and lastly they sympathised with a lot of poor unfortunates incapable, unable to do anything for themselves, and so gave them places whose duties they were unfit to discharge, but who, once fastened leech-like—soon learned how to fatten off the public purse. The last part came intuitively. Now, out of power, the Opposition sympathise with those poor fellows that the present hard-headed, cold-blooded Ministry are, ogre-like, (politically) devouring, or, like the one-eyed Cyclops we are told about in the Odyssey, are about to dash them together preparatory for that act. The present Government have no sympathy at all; not they. They will not allow incapables, or those who will not discharge their duties honorably and fairly, longer to retain the places they have prostituted. They have not got any sympathy for such characters. They go on the principle that the Government should not have any such feeling. Duty should be their only feeling. But the Opposition with sympathy gushing as it were, from every pore, knowing that a few dismissals have of late necessarily been made, are now trying to make a little capital out of the fact. It is their dernier resort, however. The attempt is like a drowning man clutching at a passing straw, and will prove about as effectual.

At dinners, especially, when the decanter has circulated freely (for they sympathise with the decanter, as well as with other things,) they grow wondrously eloquent (loquacious would perhaps be a better term) upon the inconsistency, want of principle, and, above all the cruelty of the present Ministry. The dismissed ones are all depicted in telling tones, as being "grey haired," and [illegible] cast "homeless," "penniless" and "[illegible]" in their "old age" upon a bitter and [illegible]. This, no doubt, is a splendid idea [illegible] such occasions; when coolly it is expected and understood that the sentiments and softer feelings predominate over reason and common sense, laid prostrate by the potions that are generally so liberally imbibed. Apart, however, from such times, we opine that all attempts to prejudice the Ministry, and to excite public odium against them by those appealing to private sympathies to make the people believe what is absolutely repugnant with facts, and altogether inconsistent with all logical deductions to be drawn from such facts, will prove entirely abortive. The great mass of the people are beginning to think and form conclusions for themselves. The important principle of public expediency that private interests must be subordinated, and when necessary, sacrificed to the general weal—the welfare of the whole—is now too universally understood and acknowledged, for any Ministry to be condemned when in the discharge of duty they find it absolutely essential—however painful to their own feelings as private individuals—to dismiss parties from posts or situations, the duties of which it is believed that others can be found to discharge more efficiently and satisfactorily. And that public consideration have hitherto influenced the Ministry in their decisions, we think can be deeply proved—by even a slight investigation of the circumstances of the different cases. Look at Montreal, for instance, where the Sheriff and the Joint Clerk of Peace have been dismissed. What else could the Ministry have done after the Report of Commission appointed to investigate. Nothing. Such malversation as was there disclosed, could only be properly punishable by the dismissal of the chiefs implicated. For instance, the expense of the Montreal jail for six months was $9,427, of which the large proportion of $2,564 was for "medical comforts." That is, over one fourth of the whole amount was for medical comforts. But mark, of this $2,564 for "medical comforts" $1,9982, was for tea alone. Now, about 300 is the number of persons generally incarcerated; of these 80 were said to be in need of "medical comforts"—tea included. $1,800 for 80 persons for 6 months would be $22 50 each. $22 50 at wholesale prices would buy some 30 or 40 pounds—rather a formidable task for a well person, to say nothing of a sick one, to get through in the given time. But the secret of the expenses leaks out when we are told that the jailer keeps a "medical comfort shop"—a private speculation connived at by the Dr., the Sheriff, and other jail authorities. It was surely time that something was done. Consequently we find that even the Montreal Opposition papers don't find much fault with the action of the Ministry, and hesitate not to praise the appointments made.

Then again, with regard to the case of Mr. FORTUNE, the Sheriff of Northumberland, we think that those papers who arrogate to themselves the right of pre-judging the Ministry for the action that may be taken, and who are, therefore, endeavouring to support Mr. FORTUNE by influencing public opinion, are extremely injudicious in their conduct, and are adding in the best way to accomplish what they would professedly prevent. Mr. FORTUNE we apprehend may yet have cause, like many more, to exclaim "save me from my friends!" From the steps already taken, and from the commission appointed, we believe that the fullest justice will be done to the charged. Investigation, if fairly and impartially conducted, can do an honest man no harm, and may do him much good. Then again, with regard to a recent dismissal in this place. We think it is unfair to condemn the Ministry until the public are in full possession of the facts and reasons leading to the dismissal. However much we may feel for a neighbor, we have no doubt the Ministry have what they consider good reasons for their act.

Here we may say it cannot be wondered at that the Ministry have taken active steps in these matters, especially when it is notorious fact—as scandalous and reprehensible as notorious—that the incumbents of many of the best offices in the Province (is our county excepted?) have been doing and are doing all they can, by underhanded influence, to build up the cause of the Opposition by giving it their support in various ways; and thus by their negative support or active but secret antagonism, to lessen the influence and thwart the wishes of those upon whom rest their tenure of office depends. The Ministry are but human, and such conduct represented to them again and again, both privately and publicly, cannot but have its weight; for it may be legitimately inferred that men guilty of such want of consideration may be guilty of other failings, and to look after them will do no harm.

During the long misrule of the corruptionist Government, many weeds were allowed to grow up. If the present Government cannot succeed in extirpating all of these, they will by rooting out the worst of them, be doing a good work, and will entitle themselves to the gratitude of all well-wishers of their country.

MASONIC.

The festival of St. JOHN the Evangelist falling on Sunday this year, the Brethern of Peterborough Lodge No. 155 met on Monday evening for the installation of officers, when the following brethern were duly installed and invested with the insigna of their office:

Wor. Br. Dr. BURNHAM	W. M.
Br. A. SMITH	S. W.
Br. H. LAWSON	J. W.
Br. J. CHRISTIE	Sec.
Br. PETERS	T.
Br. J. M. DUNN	C.
Br. REDPATH	S. D.
Br. J. M. BURNS	J. D.
Br. HELMS	I. G.
Br. John DRAKE	Tyler.

After the installion the brethren repaired to the Huffman House where an excellent and substantial cold collation had been prepared, and to which ample justice was done.

After the edibles were disposed of, W. M. Dr. BURNHAM, after prefacing it with some appropriate remarks, gave the "Queen and the Craft," which was received with full Masonic honors.

Br. J. M. BURNS sang the National Anthem.

Br. A. SMITH gave "Masons Wives and Babies."

Song by Br. LAWSON.

Br. J. M. BURNS then gave The Worshipful Master of Peterborough Lodge, which was received with full Masonic honors.

W. M. Dr. BURNHAM responded in some very happy and well chosen remarks. He thanked the brethren for the manner in which the toast had been received. He dwelt upon the beauties and excellences of Masonry and the duties and obligations of Masons. His remarks were highly practical and pertinent, and were listened to with deep attention throughout.

Br. GRANT proposed "Our Sister Lodge," which was appropriately responded to by Br. B. WHITE, W. M. thereof.

After several other complimentary toasts, the Junior Warden's was given. This was received with the usual honors; after which the W. M. vacated the chair, and the brethern separated highly pleased with the pleasant manner in which the evening had been spent.

FEDERAL PRISONERS.—The Richmond Enquirer says the number of Yankee prisoners in Richmond on Dec. 19 was 16,539. For several days the arrivals have been very meager. Yesterday six Yankees (including one officer) were received; one was sent to the small-pox hospital, and eleven died.

TOWN COUNCIL.

MONDAY, December 28th, 1863.

Present, His Worship the Mayor, and Messrs. Toole, Lawless, Ryan, Douglas, Landy, Fry and Burnham.

The minutes of previous meeting were read and confirmed.

A circular from the Adjutant General in reference to the Drill Sheds, was submitted and received.

Sundry accounts were received, amounting to $139 89, and communications from H. Evans and Robert Smith, complaining of assessments, were referred to the Finance Committee.

On motion of Mr. Burnham, the sinking fund of £300 received from the the Railway be invested in the purchase of Town Debentures now for sale for the erection of the Lock-up and Engine House, the Treasurer was authorized to pay over the same upon the order of the Committee appointed for the building of the said Lock-up.

The Treasurer was authorized to pay to the widow Warren, six dollars.

Mr. Toole said he had a resolution to offer which had a reference to the Mayor, and begged of him to be kind enough to vacate the chair; the chair being vacated, he then moved that this Council do hereby tender a vote of thanks to His Worship the Mayor for the agreeable and proper manner in which he has presided over this Council for the present year.

The Clerk put the motion when it was carried unanimously.

His Worship briefly returned thanks.

Chas. Cameron tendered his resignation as Auditor, which was accepted.

The time for the collection of taxes was extended to the 1st day of February.

The Council then adjourned for two weeks.

BRITISH TRADE.

Notwithstanding the great depression of trade consequent upon the "Great Cotton Famine," it is a most remarkable fact that the present year has been one of unexpected prosperity. More business has been done in 1863 than in 1861. And this although the cotton importations from America having almost ceased. In 1861, produce to the amount of £166,000,000 was exported; during the present year over £120,000,000 have been exported. Altogether only 4,200,000 cwt. of cotton were imported from all parts of the world against 10,000,000 cwts. of 1861, yet cotton manufactures to the value of £30,080,083 have been exported against £30,673,703 of 1861. That is, the exports of the two years are nearly equal, while the raw cotton imported during the present year does not reach half that record in 1861.

Linen and woolen maqufactures have greatly increased—stimulated into wonderful activity by the comparative scarcity of cotton goods.

The harvests have been abundant; nearly £7,000,000 less wheat was exported during the first ten months of the present year than in corresponding time of 1862; and some £2,000,000 less wheat and corn meal.

Gold and silver have flown in upon the nation from many quarters.

Britain's position is a proud one. With internal convulsions that would have rent any other kingdom, she has easily ridden the storm, and is now beginning to recover her old prosperity. The wonderful genius of her people has been shown. Their industry has been deranged, but it exhibits no symptoms decrease. Her products have been altered; but on the whole they are as valuable as ever. In a year or two when the cotton trade revives—and she is able to supply the world with her cheap fabrics — Britain will no doubt be in a happier and more prosperous condition than she has yet experienced.

Ashburnham School Examination.

The school taught by Mr. STRATTON in the Village of Ashburnham, was examined on Thursday last, and presented a very creditable appearance. The reading classes were examined in Reading, Spelling and Meaning, and the higher ones in Grammar. The classes in Geography, History and Arithmetic showed very thorough drilling in these subjects. The intervals were filled up with recitations and singing, and the whole examination passed off very satisfactorily as regards the Teacher and the Scholars. A few persons were present, but far too few for the interest of the school. The handsome new Building which now adorns the village, should have induced a large attendance both of the parents and of the children, and the friends of education; and they would probably have felt as the writer of this did—that the building like the famous silk slipper, will require other additions to make its accomodations to be really appreciated.

FIGHT.

The great HEENAN and KING fight of which there has been so much talk in the sporting world during the last few months, came off on the 10th inst., and resulted in the defeat of the American giant. The fight lasted 35 minutes, and 24 rounds were fought. It was a most brutal affair, and does not speak very high for the civilization of those countenancing and were present at it. Large sums changed hands as the result of the fight. TOM SAYERS, his old antagonist, was one of HEENAN's seconds. HEENAN was terribly punished, and, after all his bluster and braggadocio, as chop-fallen as punished.

NEW STEAMSHIP LINE.

A new ocean steam line from Montreal to Liverpool is projected. Canada is to subscribe $500,000 and England $2,000,000 towards the enterprise. It is proposed to build a fleet of screw steamships of about two thousand tons to two thousand five hundred tons, of large capacity and of moderate power, and to begin a fortnightly service each way, to be increased to a weekly line, calling at a port in Ireland, as soon as the vessels can be got ready. Until such time as the ships are built it is believed there will be no difficulty in chartering suitable vessels, so as to enable the company to go into operation in the spring.

THE BRANTFORD "COURIER."

The Brantford Courier is about to enter upon its 26th year. We differ from the Courier in politics, but we have much pleasure in bearing our testimony to the able and gentlemanly manner in which it has been conducted since we have become acquainted with it. Long may it and its veteran proprietor flourish.

THE Rev. J[illegible] MAY, D. D., Professor of the Divinity Sch[illegible] Philadelphia, died on the 19th, after a short illness.

FENIAN NEWS.

A probable re-election is talked of within six months. The Duke of Newcastle has resigned. The Mexican question continues without change. An agent has been sent out by the Admiralty to inspect the guns over in America. There is a piggy war going on between Mr. CORBET and the Times. There was a great fire in Manchester, destroying property to the value of £150,000.

AMERICAN NEWS.

There is nothing new from the other side. Everything seems to be quiet.

The siege is progressing at Charleston. A steamer was captured while attempting to run the blockade; it had on board 300 bales of cotton, valued at $1,000,000.

NEW SOLICITOR-GENERAL.

The Honorable ALEXIS MASSON FORTNARRE, Q. C., has been appointed Solicitor-General for Upper Canada. The appointment has been gazetted.

THE members of Protection Fire Company will meet on Tuesday evening next, in the Town Hall.

IF you want good Councillors and Trustees, look among your neighbours and see who are the best qualified and trustworthy men. It is of the utmost importance to have thoroughly qualified men.

LET every Ward hold meetings to select candidates. Nothing like taking time by the forelock. It will never do to be trotting around, looking for candidates on the day of election.

LET true, progressive men be selected.

MME. DEMOREST'S Quarterly Mirror of Fashions and Journal du Grande Monde, for winter, has come to hand. It is, as usual, replete with good things. We cannot see how ladies of any pretensions can do without it. It only costs $1 per year.

THE receipts of the Sanitary Fair at Boston during the 15th and 16th instant, are estimated at $60,000. Those the most sanguine of success in getting up the exhibition had no conception of the immense throngs of people from all parts of New England now being attracted to it.

WE have received FRANK LESLIE'S Lady's Magazine and Gazette of Fashion, for January. It is, as usual, superbly illustrated, and fully keeps up its old reputation. LESLIE'S enterprise is too well known to need comment. The patterns sent are no small consideration, both with this Magazine and that of MME. DEMOREST.

NEGRO SOLDIERS.—In Congress, the opposition on the appropriation for bounties to soldiers, moved an amendment that no money should be paid under it for recruiting negroes. The vote was:—Yeas 41; Nays 105. The blacks, therefore, had a majority of 65 for treating them on the same footing of equality as in other armies.

WE inadvertently, last week, omitted to notice the Concert, of MESSRS. HEATHFIELD & BROWN. We were sorry to see so few present. There ought to have been more. The singing of Mr. T. BROWN and Mrs. TASKER was very fine; that of Mr. HIGGINSON was also exempl. The playing of Prof. HEATHFIELD and the Misses CLENTON was very effective, and elicited much [illegible]

THE "CHESAPEAKE."—We are glad, says the Globe, to see that the Halifax papers, without distinction of politics, condemn the conduct of the mob in rescuing the captors of the Chesapeake, and that two of the rescued prisoners have been re-captured in St. Johns, New Brunswick. We trust that the law of the land will be carried out fairly and impartially, that British justice will be vindicated, and the interference of mobs crushed by the hand of Government.

REMEMBER on Monday next, the election of Mayor takes place. Be at the polls and record your votes. Captain KENNEDY thinks that Captain KENNEDY will make the best Mayor; we dont blame him for believing so, but people differ in their opinion. So if you dont hold the same opinion as Captain KENNEDY you had better convince him by voting for his opponent. Some say the Captain is only joking about running. These we beg to undeceive; the Captain is in earnest, at least so he says.

AN UNNATURAL MURDER.—A trial involving disclosures has taken place at Chester, England, in which the criminal, a female, has been sentenced to death for poisoning her own mother by repeated doses of arsenic. The woman Holt, it appears, had contrived by fraud to effect an insurance on her mother's life, and it was to secure a paltry sum of money represented by the policy that this appalling crime was committed. The body of the deceased was found after death to be saturated with arsenic.

HAVE you selected your Councillors? If not, you should do so. Such things should not be left to the last. You want a Council who will attend to their duties—because they are not above them. Our Town affairs, and especially our Town finances, require to be looked into more than they have during the past year or two. Whispers are afloat about the way in which our financial business has been conducted. There is no there there to such a foundation therefor. A Council, accordingly are wanted who will show the people how they really are, and will strive to make them what they ought to be. Have men, then, ready?—men, good, honest and true—and stand by them till they are elected.

THE QUEBEC FIRE LOAN.—The Opposition press have not been able to decide with any great consistency upon the correct view to be taken of the action of the Government in this matter. First of all, they were sure that the Government were going to remit the loan. Then they found this was not true. At last, when they learned that the loan was to be collected, but that the Government was about to act like other business men, and in dealing with a very troublesome outstanding account, were ready to remit a small part in order to clear up the whole without dispute, they returned to the charge of bribery. But the best view of the case taken by the Quebec Chronicle is that "the debtors of the Fire Loan Fund have nothing for which to thank Mr. Thibaudeau in the recent arrangement for the settlement of this long standing account." The rest of the article is devoted to proving that instead of being bribed, the debtors to this fund have been so badly treated at being called to pay, that they ought to vote against Mr. Thibaudeau at the next election.

....The bombardment of Kagoomia appears to have given great dissatisfaction in England. Mr. Crawshay, Mayor of Gateshead, at a recent civic banquet, declined to propose the toast of the army, and navy, on the ground of the late proceedings in Japan.

....An ex-captain of the 60th Rifles, named Hickley, has been remanded at the London Mansion House on a charge of forging bills to the extent of £16,000, purporting to be drawn upon and accepted by the Earl of Westmoreland the Earl of Anglesea, and Lord Uxbridge.

....The Smith family is numerous in Baltimore. There are 652 persons of that name recorded in the city directory just issued. The Browns stand next, numbering 297, and the Jones third, numbering 254. The city has 190 churches, 149 station ministers, 204 physicians and 261 commission merchants.

....Late papers from Richmond contain the following news:—Shoes per pair are ranging from $40 to $45 for desirable styles; felt hats, ready sale at $67; Peas $28 per bushel; white beans from $10 to $11 per peck. The chief cause of the scarcity and consequent high prices is said to be the demand of sutlers from the army.

....The N. Y. Herald proposes General Grant for the Presidency; once it was McClellan, then Meade, now Grant. A month hence another will be the hero of the hour. The tide of popular favor evidently sets towards a successful General as President; who knows but there may be another Bonaparte about to find a crown and throne in the debris of a republic?

....A respectable lady of Buenos Ayres recently died after a short illness. The coffin, of a light fabric, was carried to an open chapel where it was left. In the night, the supposed deceased awoke to life and a knowledge of her situation, and in her struggles threw down the coffin and broke it. The poor creature fled into the air, and when morning broke was found really dead on a hillock at some distance.

....An unfortunate man, a French Canadian, was found frozen to death in St. Valier street Quebec on Wednesday. He was poorly clad, and had a small bundle tied up in a handkerchief. Whether under influence of liquor, or overcome by fatigue, he sat down on the side walk, with his back against the side of a house, and while in this position and while passed by dozens of persons he was frozen quite stiff.

DO THEY DO IT?—We read a great deal about milkmen watering their milk, putting chalk and stuff in it; but we doubt any man's being such a pretty rascal as that. It is always best, however, to deal with persons and things above such suspicions. In Dyer's Pulmonic Wafers, you have a glorious article for the cure of coughs, colds, and sore throat. They operate quick, pleasantly, and efficiently. Twenty-five cents a box; at all Druggists.

....The Marchioness of Waterford, widow of the eccentric Irish peer, is a very able painter, and is decorating a school-room in Ford, Northumberland, with pictures of the boys and girls of the Bible. There are to be twelve of them, on twelve arched compartments. One subject is already done it shows Cain and Abel, youths of ten or twelve years of age, sacrificing; the third, Esau selling his birthright; the fourth Joseph and his brethern.

THE LUMBER TRADE.—We cannot deny that we are suffering severely in our lumber regions for want of a market for course lumber. The Americans, on account of their troubles have not made any purchases in the Province the past year, and being unable to compete with the North of Europe we can't ship it to England, but serious as this matter is, it is gratifying to know that the 'Canadian Pain Destroyer" is a great favorite among our lumbermen, for curing coughs, sudden colds, cramps in the stomach, bruises, bruises, frost-bites, chilblains, &c., and they do not depend upon a foreign market for it. It is sold by all Medicine Dealers at 25 cents per bottle.

Communications.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

SIR,—On Saturday, 19th December, John Shorten, Esq., Inspector of Tavern Licenses for the Township of Dummer, summoned Wm. Heathcote, before Messrs. Robert Greenwood and Robert Strickland, Esq's, two of Her Majesty's Justices of the Peace for the County of Peterborough. The summons was issued upon information being given to the Inspector that the said Wm. Heathcote was selling liquor without license. There was no difficulty whatever in proving the facts of the case; indeed, it was admitted by the Defendant that he had sold liquor without license. But a difficulty arose in consequence of a printed By-law given to the Inspector by the Municipal Council upon his appointment to office, and upon which he has acted during the whole year in granting certificates, &c. But the magistrates would not admit the By-law having any force, nor would they give judgment against the Defendant unless the Inspector would produce a By-law certified by the Township Clerk, that such By-law was passed by the Municipal Council of the Township of Douro. The Inspector not being in possession of any such By-law the case fell through; the Inspector had to pay the costs; and Mr. Heathcote can sell liquor without license.

It is the opinion of many people that Magistrates should know the law; but you, Mr. Editor, we know, are well posted up in all matters of this kind, and by giving us your opinion upon the above, you would greatly oblidge one that is very desirous to have houses of public entertainment kept according to the laws of our country. From yours respectfully,

A FRIEND TO TEMPERANCE.

KNOWLE PARK,
North Douro, Dec. 23, 1863.

The magistrates should have remanded the case until the proper evidence could have been procured. To make a mess pay for discharging his duy is a new phase of magistrates' duty.—EDITOR EXAMINER.

OFFICIAL APPOINTMENTS.

His Excellency the Governor General has been pleased to appointed—

Tancrede Bouthillier, Esq., of the city of Montreal, to be Sheriff of the district of Montreal.

Edward Carter, Q. C., and the Hon. Louis Antonie Dessaulles, to be Joint Clerk of the Peace and of the Sessions of the Peace.

Benjamin Holmes, Esq., of the City of Montreal, to be Collector of Her Majesty's Customs, at the Port of Montreal.

TURKEY AND THE CONGRESS.

(From the Levant Herald, November 26.)

On Friday last a special audience was given by the Sultan at the palace of Dolma-Baktche, to the Marquis de Moustiers, the French embassador; the grand vizier, and the minister of foreign affairs, with a number of high palace functionaries, taking part in the proceedings. The object of the audience, fixed by previous arrangement, was to receive from the hands of the embassador an autograph letter of the Emperor of the French, inviting the Sultan to attend the Congress of European sovereigns proposed to be held in Paris. His majesty gave the embassador, a very cordial reception, and stated that he would willingly accept the Emperor's invitation, if the other sovereigns of Europe also accepted it, and the congress actually assembled; and added that personally he would be glad of such an opportunity of making the acquaintance of the Emperor of the French and of other European potentates. M. de Moustiers at once telegraphed to the Tuileries the result of his mission; and we have reason to believe that to-morrow's mail will convey to Mohamet Djemil Pacha the embassador of the Porte at Paris, the Sultan's autograph letter accepting the Emperor's invitation to the congress in the terms indicated by his majesty's verbal expressions to the representative of France. His majesty further expressly stipulates, as a condition of his acceptance, that those questions which it is intended to lay before the Congress shall be in the first instance submitted to his knowledge; and he concludes by making the remark that his presence at the congress will be a striking evidence and illustration of the engagements entered into by the great powers for the maintenance of the integrity of the Ottoman Empire.

CHILDREN'S ARMS AND LEGS.

A distinguished physician who died some years since in Paris, declared: "I believe that during the 26 years that I have practiced my profession in this city, twenty thousand children have been carried to the cemeteries a sacrifice to the absurd custom of exposing their arms naked." On this the editor of the Philadelphia Medical and Surgical Reporter remarks: "Put the bulb of a thermometer in a baby's mouth, the mercury rises to 90 degrees. Now carry the same to its little hand; if the arm be bare and the evening cool, the mercury will sink to 40 degrees. Of course all the blood that flows through those arms must fall from 20 to 40 degrees below the temperature of the heart. Need I say, when these currents of blood flow back into the chest the child's vitality must be more or less compromised? And need I add that we ought not to be surprised at its frequent recurring affection of the tongue, throat or stomach!—I have seen more than one child with habitual cough and hoarseness, choking with mucous, entirely and permanently relieved by simply keeping the hands and arms warm. Every observing and progressive physician has daily opportunities of witnessing the same cure."

REMEDY FOR DIPTHERIA.

The following receipe for dipatheria—a disease that is becoming dangerously prevalent throughout the country—we copy from the New York Tribune:

We have received a receipe for the cure of diptheria from a physician who says that of a thousand cases in which it has been used, not a single patient has been lost. The treatment consists in thoroughly swabbing the back of the mouth and throat with a wash made thus: Table salt, two drachmas; black pepper, golden seal, nitrate of potash, alum, one drachm each. Mix and pulverize, put into a tumbler, which half fill with boiling water, stir well, and then fill up with good vinegar. Use every half hour, one, two and four hours, as recovery progresses. The patient may swallow a little each time. Apply one ounce each of spirits of turpentine, sweet oil, and aqua ammonia, mixed, to the whole of the throat, and to the breast bone every four hours, keeping flannel to the part.

THE PRICE OF A KISS.—Last evening one John Ayres, a married man, was charged before J. Galliford, Esq., with kissing Rachael Ogden, also married. Rachel, who, it appears, was in the employment of the defendant, swore that Ayres on the 11th instant, entered her house "took hold of her shoulders and kissed her." Ayres did not deny the "soft impeachment," but pleaded in extenuation, that he kissed Rachel at her own request. There was no evidence, however, to show this. His Worship, therfore, ordered the gay Benedict to pay a fine of $5 and costs.—Ingersoll Chronicle.

LAKE SUPERIOR MAILS.—The Globe says —The contract for carrying the mails on the Upper Lakes has been awarded to Captain Perry and Mr. E. M. Carruthers they having made the lowest tender amounting to between six and seven thousand dollars. We are glad to find that Toronto owners, so enterprising and reliable, have taken this job in hand. There is no doubt their efforts will be successful. The route is a good one, and will improve every year. We understand that a steamer will be chartered for next season, but that a first-class vessel will be built especially for the service.

SUITS FOR SEDUCTION.

In giving judgment for an application for a new trial, in an action of Seduction, Chief Justice Draper alluded to the present state of the law relating to such actions in terms of strong disapprobation.

Mr Justice Sherwood fully concurred in his Lordship's disapprobation of the existing law.

During the judgment, the Chief Justice made the following remarks:

"I cannot help saying I think the law is in an unsatisfactory state, and that if it were possible to deter parties from the speculation of suits which are the foundation of the system, it would do more for the moral tone of society than giving damages against one of the offending parties upon the evidence of the other. The trials themselves do harm, as every one who has witnessed them must admit, when he calls to mind the ill-suppressed disturbance among the audience when anything particularly flagrant detailed in evidence, was proved upon witnesses under examination. Verdicts for the plaintiff (verdicts for the defendant are rare) certainly fail to prevent seduction, or to operate as a warning against yielding to it, and there are too many instances in which a calm review of the case leads to the conclusion that the female seduced would not have yielded her chastity if the seducer would not have been a good matrimonial connexion, or a good mark for damages if he could not be coaxed or frightened into marriage. That there are cases of a different description, in which the conduct of the defendant has been inhuman, and deserving of severe chastisement, no one will deny; but I cannot say that the majority of cases which have come under my notice are of that description, and even in those I do not think a large pecuniary verdict, however it may be a solace to the plaintiff in the action, produces the greatest protection or advantage to the community.

QUICK WORK IN COAT MAKING.

In 1811, Sir John Throckmorton, a Berkshire Baronet, offered to lay a wager of a thousand guineas to the following effect:—That at eight o'clock on a particular evening, he would sit down to dinner in a well-woven, well-dyed, well-made up suit, the wool of which formed the fleece on the sheep's backs at five o'clock on that same morning. It was no wonder that among a class of persons accustomed to betting, such a wager should be eagerly accepted, seeing that the achievement of the challenged result appeared all but impossible. Mr. Coxeter, or Greenham Mills, at Newberry, was entrusted with the work.

At five o'clock in the morning, on the 28th day of June, he caused two Southdown sheep to be shorn. The wool was washed, carded, scubbed, roven, spun and woven; the cloth was scoured, fulled, tented, raised, sheared, dyed and dressed; the tailor was at hand, and made up and finished the cloth into garments; and at a quarter past six in the evening, Sir John Throckmorton sat down to dinner at the head of his guests, in a complete damask-colored suit that had been thus made—winning the wager, with an hour and three-quarters to spare. Of course, every possible preparation was made beforehand; but still the achievement was sufficiently remarkable, and was long talked of with pride among the clothiers.

MARRIAGE OF LORD ABINGER.—The morning at half-past ten o'clock, Lieutenant Colonel Lord Abinger, S. F. Guards, was married at the Cathedral by His Lordship the Metropolitan, to Miss Ella Magruder, the lovely and accomplished daughter of Commodore Magruder, late of the United States Navy, and niece of Major-General J. B. Magruder, Commanding Confederate forces in Texas. Owing to the earliness of the hour, not twenty persons witnessed the ceremony. Among those present were the members of the Magruder family, the bride's eldest acting as bridesmaids; Lieutenant General Williams, K. C. B.; Major-General and Sarah Lindsay; Colonel Connolly, who acted as best man, and a number of officers of the Guards, comrades and friends of the bridegroom. The happy couple leave town this afternoon for Boston, where they will spend a few days.—Montreal Telegraph, Wednesday.

SHOCKING OUTRAGE.—Our readers will remember the defalcation by the express messenger, at St. Marys some months ago. The person, named Massey, was entrusted with the delivery of a sum of eight hundred dollars, to be delivered to Messrs. Simpson & Eaton, wheat buyers, St. Marys, but with which he absconded. When he was brought up for sentence, at the recent Court of Quarter Sessions at Stratford, the Judge said that, owing to the long time that the prisoner had been in jail waiting his trial, and also on account of the disposition he manifested to make reparation to the company for the injury he had done them, the sentence was made lighter than it otherwise would have been. The sentence of the court was, that the prisoner Massey be confined to jail for six months, at hard labor.—Stratford Beacon.

THE CONVICT BURNS.—This unfortunate man, who was convicted as the last criminal term of the Archbaskin Abenses, of poisoning his wife, was up before the Court of Appeals, yesterday, on the motion of his counsel, for a new trial. The Court refused to entertain the application, on the ground that the motion was informal, and that the Judge who presided at the trial was not bound to furnish the evidence upon which a conviction was obtained, unless in the proper manner and to the proper authority. Burns was present in Court, under custody, while the motion was being argued. He is a diminutive sized man, apparently above fifty years of age, with forehead quite bald. There is nothing remarkable in his features, but, on the contrary, he seems to be a person of quiet inoffensive habits. Unless the Executive interposes he will suffer, the extreme penalty of the law.—Quebec News.

PROSPECTUS OF THE

Canada Farmer

A NEW

FORTNIGHTLY JOURNAL,

OF

Agriculture, Horticulture AND RURAL AFFAIRS.

THE Subscriber has determined to make the experiment whether a first-class Agricultural Journal can be sustained in Canada. He proposes to issue early in January, 1864, the first number of The Canada Farmer, and to continue the publication on the 1st and 15th days of each month. Each number will contain sixteen pages quarto of closely printed matter. It will be printed on fine paper, from an entirely new font of type. The services of an able agricultural writer as Editor-in-Chief have been secured, and he will be assisted by an efficient staff of writers, reporters and correspondents. First-class artists and engravers have also been retained to prepare illustrations for the paper. No exertion or expenditure will be spared to render the new Journal a worthy representative and advocate of the Agricultural interests of Canada.

In the conduct of The Canada Farmer, the following ends will be zealously labored for:—

1.—To arouse public attention, by frank and temperate discussion, to all questions scientific, commercial, legislative or otherwise, specially affecting the farming interest.

2.—To stimulate the Agriculturists of our country to adopt an improved system of husbandry, by blending the lessons of modern science with the practical experience of the Canadian Farmer.

3.—To bring under the attention of our Farmers all improvements at home or abroad, worthy of adoption, affecting the management of Field Crops—the Barn-yard—the Stable—the Dairy—the Orchard—the Poultry Yard—the Apiary—the Kitchen Garden—and the Flower Garden; and to excite an interest in the progress of Rural Architecture and Landscape Gardening, and in all that concerns the Domestic Economy of the Farm-house.

4.—To mark and report all improvements in Agricultural Machinery—foster new inventions—and promote the adoption of all labor-saving machines in the work of the farm and garden.

5.—To keep prominently under attention all that specially concerns the Dairy-farmer and the Grazier; the best breeds of cattle—the best systems of feeding—the most approved processes of cheese and butter making—the best mode of packing—and the best markets to sell in.

6.—To keep prominently in view whatever is specially interesting to the Sheep-raiser and Wool-grower—the breeds best adapted to our climate—the best systems of winter and summer management—and the varying prospects of the wool market.

7.—To afford the Farmers of Canada an ever-open medium for addressing their brother Agriculturists throughout the Province, suggesting matters of common interest and advantage, and eliciting information or advice on practical questions of difficulty or doubt.

8.—To report concisely the Proceedings at Agricultural Shows, Fairs and Sales through out the Province—note the condition and progress of the Herds and Flocks of prominent Stock-breeders; record the importation of Thorough-bred stock from abroad, and publish Engravings of First Class Prize Animals.

9.—To watch and report carefully and promptly the actual state and probable prospects of the Produce Markets at home and abroad; and specially promote all movements designed to secure the best prices in the best markets for Canadian Farm Produce.

10.—To afford the Farmers of Canada a common medium, whereby all who have for sale Live Stock, or Seed Grain, or Land, or who may wish to buy such, can make his desires known directly to the whole farming population of Canada.

☞ The Canada Farmer will be published for ONE DOLLAR per annum, POSTAGE FREE payable always in advance.

CLUBS

Will be furnished at the following rates:—

TEN to One Address for.....TEN DOLLARS.
TWENTY Copies for.....TWENTY DOLLARS.
FIFTY Copies for.....TWENTY-FIVE DOLLARS.
ONE HUNDRED for.....SIXTY DOLLARS.

Communications on Agricultural subjects are invited, addressed to "The Editor of the Canada Farmer," and all orders for the paper will be sent to

GEORGE BROWN,
Proprietor and Publisher.

☞ As FIFTY THOUSAND COPIES of the first number will be printed and circulated, an unequalled opportunity for Advertisers will be presented. The charge will be twenty cents per line.

TWENTY-SIXTH BIRTHDAY

OF THE

STAR PAPER OF AMERICA!

January 1, 1864.

The New York Mercury

FOR THE

COMING YEAR.

AFTER more than a quarter of a century of uninterrupted success, The New York Mercury—standing first on the muster-roll of the Literature Press in this country—points proudly to its past career as a guarantee of new triumphs in the future.

Heretofore, it has eclipsed all rivalry; but it proposes to make the coming year memorable by eclipsing its own past history, and booming up before the world as the most marvellous specimen of a fascinating, brilliant, amusing, and comprehensive Literary Newspaper that has ever been published in either hemisphere.

THE GENIUS OF EUROPE

will be laid under contribution to give brilliancy to its columns, and side by side with original productions of the most popular romancists of the Old World, will be placed the chef d'œuvres of the most eminent story-writers of the New.

MISS M. E. BRADDON,

Authoress of "Aurora Floyd," "Lady Audley's Secret," "John Marchmont's Legacy," etc., etc., who has suddenly risen, like

A STAR OF THE FIRST MAGNITUDE

in the literary horizon of Great Britain, has been specially engaged to supply The New York Mercury from time to time with the wonderful creations of her genius, at a cost which no other weekly in America could venture to incur.

In addition to the contributions of distinguished writers and artists who have become familiar to the masses through the vast circulation of the STAR WEEKLY OF AMERICA, may be mentioned the following, all of whom are still upon its staff:

Dr. J. H. Robinson, Cousin May Carleton,
Margaret Blount, W. O. Eaton,
Ned Buntline, George Martial,
Arthur M. Grainger, Julia C. Ingraham,
Grace Gardner, Edward Willett,
Felix O. C. Darley, Mary Chief,
Miss M. E Braddon, George Albany.

Scores of other distinguished literati, under various nom de plume, contribute to its columns, while its pictorial illustrations are from the inimitable pencil of Felix O. C. Darley, Esq., the best draughtsman of the age.

The Star, which has given the coup de grace to so many pretentious publications, and half destroyed those that still survive, had added thousands to the circulation of The New York Mercury.

Its heart-stirring short story, its military historiettes, its matchless serial romances, its racy burlesques, its general wit and humor, its delicious gossip, its fairy tales for little folks, its rare poetry, its fresh and vigorous editorials the infinite variety of its contents, and the large amount of reading matter that it comprises, render it welcome everywhere, and to classes of society. Containing, as it does, of closely-printed matter, it may safely be pronounced the cheapest, as well as the best Literary Newspaper extant.

Three favorite writers, Doctor J. H. Robinson, Cousin May Carleton, and Ned Buntline, are now preparing three stories for The New York Mercury. One of these productions will be commenced in the Opening Number of the New Year. The authors being aware of this fact, are engaged in an emulative contest for precedence, and the result will unquestionably be that the most attractive story ever penned by any of the three, will commence in the

of the great REPRESENTATIVE WEEKLY of the Western World.

The New York Weekly is sold by all newsmen and periodical dealers in America. To subscribers, it is regularly mailed every Saturday morning, for $2 a year; three copies for $5; six copies for $9; eight copies for $12, with an extra copy, free, to the getter-up of the club. Six months' subscriptions received. Always write plainly the name of your Post office County and State. We take the notes of all solvent banks at par. Payment must invariably be made in advance.

☞ Specimen copies sent to all applicants.

THE

PEOPLE'S PAPER!

SUBSCRIBE FOR THE

"PETERBOROUGH EXAMINER,"

Only $1 Per Year in Advance.

What family should be without Godey's Lady's Book? It costs $3.00 a year. We will, however, furnish both the EXAMINER and LADY'S BOOK for $2.75! that is: both for 25 cents less than what you pay for the LADY'S BOOK alone. Or, to every subscriber paying in advance we will, for an extra 75 cents, furnish Madame Demorest's Mirror of Fashions, and Quarterly Journal de Grande Mode, each number of which contains large and magnificent Fashion Plates, splendid illustrations of all the fashionable and Paris novelties, for Ladies' and Children's Dress, useful information, and the four life-size Patterns, cut ready for use, etc., etc. It should be remembered that each yearly subscriber to Mme. Demorest's Mirror of Fashions is entitled to the selection of 50 cents' worth of extra patterns, or a copy of Mme. Demorest's System for cutting Children's Dresses, or for 50 cents more, the Ladies' System. That is, for 75 cents, we will give to every subscriber of the EXAMINER paying in advance, $1.50 worth. More than this, we will likewise pay the American postage, which is no small item. Those who have paid in advance are entitled to the same privilege. Or, if farmers prefer, they can, instead of the above journal, for the extra 75 cents, have Judd's celebrated American Agriculturist, which ought to be in the hands of every farmer. Names should be sent in at once.

To any one sending us 6 subscribers we will give Kinglake's Crimean War; 10 subscribers, Alcock's Tycoon Capital; 20 subscribers, Webster's Dictionary; 30 subscribers, Worcester's Largest Dictionary.

The party sending a club can, if he choose, select any other work of a smaller value. The cash must in every instance accompany the order.

A Special Premium will be given to the party sending in the largest number of subscribers by the 1st of March. Names can be sent in at any time, and will be credited as received.

AIR—Killiecrankie.

The Seawith to the Milton cam
A cliff afore the gloamin;
The frem was redden frae the skies,
And Robbie's prief was Stamin;
The tither wiz, and owre cam eagle,
Sang through the leadless plantin:
Rise up I gat, an' fear'd enough,
I speer'd what she was wantin.

Like ony warrioow she glowr'd,
The greenness, stalwart carlin;
My cosily 'neath the hallan cour'd,
An' whimper'd like a starlin:
I had her tak the meukle chair,
An hecht her cheese an' farles;
An', like a coof, I crosy'd her loof
Wi' a' my winter arles.

Wi' cowk an heel upon a deal,
She scrawl'd the marks o' Sathan;
While I for fear was like to squeel,
An' cross'd her west nose three times:
An' eye she creep'd an eldritch tune,
An' at the fire-pot hookin;
My heart was like to loup the hool—
I trembled like an aspen.

"What ails the gowk to be sae fleyed
For me, a gangrel auld wife?
For bonnie Jean ma be your bride;
Tak tent ye binna cauldrife:
She's unco shy, but earna by,
She lo'en ye dear afoddy,
An' ere the corn neist har'st be shorn,
Ye's row her in your plaidy."

The lavercok greets the simmer morn
Wi' sang ane blythe an' cheerie;
At e'en the mavis frae the thorn
Wi' music wears his dearie;
But Lackie's tidings to mine ear
Were sweeter far than either,
My een thy low'd, my bosom glow'd—
I'm rapture a thegither!

MONEY EASILY MADE,

By either Gentlemen or Ladies.

I AM in possession of a beautiful French Art, which has been introduced in this Country only to a limited extent, and that in New York City It is something which every person stands in great need of, consequently will be extensively patronized. Persons can make money with it at home or abroad. Thousands in France have made small fortunes at it, and are still doing so. I would state what it is, but persons purchasing the knowledge of it do not desire it made public. One Dollar sent to the undersigned will ensure the immediate return of a circular giving full information in the Art, and the requisite instructions to perform it. It is strictly genuine, and the best and only thing ever introduced which every person can make money at. NO LETTERS NOTICED, except those containing the required amount for instructions.

SOLDIERS in the ARMY

AND OUR PEOPLE AT HOME,

Are now offered an opportunity by which they can obtain a

GOOD AND DURABLE TIME-PIECE,

At a very Low Figure.

OUR WATCHES are warranted to keep time one year, and the buyer is allowed the privilege of examination before the payment is required.

Improved Duplex in full Ruby Actions.

A first-class Hunting Time-Piece of silver material, over which is electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, most durably wrought, making the imitation so faultless that it cannot be detected from the solid material by the most experienced Judges; acids will not affect it. London made movement. Improved Duplex in full Ruby Actions has sweep seconds, and is not to be excelled in general appearance. This decidedly the one of the best articles ever offered for traders and speculators. Engineers, emigrants and persons travelling will find them superior to any other; alteration of climate will not affect their accuracy. Price, packed in good shape and good running order, only $25, or case of 5 for $200.

Silver Double Time Hunting Levers,

Best quality silver cases, over which electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, similar to our improved Duplex, and superior adjusted movements with "stop," to be used in timing horses, ect.; has four ladezes for Washington and Greenwich time, sweep second, and all the improvements. All in all, taking its beautiful and faultless appearance and its superior movement into consideration, we regard it as decidedly the cheapest article of the kind in the market. Price, in good running order, $35, or case of 6 for $200.

☞ We ask no pay in advance, but will forward either of them to responsible parties, in any part of the loyal States, with bill payable to the express-man when the Good are delivered, giving the buyer the privilege of examination, and, if not satisfactory, the watch can be returned at our expense.

The express companies refuse making collections on soldiers, and other parties in the disloyal States, consequently all such orders must be accompanied by the cash to insure attention. We make a deduction on either Watch when the payment is forwarded in advance.

Money may be sent by express at our expense.

MANHOOD

AND THE

VIGOR OF YOUTH RESTORED

IN FOUR WEEKS,

By Dr. Sicotte's Essence of Life.

DR. SICOTTE, (OF PARIS) after years of earnest solicitation, has at length acceded to the urgent request of the American public, and appointed as agent in Toronto for the sale of his valued and highly prized Essence of Life. This wonderful agent will restore Manhood to the most shattered constitutions, whether arising from excesses, the effects of climate, or natural causes. The time required to cure the most inveterate case is four weeks; and if used according to printed instructions, which are very simple, failure is impossible. The life-restoring remedy should be taken by all about to marry, as its effects are permanent. It is acknowledged by the medical press to be the greatest discovery ever made. Its developing powers are miraculous. Success in every case is as certain as that science overthrows ignorance.

Dr. Sicotte's Essence of Life is sold in cases, with full instructions for use, at $3, or four quantities in one for $9, and will be sent to any part, carefully packed, on receipt of remittance to his accredit agent.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK,

FOR 1864.

GREAT LITERARY & PICTORAL YEAR.

THE PUBLISHER of Godey's Lady's Book, [illegible] has resolved to publish it throughout for the best sixty-four pages of a larger size than any in America, has made an arrangement with the most popular authoress in this country—

MARION HARLAND,

Author of "Alone," "Hidden Path," "Moss Side," and "Nemesis,"

Who will furnish Stories for the Lady's Book for 1864. This alone will place the Lady's Book in a literary point of view far ahead of any other Magazine. Our other favourite writers will be unrivalled to furnish articles throughout the year.

The best Lady's Magazine in the world and the Cheapest.

THE LITERATURE

In of that kind that can be read aloud in the family circle, and the clergy in immense numbers are subscribers for the Book.

THE PLATES

Is all original and would cost 25 cents, (the price of the book) in the single stores; instead of it is engraved, and cannot be obtained except in Godey.

OUR STEEL ENGRAVINGS

All efforts to rival us in this have failed, and we now stand alone in this department, giving as we do many more and infinitely better engravings than are published in any other work.

Godey [illegible] Fashion Plates.

[illegible] Fashion Plates are universally admitted to be the best published, and we [illegible] give fully two—are far ahead of any Fashions in Europe or America. The fabrication of these Plates cost $10,000 more than the Fashion Plates of the old style, and nothing but our wonderfully large circulation enables us to give them. Other Magazines must adopt it. We never spare money when the public can be benefited.

These Fashions may be relied on. Dresses may be made after them, and the wearer will not subject herself to ridicule, as she would be if she visited the large cities dressed after the style of the plates in some of our so-called Fashion Magazines.

OUR WOOD ENGRAVINGS,

Of which we give two or three times as many as any other Magazine, are often mistaken for steel; they are so far superior to any others.

IMITATIONS.

Beware of them. Remember that the Lady's Book is the original publication and the cheapest. If you take Godey, you want no other Magazine. Everything that is useful or ornamental in a house will be found in Godey.

DRAWING LESSONS.

No other Magazine gives them, and we have given enough to fill several large volumes.

OUR RECEIPTS

Are such as can be found nowhere else. Cooking in all its varieties—Confectionary—the Nursery—the Toilet—the Laundry—the Kitchen Receipts upon all subjects are to be found in the pages of the Lady's Book. We originally started this department, and have peculiar facilities for making it most perfect. This department alone is worth the price of the book.

LADIES' WORK TABLE.

This department comprises engravings and descriptions of every article that a lady wears.

MODEL COTTAGES.

No other Magazine has [illegible] department.

Terms to Subscribers in the British Provinces:

One copy one year, $2; two copies one year, $3; three copies one year, $5.

Five copies one year, and an extra copy to the person sending the club, making six copies for $11.50.

Special Clubbing with other Magazines.

Godey's Lady's Book and Arthur's Magazine, one year, $3.

Godey and Harper, one year, $5.

Godey, Harper, and Arthur, one year, $7.

At these prices subscribers in the Provinces will have only the British postage to pay.

Treasury notes and notes of all solvent banks taken at par.

☞ The discovery of combining pill with sugar emanated with Dr. Herrick. All others are counterfeits and if used, will do harm, and disappoint the sick. Herrick's pills are elegantly put up, 50 in a box, with a fac-simile of Herrick's name, and sell for 25 cents a box, 5 boxes for $1.

Herrick's Kid Strengthening Plaster.

THE GREAT STRENGTHENER AND PAIN DESTROYER. THE BEST AND CHEAPEST HOUSEHOLD REMEDY IN THE WORLD.

These renowned Plasters cure pains, weakness and distress in the back, sides and breast, in five hours. Indeed, so certain are they to do them, that the proprietor warrants them. Spread from rennet, balmoral and grass, on beautiful kid leather, renders them peculiarly adapted to the wants of females and others. Their application is universal—equally to the strong man, the feeble woman, and the delicate infant. To each and all they will prove a balm and a blessing. Their use is agreeable, and without annoyance or trouble.—Each Plaster will wear from one to four months, and in rheumatic complaints, sprains and bruises, frequently effect cures when all other remedies fail. Full directions will be found on the back of each. Public speakers, vocalists, ministers of the gospel, and others, will strengthen their lungs and improve their voices by wearing them on chest breast. From 10 cents to $1 each. The above articles are sold by all the dealers in Canada, and by druggists throughout the United States and South America, and wholesale by all large druggists in the principal cities.

Original Poetry.

For the Examiner.

ON THE DEATH OF MRS. ROBERT MULLIKEN,
LATE OF OTONABEE.

She has gone to her home in the "Land of the blest'd,"
She has entered, at last, her "Sabbath of rest;"
Her toil and afflictions are all at an end,
She's safe in the arms of her "husband" and "friend."

Left to mourn her here mourning to shed the sad tear;
No friend to console them that nearly so dear
Both lonely and weary their pathway to tread
Till numbered with her in the lists of the dead.

But why recall her to this "vale of tears,"
A prey to life's ills, while numbering her years;
Ah, no! let them rather embrace the sharp rod,
And meekly submit to the will of their God.

He knows what is best, and will do all things right,
The moon will shine clearly, tho' dark be the night;
His promise is sure for their spiritual food,
That all things will work for his own children's good.

Although they are parted its but for a time;
May they meet, bless again in a happier clime
Where "sorrow and sighing" shall flee away, annoy,
Nor tears about parting embitter their joy.

With sweet resignation, oh, then let them say:
The Lord he has given, has taken away;
Then bless'd be for ever His glorious name,
Through ages eternal "Amen and amen."

STORY OF EMILE ROQUE.

(Concluded.)

After the conversation the criminal had grown more communicative. Something of the ease, he opened himself with sketching from memory some of the words of Watteau's nymphs upon his prison walls. His mother had died, fortunately, only a few days after the rendering of the verdict, without knowing, however, what fate was to befall her son.

It was rumored that when this event was made known to him he gave way to passionate tears and sending him for the priest, made a full confession of his crime and its causes. This confession had occasioned that turn in popular sympathy of which I have spoken. The friends of the Count, however and even his own legal advisers (as I was told) regarded it only as an ingenious appeal for mercy.

For myself, notwithstanding the lack of positive evidence to sustain his statements, I have been always inclined to believe his story a true one.

The main points in the confession were these: He had loved Virginia C—— as she had not deserved to be loved. He was happy; he had fortune, health, and every thing to insure content. Monsieur C—— welcomed him to his family. His mother rejoiced in the cheerfulness and sunny prospects of her only child. His father (he knew it only from his mother's lips) had been a general in the wars of Napoleon, and had died before his recollection.

He had been little concerned to inquire regarding the character or standing of his father, until, as the marriage day approached, it became necessary to secure legal testimonials respecting his patrimony and name.

No general of the name of Roque had ever served in the wars of Napoleon or in the armies of France! For the first time the laughing dream of his life was disturbed. With his heart full, and his brain on fire, he appealed to his mother for explanation.

She had none to give. Amidst tears and sobs, the truth was wrung from her, that he, the gay-hearted Emile, whose life was full of promise—could claim no legal parentage. But the man who had so wronged both him and herself was still alive; and, with the weakness of her sex, she assured him that he was of noble birth, and had never shown tenderness toward any woman save herself.

Who was this noble father, on whose riches the son was living? No entreaties or threats could wrn the secret from the mother.

Then it was that the change had come over the character of Emile; then it was that he had deserted the smiling nymphs of Watteau for the despairing castaway of Gericault.

Too proud to bring a tarnished escutcheon to his marriage rites; doubting of that stain would not mar both father and mother to reclaim, he had himself urged the postponement of the legal arrangements. One slight hope—slighter than that belonging to the castaway of the wrecked Medusa—sustained him. The mother (she avowed it with tears of grief,) had become such only under solemn promise of marriage from one she had never doubted.

To find this recreant father was now the aim of the wrecked life of Emile. With this frail hope electrifying his despair, he pushed his enquiries in every quarter, and solaced his thought with his unpremeditated work in the corner saloon of the Louvre.

In the chamber of his mother was a little escritoire, kept always closed and locked. His resolution, after a time, reached them-selves there. He broke the fastenings, and found within a miniature a book of hair, a packet of letters signed, De Roquefort. Of these last he kept only one; the others he destroyed, as so many tokens of shame. That fatal one he bore with him away from Paris, sent from the influence of his mother. He pushed his inquiries with the cautious cunning of a man crazed by a single thought. He found at length the real address of the Count de Roquefort. He hurried to his presence, bearing always with him the letter of promise, so ruthlessly broken.

The Count was startled by his appearance, and startled still more by the wildness of his story and of his demands. The son probed the father to make good, at this late day, the promises of his youth.

The Count replied evasively; he promised to assist the claimant with money, and with his influence, and would engage to make him heir to the larger part of his fortune.

All this fell coldly upon the ear of the excited Emile. He wished restitution to his mother. Nothing less could be listened to.

The Count urged the scandal which would grow out of such a measure; with his years and reputation, he could not think of exposing himself to the ribald tongues of the world. Moreover, the publicity which must necessarily belong to the marriage would, he considered, be of serious injury to Emile himself. The fact of his illegitimacy was unknown; the old relation of his mother to himself was a secret one; the obstacles which might now lie in the way of his own marriage to Virginia C—— were hardly worth consideration, when compared with the inconvenience which would follow a public exposure of the circumstances. He set before Emile the immense advantages of the fortune which he would secure to him on his (the Count's) death, provided only he was content to forbear his urgence as regarded his mother.

Emile listened coldly, calmly. There was but one thought in his mind—only one hope; there must be restitution to his mother, or he would take justice in his own hands. The Count must make good his promise, or the consequences would be fatal. He gave the Count two days for reflection.

At the end of that time he returned, prepared for any emergency. The Count had utterly refused him justice: he had uttered his own death warrant.

His mother was no longer living to feel the sting of the exposure. For himself, he had done all in his power to make her name good; he had no ties to the world; he was ready for the worst.

Such was the relation of Emile; and there was a supernumerary about it, and an agreement with the main facts established by evidence, which gave it an air of probability.

But, on the other hand, it was alleged by the friends of the Count that such a relation on his part never could have existed; that not the slightest evidence of it could be found among his papers, nor did the recollection of his oldest friends offer the smallest confirmation. The reported conversation of Emile with the Count were, they contended, only an ingenious fiction.

Singularly enough, there was nothing among the effects of the deceased Madame Roque to confirm the allegation that she had ever borne the name of Amedee Burne. She had been known only to her oldest acquaintance of the capital as Madame Roque; of her previous history, nothing could be ascertained.

The solitary exclamation of that lady, "Il s'y pere!" was instanced as proof that Emile was laboring under a grievous delusion.

Notwithstanding this, my own impression was that Emile had executed savage justice upon the betrayer of his mother.

V.

On the month of March—a very cold month in that year—I had returned to Paris and taken up my old quarters in a hotel garni of the Rue des Beaux Arts.

Any public interest or curiosity which had belonged to the trial and story of Emile Roque had passed away. French journalists do not keep alive an interest of that sort by any reports upon the condition of the prisoner. They barely announce the execution of his sentence upon the succeeding day. I had, by accident only, heard of his occasional occupation in sketching the heads of some of Watteau's nymphs upon the walls of his cell. I could scarce believe this of him. It seemed to me that his fancy would run rather in the direction of the horrors of Gericault.

I felt an irresistible desire to see him once again. There was no hope of this except I should be present at the execution. I had never witnessed an execution; had never cared to witness one. But I wished to look once more on the face of Emile Roque.

The executions at Paris take place without announcement, and usually at daybreak, upon the square fronting the great prison of La Roquette. No order is issued until a late hour on the preceeding evening, when the state executioner is directed to have the guillotine brought at midnight to the prison square, and a corps of soldiery is detailed for special service (unmentioned) in that quarter of the city. My only chance of witnessing the scene was in arranging with one of the small wine-merchants, who keep open house in that neighborhood until after midnight, to despatch a messenger to me when he should see preparations commenced.

This arrangement I effected, and on the 22nd of March I was aroused from sleep at a little before one in the morning by a bearded man, who had felt his way up the long flight of stairs to my room, and informed me that the guillotine had arrived before the prison of Roquette.

My thought flashed on the instant to the figure of Emile as I had seen him before the Shepherdesses of Watteau—as I had seen him before the Shipwreck. I dressed hurriedly and groped my way below.

The night was dark and consumedly cold. A little aloof had fallen, and which now crumpled under my feet as I made my way toward the quay. Although there, not a cab was to be found in the usual stand, so I pushed on across the river, and under the colonnade of the palace of the Louvre, casting my eye toward the wing of the great building where I had seen, for the first time, the face which I was shortly to look on for the last time on earth.

Finding no cabs in the square before the palace, I went on through the dark streets of Anne and Grammont, until I reached the Boulevard. A few voitures de remise were opposite the Cafe Foy. I appealed to the drivers of two of them in vain, and only succeeded by a bribe in inducing a third to drive me to the Place de la Roquette. It is a long way from the centre of Paris, under the shadow almost of Pere la Chaise. I tried to keep a reckoning of the streets through which we passed, but I could note only fragments of names. Sometimes my eye fell upon what seemed to be a familiar sign, but in a moment all was strange again. The lamps appeared to me to burn dimly; the houses along the way grew smaller and smaller. From time to time I saw a wine-shop still open; but not a soul was moving on the streets, with the exception of, here and there, a brace of sergents de ville. At length we seemed to have passed out of the range even of the city patrol, and I was beginning to entertain very unpleasant suspicions of the coachman, and of the quarter into which he might be taking me at that dismal hour of the night, when he drew up his horse before a little wine-shop, which I soon recognized as the one where I had left my order for the dispatch of the night's messenger. I knew now that the guillotine was near.

As I alighted I could see, away to my right, the dim outlines of the prison walls, looming against the night sky, with not a single light in its gratings.

The broad square before the prison door was sheeted out over with sleet, and the leafless trees that girdled it round stood ghost-like in the snow. Through the branches, and not far from the prison gates, I could see in the grey light (for it was now hard upon three o'clock) a knot of persons collected around a frame-work of timber, which I knew was the guillotine.

I made my way there, the sleet ground crunching under my feet. The workmen had just finished their arrangements. Two of the city police were there, to preserve order, and to prevent too close an approach of loiterers from the wine-shops; who only here there, perhaps, at this hour, a dozen in number.

I could pass near enough to observe fully the construction of the machine. There was, first, a broad platform, perhaps fifteen feet square, supported by movable trestle-work, and elevated some six or seven feet from the ground. A flight of [illegible] broad enough for three to walk [illegible]. Immediately before the centre of this steps, upon the platform, was stretched [illegible] a trough of plank; and from the further end of this trough rose two strong uprights of the timber, perhaps ten feet in height. These were connected at the top by a light frame-work, and immediately below [illegible] by the light of a solitary street lamp which flickered near by, I could see the glistening of the knife. Beside the trough-like box was placed a long willow basket: its shape explained to me its purpose. At the end of the trough, and beyond the upright timbers, was placed a tub: with a shudder, I recognized its purpose also.

The prison gates were only a few rods distant from the steps to the scaffold, and directly opposite them. They were still closed and dark.

The executive, I learned, was to take place at six. A few loiterers, mostly in blouses, came up from time to time to join the group about the scaffold.

By four o'clock there was the sound of tramping feet, one or two quick words of command, and presently a battalion of the Municipal Guard, without drum-beat, marched in at the lower extremity of the square, approached the scaffold, and, having stacked their arms, loitered with the rest.

Lights now began to appear at the windows of the prison. A new corps of police came up and cleared a wider space around the guillotine. A cold gray light stole, after a time, over the eastern sky.

By five o'clock the battalion of the Guards had formed a hedge of bayonets from either side of the prison doors, extending beyond and inclosing the scaffold. A squadron of mounted men had also come up on the ground, and was drawn up in line, a short distance to one side. Two officials appeared now upon the scaffold, and gave trial to the knife. They let slip the cord or chain which held it to its place, and the knife fell with a quick, sharp clang, that I thought must have reached to ears within the walls of the prison. Twice more they made their trial, and twice more I heard the clang.

Meantime people were gathering. Market-women [illegible] the city lingered at sight of the unusual spectacle, and a hung dred or more soldiers from a neighboring barrack had now joined the crowd of lookers-on. A few women from the near houses had brought their children; and a half-dozen boys had climbed into the trees for a better view.

At intervals, from the position which I held, I could see the prison doors open for a moment, and the light of a lantern within, as some officer passed in or out.

I remember that I stamped the ground impatiently—it was so cold. Again and again I looked at my watch.

Fifteen minutes to six!

It was fairly daylight now, though the morning was dark and cloudy, and a fine, searching mist was in the air.

A man in blouse placed a bag of sawdust at the foot of the gallows. The crowd must have now numbered a thousand. An old market-woman stood next to me. She saw me look at my watch, and asked the hour.

"Eight minutes to six!"

"Mon Dieu; [illegible] encore!"

She was eager for the sight.

I could have trembled this near by the beating of my heart.

What was Emile Roque doing within those doors? praying? struggling? was the fiend of the executory on him? I could not separate him now from the fearful picture; I was straining my vision to catch a glimpse—out of Emile Roque.

...ing my eyes toward the wing of the great building where I had seen, for the first time, the face which I was shortly to look on for the last time on earth.

Finding no cabs in the square before the palace, I went on through the dark streets of Anne and Grammont, until I reached the Boulevard. A few voitures de remise were opposite the Cafe Foy. I appealed to the drivers of two of them in vain, and only succeeded by a bribe in inducing a third to drive me to the Place de la Roquette. It is a long way from the centre of Paris, under the shadow almost of Pere la Chaise. I tried to keep a reckoning of the streets through which we passed, but I could note only fragments of names. Sometimes my eye fell upon what seemed to be a familiar sign, but in a moment all was strange again. The lamps appeared to me to burn dimly; the houses along the way grew smaller and smaller. From time to time I saw a wine-shop still open; but not a soul was moving on the streets, with the exception of, here and there, a brace of sergents de ville. At length we seemed to have passed out of the range even of the city patrol, and I was beginning to entertain very unpleasant suspicions of the coachman, and of the quarter into which he might be taking me at that dismal hour of the night, when he drew up his horse before a little wine-shop, which I soon recognized as the one where I had left my order for the dispatch of the night's messenger. I knew now that the guillotine was near.

As I alighted I could see, away to my right, the dim outlines of the prison walls, looming against the night sky, with not a single light in its gratings.

The broad square before the prison door was sheeted out over with sleet, and the leafless trees that girdled it round stood ghost-like in the snow. Through the branches, and not far from the prison gates, I could see in the grey light (for it was now hard upon three o'clock) a knot of persons collected around a frame-work of timber, which I knew was the guillotine.

I made my way there, the sleeted ground crunching under my feet. The workmen had just finished their arrangements. Two of the city police were there, to preserve order, and to prevent too close an approach of loiterers from the wine-shops; who only here there, perhaps, at this hour, a dozen in number.

I could pass near enough to observe fully the construction of the machine. There was, first, a broad platform, perhaps fifteen feet square, supported by movable trestle-work, and elevated some six or seven feet from the ground. A flight of [illegible] broad enough for three to walk [illegible]. Immediately before the centre of this steps, upon the platform, was stretched [illegible] a trough of plank; and from the further end of this trough rose two strong uprights of the timber, perhaps ten feet in height. These were connected at the top by a light frame-work, and immediately below [illegible] by the light of a solitary street lamp which flickered near by, I could see the glistening of the knife. Beside the trough-like box was placed a long willow basket: its shape explained to me its purpose. At the end of the trough, and beyond the upright timbers, was placed a tub: with a shudder, I recognized its purpose also.

The prison gates were only a few rods distant from the steps to the scaffold, and directly opposite them. They were still closed and dark.

The executive, I learned, was to take place at six. A few loiterers, mostly in blouses, came up from time to time to join the group about the scaffold.

By four o'clock there was the sound of tramping feet, one or two quick words of command, and presently a battalion of the Municipal Guard, without drum-beat, marched in at the lower extremity of the square, approached the scaffold, and, having stacked their arms, loitered with the rest.

Lights now began to appear at the windows of the prison. A new corps of police came up and cleared a wider space around the guillotine. A cold gray light stole, after a time, over the eastern sky.

By five o'clock the battalion of the Guards had formed a hedge of bayonets from either side of the prison doors, extending beyond and inclosing the scaffold. A squadron of mounted men had also come up on the ground, and was drawn up in line, a short distance to one side. Two officials appeared now upon the scaffold, and gave trial to the knife. They let slip the cord or chain which held it to its place, and the knife fell with a quick, sharp clang, that I thought must have reached to ears within the walls of the prison. Twice more they made their trial, and twice more I heard the clang.

Meantime people were gathering. Market-women [illegible] the city lingered at sight of the unusual spectacle, and a hundred or more soldiers from a neighboring barrack had now joined the crowd of lookers-on. A few women from the near houses had brought their children; and a half-dozen boys had climbed into the trees for a better view.

At intervals, from the position which I held, I could see the prison doors open for a moment, and the light of a lantern within, as some officer passed in or out.

I remember that I stamped the ground impatiently—it was so cold. Again and again I looked at my watch.

Fifteen minutes to six!

It was fairly daylight now, though the morning was dark and cloudy, and a fine, searching mist was in the air.

A man in blouse placed a bag of sawdust at the foot of the gallows. The crowd must have now numbered a thousand. An old market-woman stood next to me. She saw me look at my watch, and asked the hour.

"Eight minutes to six!"

"Mon Dieu; [illegible] encore!"

She was eager for the sight.

I could have trembled this near by the beating of my heart.

What was Emile Roque doing within those doors? praying? struggling? was the fiend of the executory on him? I could not separate him now from the fearful picture; I was straining my vision to catch a glimpse—out of Emile Roque.

...ing [illegible] part of their [illegible] repair!

Two minutes of it!

I saw a dusty rush of men to that [illegible] path that topped the palace wall; they [illegible] their bodies were flung into space.

There was a movement [illegible] up—"Le voici!" [illegible] crushing forward between two [illegible] word to cast for [illegible] and then rolled for [illegible] the [illegible] brain visibly pulsated behind him; [illegible] his face was pale—deathly pale; [illegible] mustache [illegible] and the [illegible] [illegible] toward the [illegible] under the [illegible].

I looked toward the [illegible]; at the supreme moment the brain instinct in [illegible] rolled for a last struggle. Physically he was, he had rallied up his every [illegible] there and withdrawn his soul from the fatal opening. Now, indeed, his face wore the terrible expression of the picture. Hate, fear, exultation, despair, were blended in the look. But the man mastered him; they thrust him down; I could see him writhe vainly. My eyes fell again.

I heard a clang—an thud.

There was a movement in the throng around me. When I looked next at the scaffold a man in blouse was sprinkling saw-dust here and there. Two others were lifting the long willow basket into a corded cart. I could see now that the [illegible] was painted of a dull red color, so that no blood stains would show.

I moved away with the throng, the [illegible] crumpling under my feet.

I could not [illegible] all day; I could not sleep on the following night.

I never go now to the gallery of the Louvre but I shun the [illegible] of the wrecked Medusa as I would a pestilence.

TALKS ABOUT HEALTH.

BY DIO LEWIS, M. D.

OPEN FIRES VS. STOVES AND FURNACES.

Among health topics, this is one of the most important. In this latitude perhaps no other is so vital.

In fitting up a house for my family, I should begin with: "An open fire in every room except bed-rooms." [illegible] at all practicable, it should be so [illegible] one of those great, generous, old-fashioned fire-places! How it fills the family group with a comfortable, genial spirit! To supply the draught, the air of the room is momentarily changed. The carbonic acid and other excretions of the animal body cannot accumulate; the room cannot smell close, even when crowded.

Strange the people will not have this delightful [illegible] in their houses, at any cost or sacrifice. And grey, now, why not have it all back again? It is a small part of the money we spend in various foolish fashions [illegible] gives to the [illegible] of this good old-fashioned blessing, [illegible] and happier we all should be.

OPEN COAL-GRATES.

Next to an open wood-fire, [illegible] grate in the best modern [illegible] is [illegible] tilating. And if, with a good draught, the coal used to be bituminous, it is a very [illegible] coal fire.

STOVES AND FURNACES.

There has been a fearful [illegible] consumption, bronchitis, and many other affections, since the general introduction of stoves and furnaces. If with a high degree of heat, the doors and windows are kept open, during the entire winter, [illegible] and comfortably done; the evil is not be so great, but as generally managed it is the gravest mistake in our [illegible].

If in the window shutter of a [illegible] you open a small aperture, and look to the jet of light as it [illegible] through the room, you will discover that the air is full of floating motes. The air of your house is crowded with these. In their [illegible] condition they are not mischievous [illegible] they have been exposed to contact with heated surfaces, they do poison us. [illegible] of these carbonized particles come from the stove or furnace to poison our [illegible] blood.

If you would have [illegible] throat, [illegible] nerves, all by an equal [illegible], and keep as [illegible] as possible from [illegible] and furnaces. If you cannot [illegible] with [illegible] clothing, especially [illegible] and keep the door and windows [illegible].

FIRE IN [illegible].

Most people, even many [illegible] furnaces, hope the [illegible] to sleep in a cold room is good—[illegible] to health. It is an error. It is better to have an open fire in your bedroom. The [illegible] is only by this means constantly changed with the fire you will have the [illegible] which will add greatly to the [illegible] lation. But once [illegible] you will have fewer [illegible] which is a gain, as a large number of [illegible] not only interfere [illegible] circulation and respiration, but [illegible] escape of those gases which the [illegible] constantly emitting. Even [illegible] heat with an open [illegible] is [illegible] close cold room. [illegible] ternal atmosphere depends [illegible] ence between the [illegible] within and that without.

But let us have the [illegible] go without saying, [illegible] refinery of all [illegible] may be [illegible] of 187[illegible] I [illegible] at [illegible] if [illegible]

THE MAYORALTY.

The ordeal is over! The Mayor is elected and is to act like gallant Captain. The ship has come in long as there was any hope, but encouragingly a little longer. He has only yielded to circumstances. That future-loving Virtuous, him, then, smiled complacently upon him. The Captain, we think, has had financial to complain of his fellow-men. They did not come to the rescue in any regular. There was a marked contrast between their conduct and that of their leaders. They did not charge with him. He was distinguished by them and he does not hesitate to say so. If the town has first him for mayor, after Majesty's Canadian Government is thereby able the more effectually to retain the services of a trained and efficient officer. And the Mayor, his military duties would necessarily have had to be neglected. The people, with intuitive readiness, realized this and acted accordingly. At least, this is one solution of the result of the election It may be not the correct one; but it is not an unsatisfactory one to the party upon whose heads the laurels of victory did not fall. The Captain, no doubt, would have done his best to fill the mayor's chair, and he deserves credit for the disinterested efforts he has made to accommodate his fellow townsmen in this respect. If they could not appreciate him, it was not his fault. When it comes down his last what more can he do? Has the Captain what not be disappointed; for who is defeated at one battle may be the victor in the next. The fortune of war is various. Next time he may have better success, his services may not then, in a military capacity, be as much needed as at present. We think the people will be able to get along very well this time with Mr. Perry as mayor. At any rate, if they wish him for chief officer, they should be allowed to have him. We hope, therefore, the hints thrown out by the gallant Captain's friends about sound legal qualities are unfounded; and that the Captain himself will gracefully submit to his defeat, and honorably disown and discountenance any such preposterous idea.

THE COUNCIL.

The new Council is elected; and, in the whole, it is one, we think, with which the people may be satisfied. We hope the elected ... efficient character, ...ding of the ... during the present year. It appears to us that in the last Council one or two individuals were supreme, and lorded it over the majority in a dictatorial manner over their fellows at the Council Board. But we do not incline to blame those who thus made the most of their influence. It was nothing more than natural for them to do so, with such favorable opportunities and under such favorable circumstances. It is just what any man of keen intellect and strong will would do if he can get the chance. Hence we cannot unite with, nor endorse the popular feeling which seems to be setting against those one or two councillors whose influence was exerted so powerfully during the past year. We think that the ratepayers are more to be blamed for subduing to the Council men of such weak minds and vacillating disposition as to easily be made tools of by others. The saddle should be put upon the right horse. If even so much care and consideration were exhibited in selecting a councillor that there are often in buying a horse or a cow, we are sure we would have better councillors than we generally have. We speak of the past—of the future, we augur better things. There are several abuses and complaints, however, which we would like to see the present Council remedy. For instance, with regard to the appointment of Committees and the assignment to its members of certain duties. Every year we find certain Committees appointed. This is either done with a real object in view, or merely pro forma. If the latter be the fact, the people ought to be cognizant of it, so that they may know how to act accordingly. But if it be done with the intention of the Committee doing what is assigned to it, we would like to see the thing carried out. It is a notorious fact that last year the Committee business was a mere farce. In one case the chairman of a committee centered in himself the powers and prerogatives of the whole committee, and snapt his fingers, as it were at the wishes of his coadjutors. The petitions which he, as chairman, had received during the year, were not presented by him until just before the expiration of his term of office, at least not until it was too late for anything to be done. Again, other committees met to transact important business, when, absolutely, some of the members thereof were never notified of any such meetings. We think such conduct ought not to be tolerated, and can only be tolerated at the expense of the subversion of those fundamental principles upon which alone true municipal economy can be founded. We trust the hint will be enough. Another matter is the "Auditors." By the minutes of the late meeting of the Council, we observed that one of these gentlemen resigned. We do not wonder at it; the work that the Auditors should do is altogether disproportionate to the pay received. No task is more important and arduous than that of an Auditor of a large municipality like Peterborough; and the magnificent sum of $15 is the amount awarded to him! The thing is absurd—a mere farce—it is like paying a premium to keep the true state of things from the knowledge of the people. We deliberately say that no man, for $15, can do his duty as Auditor and earn even a common labourer's wages. We do not find fault with the gentlemen who have hitherto acted as Auditors; we believe they did more twice what they ought for the sum received. But if the Council only want $15 worth of Auditing, who can blame parties if they only give them that? In our opinion, competent men should be appointed, and they should be remunerated decently at least, for their work; the business would then be thoroughly and properly done. It will never, otherwise. We remember a certain municipality where the books were audited (as they generally are audited) year after year, and pronounced all right. But one year, from certain whispers that got afloat, different Auditors were appointed, who spent a longer time than usual over the books, and the consequence was the books were pronounced anything but right; nor had they been correct during a number of the previous years, though pronounced so by the former Auditors—good and honest business men—who took for granted what they ought to prove for themselves. Nothing should be taken for granted. We merely mention this to show how much better for all concerned it is that things should be done in a proper manner, which is impossible to be the case unless the parties acting are liberally paid. Our Assessors, too, might be better remunerated than they are, as they would in that event be able to devote more time and attention to their duties than they can at present with the inadequate compensation granted them. We go for economy; but penny-wise and pound-foolish economy is the worst kind of economy—economy which we sincerely hope that the ratepayers of this rapidly growing and flourishing town for their own interests and the interests of the community generally, will strenuously protest against and have nothing to do with. There are several other things to touch upon, but we leave them for the present, with simply suggesting the question: Should not the Town ...nership and the office of the Town Clerk be dissociated?

AMERICAN NEWS.

Nothing new of any consequence from the other side. General Meady has had an interview with the President, the object being, it is supposed, the re-organization of the Army of the Potomac; a great many of the Army have re-enlisted. Four colored men were presented to the President at the late levee. Butler and Hernside have arrived at Washington. The Army of the Cumberland is quiet—the pickets having a skirmish now and then. General Magruder, in Texas, has issued a Proclamation declaring that he will hold out to the last, and waging upon all to come to his aid. In New Orleans, the Fremont Proclamation and Message have been received by the Union men with much satisfaction. At Fort Monroe, the negroes celebrated the 1st inst., as the first anniversary of their freedom by the Presidents Proclamation There was a terrible snow storm in Buffalo last week. It is said that the blockade business is about played out. The Americans are discussing who will be the next President; we think, however, that "Old Abe" has a good chance to occupy the chair for another four years. We have great doubt whether the people, under the circumstances, could find a better.

HURRAH FOR MEDCALF!

Mr. Medcalf has been elected Mayor of Toronto, by a majority of 154, over the opponent, Mr. Bowes. The Leader of Tuesday morning said there was no use of Mr. Medcalf continuing the contest—he was sure to be defeated. Monday it has changed ...new? A change was required.

WARDEN.

The first meeting of the County Council takes place on the fourth Tuesday of the present month. The Warden-elect will, As it is highly important that the right man should be in the right place, we think that the different Township Councils should give the matter their early attention and consideration, so that the Reeves elected may receive such instructions as may enable them to elect the right man. Last year the election of Warden was effected in a most singular way. In fact the election in our opinion was altogether illegal. It will be remembered that there were three candidates; the votes standing respectively five, four and three. The party having the five votes was declared Warden by the Clerk, just upon what principle or for what reasons, we have never yet been able to make out. The idea of electing an officer by a plurality of votes when a majority is required by law, is certainly a novel one, and would, if carried into general practice, lead sometimes to very singular results. Indeed a little adroit manoeuvring upon this principle might secure the election of the most unpopular man of the assembly. The plan that should have been adopted in this instance when the vote was taken and no one of them had a majority of the votes present, was to drop the individual having the smallest number, and then take the vote for the remaining two. If this had been done, it is not at all improbable (indeed very probable) that the candidate standing second on the list would have been the successful candidate. That candidate was Mr. Ingham, Reeve of Otonabee, a gentleman thoroughly posted in all municipal information, and well known for his sterling principle and uprightness of character, and to whom, we think, the Council when it meets will only be doing justice as well as honoring and benefitting itself, by unanimously electing him to the Warden's chair. There are important duties to be discharged by the Council during the coming year. A man, therefore, intimately acquainted with all the details and particulars of past years, of large business experience, and of liberal views, should be the head of the Council. We think that Mr. Ingham will, if elected, be found to be such a man; and when we say so, we judge from his past career, and from the active and prominent part which, as a member of the Council and as member of various committees, he has taken in county matters. His name has always been associated with every judicious scheme of progress and improvement; while at the same time he has ever shown himself the warm unflinching friend of economy and retrenchment, where as all practicable. Mr. Ingham will, no doubt, be greatly surprised to see his name thus used; but we think we are only discharging a public duty in referring to the matter as we have done; and if, thereby, a repetition of last year's proceeding is prevented, and we aid in any way in having a good and worthy man elevated to the most responsible and honorable position the yeomen of the County of Peterborough have in their power to bestow, we will be highly pleased, and more than amply repaid.

DECLARATION.

The Declaration will take place to-day in the Town Hall, at 12 a. m.

Greek bonds have not risen in consequence: but these symptoms seem to show a ruler under good guidance and willing to be guided.

An impostor lately made his appearance in St Catharines, and some other towns of C. W., who assumes the names of some of the most distinguished of the Confederate officers, representing himself to be Col. Gamboden, Col. Tunnillian, Gen. Chalmers, &c., according to circumstances. By this means he has succeeded in obtaining considerable favors from many of the Southern sympathizers. He has been followed to Clifton by some United States detectives for the swindles he has perpetrated in New York, Boston, &c. He is about six feet one inch in height, with grey eyes, and dark hair tinged with grey, and is of very plausible address.

Governor Douglas's proclaims the following as the salaries allowed to public officers in British Columbia: Governor, (with suitable residence, properly furnished,) £3,000; Judge of the Supreme Court, £1,200; Colonial Secretary, £500; Attorney-General, with practice, £500; Treasurer, £300; Commissioner of Lands and Surveyor General, £600; Collector of Customs, £600; Chief inspector of Police, £500; Registrar General, £50.

Convict Gunmen Monuments.—The Rector of Claydon, the Rev. George Drury, has been summoned to answer a charge of having committed one of his parishioners, Abraham Watkins. On the 7th inst. two young men from Ipswich, attracted by the report of the clerical doings at Claydon, engaged Watkins to show them the way to the church. They found all the doors closed, but were able to enter by the organ-room door, which was in charge of a little girl. They found in the church four monks engaged in prayer, and Brother Ignatius P. S. B. in a gorgeous golden robe. There was a large number of lighted candles and flowers on the alter. On entering, Watkins exclaimed, in a low tone, "What do you mean by that Blazer?" a name by which Brother Ignatius is vulgarly known at Claydon. Brother Ignatius heard what Watkins had said, and at the conclusion of the prayer the party were requested to leave. The two visitors did so, but Watkins refused, and a struggle ensued, in which Mr. Drury struck the intruder on the forehead with a red-hot iron, taken from the fire, drawing blood as well as bruising him. Watkins then opened a pocket knife and threatened to "do for" Mr. Drury, but was prevented by Brother Ignatius from doing any injury. The magistrates fined Mr. Drury £5 and costs, recommending him at the same time to restore peace to the parish by resigning his incumbency.

The Lash at Woolwich.—Since January last 24 mariners have been flogged at Woolwich, the number of lashes inflicted being 1,200. This is exclusive of the men who have had their sentences of 50 lashes commuted to a term of imprisonment and 25 lashes in the prison. The modus operandi is this: The drum-major, having fastened the culprit up, superintends the floggers, and sees that the proper number of lashes is laid on with due severity. Freshness and vigour in the application of the cat are ensured by changing the flogger after 25 lashes have been administered. Should a drummer get nervous during the work, or perform it unsatisfactorily, the drum-major is behind him to remind him of his duty in a forcible manner. The other day one of the men being flogged was cut round the neck and on the cheek by a nervous drummer. Drummer boys it is true, are trained from an early age for the work, and practise on a barrack stool; but some boys have obtained exemption, for, like the drum-major, they have the greatest detestation for the brutal and degrading work included within their functions.

In the French Chamber of Deputies, during the "verification of powers," the election of M. Samuel Welles de Lavalette for a district in the Dordogne was objected to on the ground that he was not a Frenchman. The facts are that he was born at Boston, U. S., in May, 1834, of American parents, but being the adopted son of the Marquis de Lavalette, senator, he had sufficient interest to get himself proposed as a government candidate, and it being found out at the last moment that he was disqualified as a foreigner, the Emperor, on May 16—only a fortnight before the elections—gave him letters of naturalisation. It was strenuously argued by MM. Havin and Picard that, by virtue of an unrepealed law of 1849, nothing short of an express act of the legislature could qualify a foreigner to become a deputy, and that imperial letters of naturalisation were insufficient. The government commissary, however, maintained that the law of 1849 was repealed by implication in 1852, and the chamber adopting this view, M. Welles de Lavalette was admitted.

The Oldest Married Couple in the World.—There are living in Marulan, in this colony, two persons, husband and wife, aged respectively 141 years. They are extremely feeble and bedridden, but are in possession of both sight and hearing. The old man arrived in the first fleet, in 1788, and has consequently been seventy-five years in the colony of New South Wales.—Sydney (N. S. W.) Empire.

Communications.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

Mr. Editor,—In Review of last week appears a long article headed: "Sheriff of Northumberland," wherein the Review undertakes to make itself the champion of the sovereign rights of the people. It declares Mr. Fortune to be the victim of high handed tyranny—that the Government is bribing men to swear the Sheriff out of office. It calls an investigation into the official conduct of the Sheriff of Northumberland and Durham as iniquitous proceeding; and says that to answer the infamous purpose of this political persecution, law is "trampled on, justice outraged, the doctrine of might for right resorted to," &c., and, in fine, the champion says: "We dare not trust ourselves to comment upon this matter as it deserves." We believe you, Mr. Review, but just permit us to suggest that you have already said a little too much. You know there are some things that a man cannot handle without being soiled—and this is one of them. We are aware that it is consistent with the Tory of the old school to defend everything under its colors—be it deserving or not—yet we cannot help thinking that the Review would have felt cleaner to day if it had left Mr. Fortune alone. Indeed, from the mock heroic style in which he endeavors to prop Mr. Fortune in his office, we are forced to think that the writer felt the difficulty and peculiarity of his position. It is evident that the writer got his cue from a party who knew more of the Sheriff than he did. We will just state a little of what we know of this public officer; and without further comment, we will commit his case to a discriminating public, and leave to them the task of saying whether the Government is deserving of all the slang and virulent language used in the article referred to.

Mr. James Boswell Fortune is the Sheriff of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham. These counties, containing a proportion of eighty thousand inhabitants, have in them the towns of Port Hope, Cobourg, Newcastle, Brighton, Colborne and a number of villages, and, I presume, have more Reformers than any united counties in Upper Canada, York and Peel excepted. Mr. Fortune is the successor of the Honorable Henry Ruttan, from whom, on his retirement in favor of Mr. Fortune, he is said to have purchased that vacuous quarter acre, price $30,000. Of course Mr. Fortune's income is enormous. No public officer in the county yields such handsome returns. Mr. Fortune is a jolly, pleasant, plausible man. He is said to have exercised more influence in politics than any other man in the counties. His present counsel, Mr. Smith, always received his hearty support. One would suppose Mr. Fortune to be a wealthy man—large pecuniation—thousands of pounds per annum—should have placed him in a comfortable position; but, strange to say, he is not. He is poor—a bankrupt with a great many creditors. The swamp bet was too much for him—he never got over it. But he is not only poor (which in itself is not actual) but he is a defaulter—you know what that means. You are aware that much of the county funds ought to pass through his hands; well, some of them did, and much of it didn't; what didn't pass, stuck there. He was, a short time ago, and, we presume, is now, indebted to the Counties Council in the nice little sum of ten thousand dollars. The Council wished to do this trifling affair, and compromised with him, giving him three (just what so many of your worst can't get). Thinking the counties there are people in all parts of Canada that desirous that their monies are in his hands, and they cannot get them out; at any rate, we know to our own knowledge that many of the ratepayers throughout the counties have writs in their hands against him, to which the sheriff has endeavored to return, "nulla bona" will have to be made. More than this, we know that the Sheriff's late illness was the only thing that prevented a number of attachments from being executed on his person.

Now, as a result of all this, there has been for years a perfect howl of dissatisfaction about the conduct of the Sheriff. The counties cry for his removal—lawyers and suitors equally. The Review talks of the people's rights! Is a dishonest Sheriff to ride rough shod over the rights of the people? To wrong them—to keep their money and then from the protesting arms of a motley band partizan government to laugh at them? We assert, that to permit so irresponsible a person, with still more irresponsible sureties, to occupy such an important a position, while his power was only used to enrich himself, has been a standing disgrace to the government which kept him in place, and which in turn he served in his own partisan manner.

If the present Government, yielding to the pressure of a wronged humanity, have determined to give his conduct a thorough sifting, they are entitled to our thanks. If Mr. Fortune's conduct has been such as it should be, the present trial will be no hardship to him; but if the hundred complaints we have heard be but half true (saying nothing of what we know ourselves) then the sooner a more fitting man fills the office the better; the dictum of the Review to the contrary, notwithstanding.

TRUTH.

Peterborough, Jan. 5th, 1864.

THE VOLUNTEERS AND MILITIA.

The following information respecting the Volunteers and Militia will be found of interest:

Circular to Brigade Majors.

Adjutant General's Office.

Quebec, 2nd Nov, 1863.

Sir.—I am desired by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, to acquaint you that, so soon as the necessary arrangements can be completed, the School of Instruction for Candidates for Commissions in the Service Battalions of Militia authorized by section 25 of the Militia Act of last session, will be opened for the reception of such Candidates under the following regulations:

1. All Officers under the age of 45 years, at present holding Commissions in the Non-Service (Sedentary) Militia are eligible as Candidates for Commissions in the Service Militia; but Candidates are not confined to persons now holding such Commissions.

2. All Candidates for Commissions in the Service Militia, will be required before appointment, to obtain a certificate, as hereinafter mentioned, from one of the Commandants of the School of Instruction; and no person shall be appointed or promoted to the Rank of Field Officer in the Service Militia who shall not have obtained a First Class certificate.

3. A First Class certificate shall be given to those candidates who shall have proved themselves, to the satisfaction of the Commandant of the School of instruction, able to drill and handle a Battalion in the field, and who shall have acquired a complete acquaintance with the internal economy of a battalion.

4. A Second Class Certificate shall be given to those candidates who shall have proved themselves able to command a company at Battalion drill, and to drill in company at company drill.

5. No certificates of either class shall be given to any candidate who is not perfectly drilled as a private soldier.

6. No candidate shall be permitted to remain at the school for a longer period than three calendar months from the date of his entry.

7. The actual travelling expenses of all candidates in coming to, and returning to their homes from the school shall be paid.

8. All candidates on obtaining a second class certificate, shall be paid the sum of fifty dollars; and on obtaining a first class certificate, the further sum of fifty dollars in addition.

9. All candidates for commissions, while attending the school, shall be considered for all purposes of drill and discipline, to be attached to the regiment which shall constitute the school of instruction; and it shall be competent to the commander-in-chief, on a representation from the commandant, to dismiss any candidate from the school for misconduct or other sufficient cause.

10. Candidates for commissions, while attending the school, shall not be members of the mess of the regiment which constitutes the school.

I am desired to request that you will make known these regulations to the officers of the non-service (sedentary) militia and others within your district who may be desirous to become candidates for commissions in the service militia, and to return to me a list of such candidates as may offer themselves to you, in order that their names may be submitted to his Excellency for selection to attend the school of instruction.

You will particularly draw the attention of candidates to the fact that no fixed period of attendance at the School of Instruction is required in order to enable the candidates to qualify for either class of certificate.

What is insisted upon is knowledge however acquired, of the drill and economy of a company for a second class,—of that of a battalion for a first class certificate.

If candidates shall have acquired, before they come to the school of instruction, a knowledge of company's drill, they may be able in a very short time after their entrance at the school, to entitle them to a second class certificate, with the attendant gratuity of fifty dollars, and may then devote the larger portion of their time at the school to the acquisition of the knowledge necessary, in order to obtain a first class certificate, with a further additional gratuity of fifty dollars and eligibility for the rank of field-officer in the service militia.

His Excellency trusts that Candidates for Commissions will avail themselves, before they shall be summoned to attend the School of Instruction, of the opportunities of perfecting themselves in Company's drill, which are afforded by the Drill Associations and Drill Instructors through the province, and then enable themselves and the public service to reap the largest possible amount of benefit from the institution of the School of Instruction.

The period of three months is fixed as the limit beyond which no Candidate shall be allowed to remain in the school, because that length of time is sufficient, in the opinion of competent authority, to enable a person of average ability to acquire the amount of knowledge demanded.

I have the honor to be, Sir, your most obedient servant.

(Signed) A. de SALABERRY.

CONDITION OF CHARLESTON.

A Charleston correspondent says:

Expenses are so fabulous that I have given up my carriage and horses, ten, ... and I wear home spun, and make my gloves—these latter cost $75 a pair; ... $2 per lb., and flour $50 a barrell; ... a bushel. So you can fancy with such wages $25 to $40 a month, how many can support a family. My friend, Gov. ..., a thrice-millionaire three years ago, is as poor as I am now, and we are certainly in company—but as my sole motive for ... ing was Eden, and it has pleased God to her home to Him, I will not remain ... ness the last miseries of this ... My all is gone and I am willing to begin again. People hold on to Charleston as if it were the heart of the body of the Confederacy, and fall it will. I dare not express my belief, but it is grounded on more than fears.

A gentleman writing from Savannah, says that he hopes the revolution will not continue much longer. "May God in his infinite mercy send relief." Rice, he says, is 25 cents per lb; flour $120 per barrel; soap, $3 50 per lb; candles, $4; whiskey, $75 to $120; butter, $5; turkeys, $10; a coat and pantaloons cost $500; and a pair of boots $130. Another, also, writing from Savannah, says:—

"Savannah gets more and more gloomy every day, and I do really fear real starvation and suffering in sixty or ninety days. Everything appears to be conducing against us—universal distrust is beginning to prevail; little did I anticipate so long continuance of the struggle."

A daughter in south Carolina addressed her mother in Canada, writes:—

A CURE FOR ...
St. Hyacinthe, Canada E., ...
Messrs. Seth W. Fowle & Co.:
Gentlemen:—... months since a little daughter of mine, ten years of age, was taken with Whooping Cough in a very aggravated form, and nothing we could do for her seemed to stay or relieve the disease. We at length decided to try a bottle of your Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. In three hours after she had commenced using it, she was greatly relieved, and in less than three days was entirely cured, and is now well. I have since recommended the Balsam to many of my neighbors, who have used it, and in no case have it fail of effecting a speedy cure.
You are at liberty to make any use of the above you think proper. If it shall induce any body to use your Balsam I shall be glad, for I have great confidence in it.

RELIEF IN TEN MINUTES.
BRYAN'S
PULMONIC WAFERS
The most certain and speedy remedy ever discovered for all Diseases of the Chest and Lungs, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, Bronchitis, Influenza, Hoarseness, Difficult breathing, Sore throat &c., &c., &c.
These Wafers give the most instantaneous and perfect relief and when persevered with according to directions, never fail to effect a rapid and lasting cure. Thousands have been restored to perfect health who have tried other means in vain. To all classes and all constitutions they are equally a blessing and a cure—none need despair, no matter how long the disease may have existed, we however assure it may be, provided the organic structure of the vital organs is not hopelessly decayed. Every one afflicted should give them a ... trial.
To Vocalists and Public Speakers, these Wafers are peculiarly valuable; they will in one day relieve the most severe spasmodic hoarseness; and their regular use for a few days will, at all times, increase the power and flexibility of the voice, greatly improving its tone, compass and clearness, for which purpose they are regularly used by many professional vocalists.

BY-LAW No.

A BY-LAW to authorize the Warden to issue Debentures on the credit of the Non-Resident Land Fund.

WHEREAS, it is necessary to raise funds for the erection of a new Jail and it is deemed advisable to raise the same by the issue of Debentures upon the credit of the Non-Resident Land Fund.

The corporation of the County of Peterboro' hereby enacts:—That the Warden of this County be and he is hereby authorized to issue Fifteen Debentures, for the sum of One Thousand Dollars each; two of which shall be made payable on the first day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five; and two on the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six; and two on the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven; and two on the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight; and two on the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine; and two on the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy; and two on the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one; and one on the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two; and one on the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three; the said Debentures to bear interest at the rate of six per cent per annum, to be paid half-yearly on the first day of July and the first day of January in each and every year.

And be it enacted, that the aforesaid Debentures, and interest on such Debentures as aforesaid, shall be payable at the office of the Treasurer of the County of Peterborough.

County Council Chamber, Peterborough, 21st November, 1-63.

The above is a true copy of a proposed By-Law to be taken into consideration by the Municipality of the County of Peterborough, at the County Council Chamber, in the Town of Peterborough, on TUESDAY, the 22nd day of MARCH, 1864, at the hour of twelve o'clock, noon, at which time and place the members of the Council are hereby required to attend for the purpose aforesaid.

WALTER SHERIDAN,
49 County Clerk.

PROSPECTUS

OF THE

Canada Farmer

A NEW

FORTNIGHTLY JOURNAL,

OF

Agriculture, Horticulture

AND

RURAL AFFAIRS.

THE Subscriber has determined to make the experiment whether a first-class Agricultural Journal can be sustained in Canada. He proposes to issue early in January, 1864, the first number of The Canada Farmer, and to continue the publication on the 1st and 15th days of each month. Each number will contain sixteen pages quarto of closely printed matter. It will be printed on fine paper, from an entirely new font of type. The services of an able agricultural writer as Editor-in-Chief have been secured, and he will be assisted by an efficient staff of writers, reporters and correspondents. First-class artists and engravers have also been retained to prepare illustrations for the paper. No exertion or expenditure will be spared to render the new Journal a worthy representative and advocate of the Agricultural interests of Canada.

In the conduct of The Canada Farmer, the following ends will be zealously labored for:—

1.—To arouse public attention, by frank and temperate discussion, to all questions scientific, commercial, legislative or otherwise, specially affecting the farming interest.

2.—To stimulate the Agriculturists of our country to adopt an improved system of husbandry, by blending the lessons of modern science with the practical experience of the Canadian Farmer.

3.—To bring under the attention of our Farmers all improvements at home or abroad, [illegible] the Field, the Meadow, the Stable—the Dairy—the Orchard—the Poultry Yard—the Apiary—the Kitchen Garden—and the Flower Garden; and to excite an interest in the progress of Rural Architecture and Landscape Gardening, and in all that concerns the Domestic Economy of the Farm-house.

4.—To mark and report all improvements in Agricultural Machinery—foster new inventions—and promote the adoption of all labor-saving machines in the work of the farm and garden.

5.—To keep prominently under attention all that specially concerns the Dairy—farmer and the Grazier; the best breeds of cattle—their best systems of feeding—the most approved processes of cheese and butter making—the best mode of packing—and the best markets to sell in.

6.—To keep prominently in view whatever is specially interesting to the Sheep-raiser and Wool-grower—the breeds best adapted to our climate—the best systems of winter and summer management—and the varying properties of the wool market.

7.—To afford the Farmers of Canada an ever-open medium for addressing their brother Agriculturists throughout the Province, suggesting matters of common interest and advantage, and eliciting information or advice on practical questions of difficulty or doubt.

8.—To report concisely the Proceedings at Agricultural Shows, Fairs and Sales through out the Province—note the condition and progress of the Herds and Flocks of prominent Stock breeders; record the Importation of Thorough-bred stock from abroad, and publish Engravings of First Class Prize Animals.

9.—To watch and report carefully and promptly the actual state and probable prospects of the Produce Markets at home and abroad; and specially promote all movements designed to secure the best prices in the best markets for Canadian Farm Produce.

10.—To afford the Farmers of Canada a common medium where all who have for sale Live Stock, or Seed Grain, or Land, or who may wish to buy such, can make his desires known directly to the whole farming population of Canada.

☞ The Canada Farmer will be published for ONE DOLLAR per annum, POSTAGE FREE payable strictly in advance.

CLUBS

Will be furnished at the following rates:—

TWELVE COPIES for.....TEN DOLLARS.
TWENTY COPIES for.....FIFTEEN DOLLARS.
FIFTY COPIES for.....THIRTY-FIVE DOLS.
ONE HUNDRED for.....SIXTY DOLLARS.

Communications on Agricultural subjects are invited, addressed to "The Editor of the Canada Farmer," and all orders for the paper will be sent to

GEORGE BROWN,
Proprietor and Publisher.

☞ As FIFTY THOUSAND COPIES of the first number will be printed and circulated, an unequalled opportunity for Advertisers will be presented. The charge will be twenty cents per line.

TWENTY-SIXTH BIRTHDAY

OF THE

STAR PAPER OF AMERICA!

January 1, 1864.

The New York Mercury

FOR THE

COMING YEAR.

AFTER more than a quarter of a century of uninterrupted success, The New York Mercury—standing first on the muster-roll of the Literature Press in this country—points proudly to its past career as a guarantee of new triumphs in the future.

Heretofore, it has eclipsed all rivals; but it proposes to make the coming year memorable by eclipsing its own past history, and looming up before the world as the most marvelous specimen of a fascinating, brilliant, amusing, and comprehensive Literary Newspaper that has ever been published in either hemisphere.

THE GENIUS OF EUROPE

will be laid under contribution to give brilliancy to its columns, and side by side with original productions of the most popular romancists of the Old World, will be placed the chef d'œuvres of the most eminent story-writers of the New.

MISS M. E. BRADDON,

Authoress of "Aurora Floyd," "Lady Audley's Secret," "John Marchmont's Legacy," etc., etc., who has suddenly risen, like

A STAR OF THE FIRST MAGNITUDE

in the literary horizon of Great Britain, has been specially engaged to supply The New York Mercury from time to time with the wonderful creations of her genius, at a cost which no other weekly in America could venture to incur.

☞ Among the multitude of distinguished writers and artists who have become familiar to the masses through the vast circulation of the STAR "WEEKLY OF AMERICA, may be mentioned the following, all of whom are still upon its staff:

Dr. J. H. Robinson, Cousin May Carelton, Margaret Blount, W. O. Rut n, Ned Buntline, George Martial, Arthur M. Grainger, Julia S. Ingraham, Horace Gardner, Edward Willett, Felix O. C. Darley, Mary Chef, Miss M. E. Braddon, George Albany.

Scores of other distinguished literati, under various nom de plume, contribute to its columns, while its pictorial illustrations are from the inimitable pencil of Felix O. C. Darley, Esq., the best draughtsman of the age.

The War, which has given the coup de grace to so many pretentious publications, and half destroyed those that still survive, had added thousands to the circulation of The New York Mercury.

Its heart-stirring short stories, its military historiettes, its matchless serial romances, its racy burlesques, its general wit and humor, its delicious gossip, its fairy tales for little folks, its rare poetry, its fresh and vigorous editorials the infinite variety of its contents, and the large amount of reading matter that it comprises, render it welcome everywhere, and to classes of society. Containing, as it does, of closely-printed matter, it may safely be pronounced the cheapest, as well as the best Literary Newspaper extant.

Three favorite writers, Doctor J. H. Robinson, Cousin May Carleton, and Ned Buntline, are now preparing three stories for The New York Mercury. One of these productions will be commenced in the Opening Number of the New Year. The authors being aware of this fact, are engaged in an amusing contest for precedence, and the result will unquestionably be that the most effective story ever penned by any of the three, will commence in the

NEW YEAR'S NUMBER

of the great REPRESENTATIVE WEEKLY of the Western World.

The New York Weekly is sold by all newsmen and periodical dealers in America. To subscribers, it is regularly mailed every Saturday morning, for $3 a year; three copies for $5; six copies for $9; eight copies for $12, with an extra copy, free, to the getter-up of the club. Six months' subscriptions received. Always write plainly the name of your Post office, County and State. Post, take the name of all your friends and neighbors at one time. Remittances should be made in advance.

☞ Specimen copies sent to all applicants. Address all letters and remittances, post paid, to

BRITANNIA.

BY ALEX. M'LACHLAN.

All hail, my country! hail to thee,
Thou birthplace of the brave and free;
Thou ruler upon land and sea!
Britannia!

No thing of change, no mushroom state;
In wisdom thou can'st work and wait;
Or wield the thunderbolts of Fate:
Britannia!

Oh, nobly hast thou play'd thy part;
What struggles at the head and heart,
Have gone to make thee what thou art,
Britannia!

What, tho' thy manners may be gruff,
Thy native virtues rude and rough;
Yet is thy heart the sterling stuff,
Britannia!

Great mother of the mighty dead!
Sir Walter sang, and Nelson bled,
To weave a garland for thy head,
Britannia!

And Watt, the great magician, wrought,
And Shakspeare rang'd the realms of thought
And Newton soared, and Cromwell fought,
Britannia!

And Milton's high seraphic art,
And Bacon's head, and Burns' heart,
Are glories that shall ne'er depart,
Britannia!

These are the soul of thy renown;
The gems immortal in thy crown;
The suns that never shall go down—
Britannia!

Still lie thy path in truth divine,
Held sacred by thy seal and sign;
And power and glory shall be thine,
Britannia!

Miscellaneous.

SCOTLAND AND THE SCOTCH.

For an English stranger, who may have been observing Scotland for the last two months, it would be difficult to point out any transaction distinctively Scotch in its character which did not owe its origin to the national Presbyterian creed. If it were not for Presbyterianism there would be very little difference between Edinburgh and York; the metropolitan memories of the Roman and Northumbrian capital being only a great deal older than that of Scotch, and imbedded, perhaps, in mindless tenacious of such matters. The romantic rocks and hills on which Edinburgh is built, its fine white stones, its many storeyed houses, its beautiful gardens, its spacious streets, do not make it a capital; nor does its patriotic preservation of the shabby golden effigy, which used to be the Scottish crown, and which it is to be seen by the curious in an iron cage in that grim old castle overlooking the city in helpless idleness, and sitting like a broken-down king upon a throne of rock, which he cannot desert, but from which empire has departed. There is not a doubt of it. The Scottish Solomon and hater of witches and tobacco, King James VI., went to be James I. of England in 1603, after Queen Elizabeth had worked, and stormed, and flirted and fretted out her queer existence; and 104 years after the King departed, the Parliament departed also. Then there was an empire of literature, near the beginning and the end of which the names of Hume and Scott will long be remembered. That departed also. Even the Edinburgh Review went, after the quick, slight, sleepless, cutting Jeffery was elected Dean of the Faculty, of Advocates, and so became too transcendentally genteel for a man of letters. And now there is nothing left in that way except sagacious, vigorous, and witty leaders in the liberal Scotsman, and occasional articles embellished by casual unstudied strokes of genius in the Conservative Courant; Alexander Smith's poetry, so beautiful in descriptive phrase, so barren in philosophy; John Hill Burton's odd, quaint, and humorous views of human nature and history; the ballad strains of Professor Aytoun, so successful as a mocking-bird on the graves of Parnassus; and the rather heavy and dry, but very reliable historical disquisitions of Cosmo Innes, Joseph Robertson, and David Laing. There is nothing metropolitan left at all except the courts of law and the courts of the Church, neither of which have been sitting for two months. The former are, although supreme in Scotland, subject to the jurisdiction of the House of Lords, which reviews and sometimes over-turns their judgments; but the courts of the Established Church and of those dissenting associations that call themselves Churches and are each supreme so long as they keep within their own spheres, and their judgments are incapable of review. In short, the Church is, in law, the only irresponsible judicature in Scotland; and it is the master rather more than the servant of public opinion.

A proposal virtually to abolish the Church of Scotland has been discussed in the Scotsman and Courant newspapers for the last three weeks, and, if carried out will strip Edinburgh of the last of its operative metropolitan honors. The project I refer to is one to unite the Church of England and the Church of Scotland, and, as a consequence, I suppose, to place the latter under the Archbishop of Canterbury. It originated in an address of Bishop Wordsworth, of St. Andrews, delivered in Edinburgh on the 8d of the month—an historical day, which, if it suggested anything, could not suggest any hope for this project; for it was the anniversary of the battles of Dunbar and of Worcester and of the death of Cromwell two of them, at least, events not very pleasant to Episcopal, nor indeed to Presbyterian memory. Bishop Wordsworth is the nephew of the poet, and brother of Canon Wordsworth, who is well-known in England. The bishop is an accomplished scholar, a master in the manufacture of Greek and Latin verse, and full of theological learning and ecclesiastical traditions; but he is very deficient in logic, and is the most arrogant and intolerant of all the Scotch Bishops in that address he was unusually intolerant. He flatly contradicted Dr. Caird's liberal doctrine that church government is of no consequence, and very coolly assured his audience that "God himself had settled the question" in favor of Episcopacy; his reason for saying so plainly being, that God had permitted Episcopacy to exist which is a kind of argument that tells just as much in favor of Presbytery. But there were some gleams of charity which shone through the cloud of Episcopal arrogance, and encouraged by these, there have been "parish ministers," one after the other, and oddness, all hinting that they should like very much to have a look up as "permanent moderator" of presbyteries and synods, a liturgy; and showing that Episcopacy and Presbytery agreed in a great deal and disagreed in nothing of moment. I daresay all the enlightened Presbyterians in Scotland agree with Dr. Caird in the idea that forms of worship are of no consequence, and therefore they could become Episcopalians if it was in the least to further their interest or convenience; but they would do it on rational grounds, and not on the traditional grounds on which the Scotch Episcopal Church rests its absurd pretensions. Unfortunately, however, very few Presbyterians are enlightened, and the soul of Jenny Geddes is a far more venerable object in their minds than a liturgy or any Episcopal tradition. Those very nine or ten very ignorant millionaires of the people of Scotland will never be enlightened in this life, and for a century here is no use talking of a "United Church for Scotland and England," or dreaming of it. The millennium has not come, whatever Dr. Cumming of London or the last fortune-teller who was sent to prison for cheating servant girls, or the last religious monomaniac whose condition was made the subject of a certificate of two doctors, may say to the contrary. And if the millennium was come, what would that signify to the pious bigots of Scotland? To be not merely comfortable, but to exist, they must be allowed to hate each other, and dispute and quarrel. The prospect of getting into heaven would be very indifferent to many of them if it were not for their confident hopes of seeing their friends and neighbors excluded. All their petty dogmas upon which they exhaust their zeal, what are they in the eye of reason? Where would they be in the creed of a universal church—in the creed of a wiser, holier, more loving life than this poor span of threescore years and ten, with its doubting and dogmatizing hopes and fears, little anxieties and low appetites tantalizing half truths, and infinite mysteries? See how they stick to crotchets! The doctrines of the majority of the wildest Presbyterians in regard to the Sabbath, for which they would excommunicate, and if they could, consign the rest to that place of which they are so fond of talking, are opposed to the teaching of Biblical criticism and of church history, and have no authority, except the equivocal experience of Scotland for the last forty or fifty years, against the whole world and all its centuries. In the close of last century, and in the early years of this, the ministers of Edinburgh were in the habit of having cozy and cheery enough supper parties of their friends; and it is an undoubted, though by no means extensively known historical fact, that John Knox, when one of the ministers of Edinburgh, gave dinner parties, which were attended by the heads of the Protestant party in Scotland, and excited no remark or scandal whatever. All these Presbyterians profess to believe in the Confession of Faith, but few, if any, of them do it. Hardly any of them read it, and of those who read not one in a hundred understand. Perhaps it is as well for their comfort.

Punch's correspondent, in his clever communication from Drummadrochit, a year or two ago, wandered further and further into the depths of intoxication, and from one perplexing topic to another, and by the time he arrived at the distinction between the Free Church and the Established, both he and his decanter of whiskey were finished for that day. And I think it would require a good many decanters of whiskey, not merely to clear up the difference, but, according to Burns' prescription, to "cement the quarrel." But I firmly believe that Punch's correspondent did more to that end than Bishop Wordsworth will do.

The truth is that in the country districts of Scotland, the people are as averse to Episcopacy as their great-great-grandfathers were. A harmonium, tried recently in a country church, threatened to empty it; and there is only one Presbyterian Church in Scotland in which instrumental music is used, and that is the place of worship of the Rev. Dr. Robert Lee, who is denounced by all the Churches as a rationalist and heretic. He was the only D. D., in Scotland who signed the petition for the opening of the Botanic Gardens on Sunday. Before 1843, when the high-flying "Frees" were in the Church, he would have been deposed for that act. There are about a dozen liberal ministers in the Church of Scotland; and among them I may name Principal Tulloch and Dr. Brown, both of St. Andrews; Dr. Bissel, of Bourtrie; Dr. Nothan Macleod, of Glasgow; and the Rev. Mr. Story, of Rosneath, as their characters are known; but for the rest, to name them would not be for their advantage.

This, which I have dwelt upon at, perhaps, too great length, has been for these weeks the chief topic here; and the next—and almost only other—was Mr. Grant Duff's speech at Elgin, in which he maintained the right of private judgment in matters of religion, and especially not walking in gardens on Sunday. The orthodox have been abusing, and the Scotsman defending him with not a little fun and a great deal of force to spare. The Witness has been conspicuous on the other side for screaming zeal intolerance. It is now nearly seven years since its distinguished editor, Hugh Miller, died, and it has been weak in intellect ever since, though stronger than ever in all the passions of bigotry.—From a Correspondent of the Daily Telegraph.

CURIOUS FATALITY OF OFFICE.

A singular fatality appears to await the possessors of all but sovereign power in India. In the last sixteen years (1847 to 1863), three British noblemen have successively been Viceroys of India, and have in turn beneath the terrible responsibility of their high station, and the enervating effects of the climate. When Lord Dalhousie was appointed in 1847, he was only thirty-five years old, and up to that time had never been seriously ill or two days. Under his administration the Punjaub was annexed, the rulers of Burmah sent an embassy to the court at Calcutta, the Ameer of Cabul used the British friendship, and the Khan of Hindoostan entreated him to send soldiers to drill his troops. When he was only eighteen months in office he was entranced on the peerage from an earldom to a marquisate, having previously been made Knight of the Thistle. At the end of eight years' rule, he resigned his high office and returned to England. Even then he was comparatively a young man and at 44, with great experience, unusual scholarship, considerable ability as a parliamentary speaker, and high reputation as a successful administrator, it was prophesied that he would soon obtain high station in the Cabinet. Already, on the death of Wellington, he had been appointed Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports. But, as it appeared he required none to die. He had lost his wife in India, and this greatly depressed his spirits. He was unable to take any part in public life. He lingered until 1860, when death relieved him from care and pain. He was succeeded in the Cinque Ports by Lord Palmerston, and his earldom and estates by Lord Panmure—the Secretary of War, who, during the Crimean war, telegraphed to the Commander-in-chief there, to "Remember Dowbit!"—meaning a certain protege of his own named Dowbiggen, whose appointment he desired. Lord Canning, the immediate successor of Lord Dalhousie, was the eldest surviving son of George Canning the enlightened British statesman, who broke up the Holy Alliance, and gave his country the first impulse towards decidedly liberal policy in her foreign relations. It was singular enough that, in 1821, when Canning was called to succeed Castlereagh as Foreign Minister of England, he had accepted the Viceroyalty of India; its splendid emoluments tempting him. In July, 1855, Lord Canning, who had previously been a Cabinet Minister under Peel and Lord Aberdeen, accepted the Indian Viceroyalty. The leading events of his reign are historical; they include the siege and the suppression of the great Indian revolt. The bravery of the army, comparatively weak in number, but headed by such men as Havelock and Lawrence, Outram and Colin Campbell, backed by the sagacity and firmness of Lord Canning, effectually put down the rebellion. The Viceroy was made GCB, and obtained a step in the peerage. After remaining less than six years in India, he returned home broken in spirit, for his wife had perished under the fatal influence of the climate, and broken in health from the same cause, combined with the arduous labors of his office. He died soon after his return, leaving no child to inherit his title and property, but bequeathing the latter to one of his nephews, the second son of the Marquis of Clanricarde. The Earl of Elgin was appointed Governor General of India three years ago. He had previously been Governor of Jamaica, Governor General of British North America, twice Ambassador to China, and had been a Cabinet Minister in 1858-60. A shrewd, clear headed, well-informed, active business man, he had been long in the public service, always doing his work well. During the great Indian revolt of 1857 he took the responsibility of sending a large reinforcement of British troops from China to Calcutta, and there is no doubt that this timely aid helped to put down the rebellion. At the time on his becoming Viceroy of India he was only in his fiftieth year, his constitution was robust, his frame was massive, his habits temperate, and his capacity for work enormous. But India has proved fatal to him as to his predecessors. A telegram from Calcutta reports his death from heart disease. These three men—Dalhousie, Canning and Elgin—were equal in years; and each won honors for high scholarship at the same University; had respectively filled high offices before entrusted with almost royal sway over Hindostan and her dependencies, and had severally been invested with the greatest prizes in public life that the British Sovereign has to bestow. The three friends, it is known, were richer in honors and in intellect than in lands and cash. The salary of the Indian Viceroy is $100,000 per annum; but, independent of this, his lawful means of making money are so numerous and great that he is expected if he serve out his full six years, to return home with a princely fortune. Dalhousie's Indian accumulation went with his estates and titles, to a cousin whom he disliked, and Canning's will be possessed by his nephew. Lord Elgin leaves four sons, the eldest of whom (Lord Bruce, by courtesy), succeeds to the family titles, and it is not improbable that, in consideration of his father's services, his earldom will be changed for a marquisate. The estates in Fifeshire (which have been held by this noble since the time of King Robert Bruce, from whom the family are literally descended) have not only been cleared of debt under the late earl's careful management, but enlarged by recent purchase. The late Lord Elgin was a saving man, all his life, and preserved to the last the habits of economy which necessity compelled him to adopt on succeeding to an old Scottish peerage and greatly encumbered estates. From the circumstances, what we have here done little more than glance at, springs the inevitable moral of the uncertainty of human things. Truly does the French proverb declare that man proposes, but that God disposes. In each of the three instances which we have cited, the man went to the far Orient, clothed with dignity and power, hoping to return with honors and wealth. It is curious that in each case the result should have been death, and that the three college friends should have thus fallen into line, as it were, one after the other, but to be smitten down. The proverbial stabbing of the Pagoda tree, which had enriched former Viceroys, was fatal to the three last, as if it had been the death-giving Upas.

STRUGGLES OF GENIUS.

A peremptory condition of genius seems to be its early environment by adverse circumstances and oppressive influences. Few of the great men who have left their names engraven deep upon the tablets of history have stepped, without an effort into places of commanding influence. The tender flower that is born to shed its bright opal, may bloom in the rich soil and carefully tended enclosure of the garden, but the giant oak that crowns the lofty summit, and spreads abroad its leafy arms giving shelter, like a monarch, and defying the lightning like Ajax, struggles up through storms and hail, and mountain blasts clinging to the rude rock with fierce tenacity, and finding exulting life where the flower would perish.

So it is with the master spirits of mankind; you can scarcely find a single name of note, either in literature, politics, arts, arms, or science, upon whose cradle fortune has smiled. It seems as if the primrose path of dalliance" worried the feet that press it more than the rugged roads where rocks so bar the advancing step. Strife seems to be the element of genius, and success is wrung nine times out of ten, out of a hard battle with the world. The spoiled children of what the world calls fortune, are rarely the spoiled children of fame also. Are not the proofs of this assertion multifarious? Need we specify more minutely a few examples?

Look at the father of ancient poets, blind Homer, grouping his way through the world, but calling music from the harp-strings that might charm the gods. Look at Milton, living in stormy revolutionary times, and so ill-appreciated that the copyright of his immortal poems is sold for £10. Look at Columbus, begging bread for his child at the gate of a convent, and wandering from court to court to obtain the means to give a new world to the old. Remember Oliver Goldsmith pulverizing drugs for an apothecary's mortar—his sweet strains were to delight an Augustan age, and, perhaps to soothe to all time; Gifford, toiling on a cobbler's bench; Crabbe, stern poet of life's struggles, reduced to the verge of starvation and despair, and only relieved by the charity of Edmund Burke; Cervantes, the prince of humorists, rich in intellectual wealth, and poor in world's goods; Otway, one of the finest English dramatists, choked by the crust he eagerly swallowed at the supper-table of an intimate friend. But why go through the list? Little does the casual reader, who glances over pages sparkling with wit and humor, think of the careering care, the physical and mental suffering, by which the intellect that charms him has been nurtured. Little does the crowded parquet, entertained by the apparently easy and natural grace of the smiling dancer who bounds and undulates before it, think what physical agonies she has endured before her muscles have conquered that suppleness and airy elasticity.

Even if genius has no physical suffering to contend with it finds its elements of effort and struggle in tempestuous passions and disturbing sensibilities. It is amidst the fury of the elements that the vivid lightning has its birth; talent may be nurtured in calm—genius expands only beneath a stormy sky. Byron inherited a peerage when a boy; famous flattered, courted, admired—that rare thing a noble poet and a poet noble—his whole life was at war with himself and with the world; a painful and turbulent career. Napoleon had a rugged training; his early life was darkened by misfortune. The Duke de Richstadt, the son and grandson of an emperor, was nurtured amid more than "Capuan delights." Mark the difference of their fortunes; one was a hero, the other—nothing.

CURIOUS TRIAL.

A curious trial has just taken place before the Civil Tribunal of the Seine, showing that parents in France may be compelled to contribute to the maintenance of their daughters after marriage. M. Maulde married in 1853 the only child of M. Renou, receiving with his wife a dowry of 25,000f. M. Maulde was unsuccessful in business and proceeded to America, where he remained 18 months, and then returned, but in not more prosperous circumstances than on his departure. Three children had been born of the marriage, and M. Maulde seeing himself without resource, with a wife in delicate state of health, and a family dependent on him, and knowing that his father-in-law was living in affluence, made an application to the tribunal to compel M. and Madame Renou to pay a sum of 2400f. for the present necessities of their daughter and family, reserving his right of subsequently claiming the annual allowance. The defendants opposed the application, declaring that they had on various occasions ass

ORGANIZATION.

In these days no great popular object is accomplished, or great popular movement consummated without effective organization. The more complete and effectual the organization, the more speedy and marked will be the success. But not only to consummate a movement is organization essentially necessary; but also in keeping one up and alive. Common sense and our common experience attest the truth of this statement. Year after year have we seen it illustrated in those popular movements that are starting up, and flourish a little while, while the popular interest and support are with it; but when this interest and support grow cold and feeble, they begin to drawn, and then, like the flickering taper in the rocket, soon go out. We might mention instance after instance to prove this, but there is no necessity. As a matter of course the fewer claims any movement has upon the head and heart of a people, the more probable it is that its career will be short lived. With however great a blast of trumpets it may have been heralded in, it will soon be stripped of its meretricious vestments and judged by its intrinsic merits. People may be prejudiced by circumstances, either for or against a thing for a time; but after a while that prejudice passes away and they see it as it is in—and their judgment, on the whole, is more dispassionate and correct than they get credit for. Why should it not. The people of to-day, with the appliances they have at hand of receiving knowledge and of forming opinions upon the leading topics and questions, should be intelligent and well formed. And we think what should be the case, is, speaking generally, really the case. Hence we have no doubt they see the benefits resulting from organizations as well as we; but to be reminded of truths, does no harm. Organization implies union; and the welding together, as it were, of the views and feelings of a party into some great general principle or object to the attainment of which all efforts are to be directed. Several important ends are effected thereby. The adverse influence created by minor differences which must exist in every free community is done away—the efforts of many are secured, who through timidity or apathy would otherwise do nothing, and the influence and efforts of all thus combined, are made available in every blow, whether to demolish what you are opposed to, or to build up what you advocate. That this is a very important thing, we think no person will doubt. In many instances, what a number of individuals would utterly and absolutely fail to accomplish, if they made the attempt individually, they could, if united, effect with very little trouble. And a bundle of threads when single can easily be swept asunder, but when united and twisted into a cable, they become strong and able to hold the mightiest vessel. So in communities, persons may be considered strands of the great cable-politic, each not very powerful in himself, but when all are joined in unity of purpose and effort becoming all potential. In a common cable every thread is of importance—every one removed weakens its strength. So in cable-politic, every individual that segregates himself tends to lessen its strength and influence. The first thread removed may not be much missed, but it makes way for another and another, until the loss soon becomes appreciable and then alarming.

With these prefatory views, we may introduce a subject that we have thought over much of late: the union of the Reformers of our noble County. There is a great absence of it. There is no organization at all. For sometime past there has been nothing approximating to it. The causes of this we have no wish to investigate; the fact, the open, naked fact is enough for us. The evil results of such a state of things have not yet to manifest and make themselves felt; they have already done so, and will again do so if something be not done. The Reformers of Peterborough have for long years fought manfully and bravely for the principles they advocate; but how much more successful would their efforts have been and how much more satisfied themselves to-day if their whole strength had been employed in every blow, instead as oft times wasted in desultory, hence futile, attempts. If the Reformers would unite, they could, with the utmost ease, sweep the County from "stem to stern." They are strong and numerous enough to do so. They ought to do so. They will do so if they only profit by the past, to improve the future, and to adopt those measures and plans which sound policy and experience point out as the proper means to the attainment of such an object. This is by holding the County, ward by ward, meetings composed of delegates from the different sections of the County for the inter-communication of ideas and views, and for promoting and discussing and concerting such measures as seemed to them best to promote the interests of the Reform cause. We believe the people are in favor of such action. We have conversed on the subject with leading Reformers from all parts of the County, and the idea has met with their warmest approbation, and its practical evolution would have their heartiest co-operation. No wonder. As things are, a small eclipse in a Town are the whole managing committee. At election times they get out a candidate, and the wishes of the majority of those interested are never considered at all. They have to acquiesce in a decision in which they have had nothing to say. This is hardly fair. But unless steps be taken to remedy the present state of affairs, nothing else can be done. Somebody must act. And if there be no regular executive committee appointed by the vote of the whole County—a self constituted one—must endeavour to do its duties in the best way it can. We commend the subject to the earnest consideration of the friends of progress and Reform. There is no use of saying that nothing can be done at present. It is a fallacy. Now is the time for action—now is the time to prepare for [illegible] ere to-day or next week, and which at best if we construe aright the lines that cleave the political horizon, must arise soon.

We will recur to the subject again; in the meantime hoping that our thoughts upon the importance and the necessity of organization will not be without their weight, and that before long steps will be taken to hold a convention of Reformers, at which such measures will be adopted as will give that solidity, vitality and energy to our cause without which it cannot be as successful as it ought to be and as we would wish.

RECIPROCITY.

The Reciprocity Treaty which has subsisted between Canada and the United States for nearly ten years, expires on the 11th of September next, as per agreement. It, however, virtually, does not end until September 1865, as no change can take place within the twelve months after the ten years have expired, except by mutual consent. As there seems at present, on the other side, to be a lull in war matters, the papers have got the Treaty at full length upon the tapis. With regard to it their appear two antagonistic interests at work. The Eastern people wish to have the Treaty abrogated altogether; while the Western, who are the recipients of its more immediate and direct benefits, are strongly in favor of maintaining it. The[y] calculate thus subsisting betw een these two great sections, it now appears to be the one aim of certain disaffected, rabid papers to increase and inflame, whatever the ultimate consequences to the general interests of the nation. Animated with the bitterest hatred and enmity to the British constitution and British everything, they assail the Canadians in terms and language altogether improper and uncalled for. There are, however, other journals who are imbued with a better spirit, are taking up the subject and discussing it in a calm and dispassionate manner—thus endeavouring to bring the Treaty, in all its merits, its advantages and counter-advantages, before the people. This is the right way. Coarse invective is not argument; nor are empty declamation and idle braggadocia, facts. But such seems not to be the opinion of the first class of journals. That the Reciprocity has been of immense benefit to Canada, no one, we think, will wish to deny. It has done much to develop the resources of our going country; to increase and improve its manufactures; and to enrich it in many ways. The free access that our agriculturists, traders and lumbermen have had to American markets has been of vast benefit. We trust we have appreciated these advantages as they ought to be; but the benefit is not all on one side. The Americans have had their share. Their material interests have been greatly improved by the commercial relations established between the two countries. Indeed this they would find to their loss, was the Treaty abrogated, as many now, apparently, anxiously wish. At the present time, particularly, to disturb the friendly spirit which seems to animate the intelligent and respectable of the two nations is in the highest degree reprehensible. Every thing reasonable should be done to cultivate and strengthen it. Mutual interests require that the principle "bear and forbear" should be practically recognized.

We hope, therefore, that any overtures or changes proposed by our neighbors will be received and considered in a kind and courteous spirit. If, as the Quebec Gazette says, a renewal of the Treaty is contingent upon its amendment, let us know and consider the changes desired. If formal negotiations are necessary to avert difficulty and adjust differences, it should be our business to deal frankly with the question, and with a correct appreciation of the great diversified interests with which it is connected.

TOWNSHIP COUNCILS.

On Tuesday next most of Township Councils will meet to elect their Reeves and Deputy Reeves. From the lists that have reached us, we think, on the whole, that the different Councils are composed of intelligent and honorable men. And it is of intelligent and honorable men that our Councils should be composed of. They have important duties to discharge; and the proper discharge of them will be in proportion as these qualities predominate; and one of their most important duties is the election referred to. Much discrimination and good judgment are to be exercised in such elections. We sincerely hope, therefore, that the various Councils will allow no petty feelings or any outside influence to interfere in their electing the best and the best qualified men. If possible, the old Reeves and Deputy Reeves should be elected, especially, this year. Men of experience are wanted in the Council—men who have been there before—and who, therefore, from their past knowledge, are able to take hold of things at once. This year will be one of considerable financial disbursement; and if the Councils neglect to have as their delegates men whose past career has shown them to be friends of retrenchment and able to grapple with financial affairs and their consequent complications, they will rue it, and that before long. It takes years to become acquainted with such matters; and that Township Council who has a man who has been year after year their representative, and who has by his acts approved himself in that capacity, will, under existent circumstances, show laudable discretion and sound practical wisdom by dealing him for the present year. It is hinted by some that outside influence is being brought to bear upon some of the Councils to induce them to act against their better judgment in this respect. But we have too much confidence in the honor, honesty and fair play of our Peterboro' yeomen to believe that any such influence will have any weight. We believe any such attempt will be spurned with contempt, and treated as the veriest insult. What can be more mean than, without cause, turning the cold shoulder upon one who has aimed, and who has succeeded, too, to advance and better the interests committed to his care? Nothing that we can conceive of. It is ingratitude of the deepest dye, that no process of reasoning, however ingenious or sophistical, can explain away, or palliate. When there is cause—when one has proved himself incapable or unworthy of the confidence reposed in him—it is quite another thing. We hope therefore, for their own sakes, and for the honor and benefit of the County generally, that Councils will show their good sense by electing those whose experience, and high character, will prove that they have done their duty, and be a guarantee that the interests of the County will be properly cared for.

TOWN COUNCIL.

MONDAY, January 11th, 1864.

Present, His Worship the Mayor, and Messrs. Teale, Lennox, Carlile, Fry, Landy, Michelle, Clanton, Ryan and Donaldson.

The minutes of former meeting were read and confirmed.

A communication from Mr. Ivan O'Beirne, Secretary of the Commissioners, informing Council that Mr. Lennox who had rented the old Town Hall, changed one dollar a week for the use of the sheds for the Fire Department, and that the Commissioners wished the Council to arrange with Mr. Lennox.

A petition was received from Jos. Linen, asking the Council to allow him $20 as Fire Inspector for 1864, was received.

A petition from A. McNeil, asking a reduction of the sum paid by him for an Auctioneer's License.

Also, a petition from Mrs. Catherine Long asking the Council to assist her to pay her fare to join her husband in the United States army, was received.

A report from the Committee on Finance recommending payment of accounts to the amount of $288 66, and remitting the taxes of the following persons, viz.:—Mary Jenkins, Timothy Cashman, Mrs. Plunkett and Mrs. Sherwood; not recommending the remission of the taxes of Jno. Parnell; also recommending that the sum owing by John Lane be collected.

As to the petition of Alex. Morrow, Jr., in reference to the Market Tolls, the Committee beg to be excused from not recommending a definite course for the Council to pursue in the matter.

Peterborough and Monaghan Road Company.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the above Company was held in Mr. Fortye's office on Monday last, when the following gentlemen were elected Directors for the current year:—W. Clanton, R. Dennistoun, J. W. Gilmour, W. Lundy and Jas. Hall. By a report submitted at the meeting we see that there has been quite a falling off in the receipts during the past four years. In 1860 they were $1,070; 1861, $1,101 82; 1862, $872; and in 1863, only $534. This falling off, it seems, is ascribed in a great measure to the short sighted policy pursued by former Directors, which resulted in opening up an opposition road. The present Directors, however, appear sanguine that they will be able to put things in a better condition, both for the stockholders and the community. Want of space forbids us saying more in the present issue; we may revert to the matter more fully in our next.

ELECTION OF TRUSTEES.

The Election of Trustees in the different Wards, yesterday, passed off in the usually quiet manner. The following gentlemen were elected by acclamation.

South Ward.....W. Helm.
Centre Ward.....Col. Haultain.
East Ward.....W. Chantler.
North Ward.....J. R. Walton.

We draw the attention of Stockholders to the meeting of the Little Lake Cemetery Company on the 18th inst. We are requested to say that all owners of lots in the Cemetary are Shareholders.

CRAWFORD has a notice or rather a bundle of notices in our advertising columns. He wants you to read it, (or them) and give him a call. His bookbindry is in full blast.

THE FASTEST YET.—The Scotia, Cunard steamer, has the honor of having made the fastest transatlantic trip on record. Her last homeward voyage occupied but 8 days and 21 hours!

King Kamehameha VI. of the Sandwich Islands, died on the 30th of November, aged 29. He leaves no children. His brother, Prince Lot, takes the throne.

NO PLACE TO SLEEP.—The Toronto Police station in that city are being thronged every night by large numbers of unfortunate persons of both sexes who beg for shelter from the inclement weather.

GREENWOOD.

This individual who was supplied at a late session, at Toronto, of the murder of CATHARINE WALSH, was recently convicted of coming fire to the House on Sussex Street, in which the body of the unfortunate CATHARINE WALSH was found. The evidence against him was very conclusive. He was sentenced to seven years imprisonment in the Provincial Penitentiary, the utmost period allowed by law. He yet remains to be tried for upon the charge of being accessory to the death of AGNES MARSHALLS' child. Mr. GALT conducted the case for the Crown. The prisoner was defended by Mr. M. C. CAMERON. Verily, the way of Transgressors is hard.

THE LAST RESOURCE OF SPECULATION.—The Morning Journal says the quantity of pig iron produced this year in Scotland may be set down at not less than 1,150,000 tons, which valued at the average prices of the year, of 55s. per. ton, represents a total value of £3,162,500 sterling, thus exhibiting an increase in the quantity of 70,000 tons, and in the value of £300,000, when compared with the returns of 1862. The stocks of pig iron in Scotland have now increased to at least 750,000 tons, which, calculated at the average price of this week of 55s. per ton, amounts to £2,437,500 sterling. There are to-day 122 furnaces in blast against the average of 120 furnaces in blast last year. The price is now 64s. 6d. against 55s. 6d. twelve months ago.

COTTON IN ILLINOIS.—It is estimated that Illinois also will produce five hundred thousand bales of cotton next year, and we understand that the Government of the United States have given instructions to their General in command of the army in the South to have all the seed saved that is possible, for planting in that and other western States, but should their expectations not be fulfilled it is gratifying to know that we have a sovereign remedy for coughs, colds, cramps in the stomach, cholic, cholera morbus, and complaints of the like nature, in the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," sold by all Medicine Dealers, 25 cts per bottle.

SHODDY is in a state of delighted agony and ecstacy over a splendid diamond on exhibition and for sale at a jewellery store under Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York. It is indeed a big thing, and for that matter it ought to be at the price asked for it, viz: twenty-two thousand dollars. This magnificent "gem," as Hibernian shoddy terms it, is a regular eye-watering affair; and to be in fact, the handsomest and most magnificent jewell of the Golconda species that has ever attended the United States by adding itself down to mong them.

THE EXPORTS of the manufacturing corporations of New England for the past year exhibit the folly of an exaggerated protection, and the gross wrong of sectional tariff. Many of these corporations have declared dividends as high as fifty per cent on their gross capital, a profit created by prices made unnecessarily high by the shutting out of foreign goods through a prohibitive tariff.

THE New York Post says the exportation of arms to Europe is now a brisk business at that port. The supply of rifles and muskets of American manufacture is now fully equal to the demands of our armies, and the European small arms which were bought a year or two since for the government, are returning to their places in the arsenals and factories which were emptied for our accommodation.

RECALL OF A GOVERNOR.—The English Government has recalled His Excellency Governor Dundas from Prince Edwards Island. The reasons have not been made public, but the probability is suggested that his course in ordering a Federal war vessel away from Charlottetown, when there was no necessity for doing so, has given umbrage to the Imperial Government.

AN important arrest was made in New York last Thursday, of parties engaged in an extensive manufacture of Confederate notes, under a regular contract with the Secretary Memminger. The principal in the affair was one Winthrop E. Hilton. Over a million dollars in printed notes was found, together with a lot of machinery obtained for shipment to the rebels.

HEARD FOURTEEN HUNDRED MILES AT SEA!—It is said, as a fact, that the bells of a Convent on the ocean side, were once heard by some sailors 1,400 miles at sea! The power of the human voice is destroyed very easily, and cultivated as easily. Try when of Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers, 25 cents; they cure coughs, sore throats, hoarseness, and colds generally. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

PRICE OF ROSIN.—In 1861 the price of rosin in New York was $6.20 per barrel of 280 lbs, to-day it is worth from $10 to $20 per barrel, the greatest rise in an article of common use known to modern commerce. It was chiefly produced in North Carolina. But France, California and the West India Islands now supply the larger portion of the turpentine and rosin in the markets of the world.

NOVA SCOTIANS IN THE FEDERAL ARMY.—A gentleman of this city has a letter from his brother, now in Boston, after serving some time as a soldier under the Lincoln government, stating that the muster roll of the United States' forces, lately published, shows the names of no less than five thousand two hundred Nova Scotians in the ranks of the Northern armies.

THE LATE STORM ON THE ENGLISH COAST. The Shipping Gazette's city article states the loss of the insurance companies in consequence of the late storm to be as high as £150,000 to £200,000.

THE CHEAPEST.—This ill-fated steamer has been hauled into the Royal Naval Dockyard, at Halifax, where she will likely remain in safe keeping until the decision of the British authorities respecting her is made known.

....It is reported that a Confederate prisoner called for three cheers for General Butler, on the occasion of the general's recent visit to Point Lookout, but that the man was shouted down by others, who remembered Jeff Davis's proclamation on that subject.

....The Legislature of Alabama has voted that the beautiful carpets that cover the floors of the Senate Chamber, Hall of Representatives, and all offices and committee rooms in the elegantly furnished Capitol at Montgomery, be cut up and given to the soldiers of the army for blankets.

....The Government of Nova Scotia has gone into the cranberry business; this fruit abounds on Sable Island, and the persons stationed there to assist those shipwrecked are employed in gathering it. The product this year was about two hundred barrels and tierces, the former selling for $6 per barrel.

....The present is the most prolific game season ever known in Iowa. Every train from the west brings a car-load of quails, pheasants, and prairie chickens. We learn that the Iowa Central road carries over a larger amount. The Chicago and eastern markets will soon be, if they are not already, glutted, and then the prices will come down.

COAL.—Of the 34,536 chaldrons of coal which entered Halifax during the year, 20,426 chaldrons has been sent out from the New Mines; and 360 from Great Britain. 4,000 of these chaldrons have been required for government contracts; 993 for exportation, and 19,543 have been purchased by the citizens.

BY the arrival of the Ocean Queen we have later news about the war that has broken out between New-Granada and Ecuador, Gen. Mosquera at the head of 4,000 men, gained a great victory over the Equadorans at Cuaspud, on Dec. 6. The latter are said to have lost 1,500 killed and wounded, and 2,000 prisoners.

AN IMPORTANT ORDER.—By the Canada Gazette of January 2nd, the following 'order' is made public:—"With reference to the General Order No. 1 of the 6th of August, 1862, all Requisitions for the Regulation Allowance of Ammunition, will in future be forwarded direct to the Adjutant General's office at Headquarters.

OUR OWN STORY.—A Boston beggar woman, who has heretofore been exempted to receive a five cent bit, astonished the editor of the Morning Gazette the other day by refusing it with some disdain, exclaiming: "Why yer honor, don't yo know everything is rite." As she was evidently on her uppers, he yielded.

A BIG STORY.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

SIR,—An Article of the Peterborough Reformer of the 7th inst. contains a big story concerning the Municipal elections in the Township of Dummer. It is a deplorable fact that rabid zeal and party politics about the time of election often hurry men beyond the verge of truth; but after the poll is closed and the Returning Officer has declared a candidate duly elected by a certain majority, he must be a bold man, indeed, who will falsify the figures and publish that falsehood in a public journal: And yet the writer of the article referred to has not scrupled to do so; for in speaking of Ward No. 4, he says: "Mr. Choate has been elected, the majority being 3 votes." Now, the fact is, the Returning Officer declared Mr. Choate elected by a majority of 4 votes. To this statement we defy contradiction; and every body in the Ward knows that there were three of Mr. Choate's warmest supporters present, ready to vote for him, but had not recorded their names, when Mr. Payne suddenly resigned; so that, in reality, Mr. Choate's majority in the Ward is 7, instead of 4; and if, in addition to this, we bear in mind that his supporters pay nearly three-fourths of the taxes in this Ward, and are allowed, even by their opponents, to possess at least three-fourths of the intelligence of the Ward, it will be seen that Mr. Choate takes his seat in the Council with great honor. But the perpendicular gentleman that wrote the article in question discourages the people by saying that he "cannot congratulate them on the change." What a distinguished honor the electors of Ward No. 4 have lost by not securing this mannempoop's hearty congratulations! How can we bear up under this calamity? We shall see.

Yours, &c.,
AN ELECTOR.

Dummer, Jan. 11, 1864.

LADIES FOR HARD WORK.—Fond as the Abyssinian women are of embroidered garments and other fineries, it is strange that they should never try to gain even a slight acquaintance with the needle. High and low alike depend upon their male friends for every stitch in their dress. Tastes of course vary in different countries, but I confess that it always provoked me to see a tall red-faced fellow acting as dressmaker, and a slender girl performing the functions of a groom. Several times I tried to introduce reforms among our own people; but the very attempt to allot to each his own proper work, produced such a storm of disapprobation that I gave up the matter in despair. But if it is provoking to see a man pilfering the needle, it is still more aggravating to see him monopolize the laundry. It is true, the Abyssinians have as strong a prejudice against a clean face, still whenever during the course of the year the shirt of the shamma requires a little scrubbing, a big fellow better adapted to plow the field performs the agreeable job. This kind of work which is the heaviest the men performs, admits of no comparison with the more onerous duties devolving upon the poor women. In a large household where a good number of females are required some go early in the morning to collect wood and others to fetch water; while not a few busily employed their hands in cleaning the stables, or in preparing the bread, akiro, dillok, and wots for breakfast. To remove the husks from the grain before it is washed and ground, is considered by all as a most tiring job. We usually employ two at this occupation to relieve each other; but the unfeeling natives have no such consideration, and will sometimes force their female servants or slaves to stand over the rude mortar till their arms become almost paralyzed, and they are ready to drop from sheer exhaustion and fatigue.—Wanderings in Abyssynia.

THE "TIMES" AND ITS CONDUCTORS.—The London correspondent of the New York Times, speaking of the quarrel between Mr. Cobden and the London Times, says:—"The English press, as a rule, wish newspapers to be impersonal, and writers and editors to be anonymous. It is the paper that is to receive praise or censure. If any one wishes to sue for libel, there is the printer, whose name is in the imprint, on every copy. Conductors, editors, and writers of leading articles, change or die; the paper lives on, and becomes an institution, quite disconnected from those who happen at any time to be engaged in it. This is the theory, but it is not the fact. Mr. Walter is known everywhere as the chief proprietor of the Times, and there is a rumor, strengthened by the support the leading journal gives the Government, that he is destined to the Peerage. The managing conductor of the Times is equally well known to be Mr. Morris, certainly one of the most clever men in Europe, while the editor through whose hands everything must pass, though he may never write a line, is equally well known as the accomplished Mr. DeLane, whose father occupied a similar position. As to the writers of the leaders, and the correspondents, they are quite as well known, or may be by any one who chooses to inquire, and whatever they may protest, they are as really held responsible personally for what they write, as if their names were signed, in the French fashion, to every article. Thus the New York correspondent of the Times is denounced by the whole radical and abolitionist party in England as a traitor to his principles and his pesons of former days, while the special correspondent who has enlightened us on the condition and feelings of the Western States, is just as well known, as the advocate of unity in Italy, and disunionists in America."

DISPOSITION OF COURT MARTIALS.

DECREASE IN MANY CASES.

Not many days since, information reached the President that a young man belonging to the Army of the Potomac had been sentenced by court martial to be shot for desertion. The boy was destined to die in a few hours when the dispatch was received. No time was to be lost. A telegram was sent to Gen. Meade, suspending the execution. An examination of the case was ordered by the President when it was ascertained that the young man ought to have been promoted long ago for gallant and meritorious service, instead of being shot.

It appeared that upon the march of the Army of the Potomac towards Maryland, on the occasion of Lee's first raid northward, the young man [illegible] and fell out of the ranks, and on soon as he recovered he proceeded to after his regiment, but not finding it, and there being no time to lose, he fell into the ranks of another regiment, and fought gallantly at "South Mountain," and "Antietam," and was wounded in the last named battle! He was sent to the hospital, which fact, by the absence of a proper system in such cases, did not reach the officers of his regiment. At last he was arrested, tried, condemned, and was about to be shot, when, by the interference of the Executive, his life was saved, and a young man hastily condemned to an ignominious death, was suddenly restored to honor.

A GREAT INVENTOR.—The St. Catharine's Journal copies a paragraph that appeared a few days since in The London about the [illegible] Tennyson, and adds:—"Our readers will readily recognize the individual referred to above. He certainly cut a very fine figure in this town, his last one being to row a 9-4 greenback from a Scotchman which he got out of town. It is said there were exciting games contested between Col. Trouillion or Tremyllen and a Scotch[illegible] a few days before he left. The captain had been profuse in protestations of [illegible] but at last he 'smelt a rat,' accused the 'Colonel' with cranky very many nots, and presented a revolver at his countenance, telling him that if he ever repeated them in his (the Colonel's) person. The 'Colonel' was present at the ball given by the 30th battalion, and made a regular spread eagle speech, for the benefit of Col. McGivern and some of his officers. An insurance agent of the town has some $30 invested in the 'Colonel,' and the southern refugees have indulged into amounts of green-backs entrusted to his care. No doubt he will take good care of them."

WAR IN SOUTH AMERICA.—The [illegible] government of Ecuador has made war upon the pacific government of Columbia, by a double invasion. An army has entered the country in the interior, and a squadron of armed vessels has seized one of the small ports on the Pacific coast. Gen. Mosquera has pursued a perfectly upright and peaceful course toward Ecuador, and there has not been the slightest valid provocation to war on his part. But he has expelled the Jesuits, compelled bishops and priests to take the oath of allegiance and obey the laws, applied the mortmain estates to the wants of the state, and done all in his power to promote general education, religious freedom, public improvements, trade, and general prosperity and happiness. Of course, the Government of Ecuador does not expect to subjugate Columbia by force of arms. But the presence of an invading force may serve as the rallying point for the disaffected priests in Columbia, and if the struggle can be kept up long enough, a protest may be found for French intervention in the interests of the "Latin race" against the human race.—Bankruptcy Paper.

SPEED IN IRON-CLADS.—We are very glad to learn that in the construction of the new monitors great head has been paid to the all-important element of speed. This has been one of the chief radical defects of those that have been hitherto built. None of them, we believe, has ever been able to exceed [illegible] knots an hour. Many of them [illegible] utterly useless to [illegible] which, in the regions to which they were destined, [illegible] of prime importance. But the new monitors, furnished with powerful engines, will make triple or quadruple the speed of the old monitors: those of the Passaconk type having a speed of twelve, and those of the Dictator type of fifteen knots an hour. Am. Paper.

A CANADIAN IMPRISONED FOR AIDING AMERICAN SOLDIERS TO DESERT.—As many of our readers know, Arthur Delmage, of this place, was arrested at Port Huron, in August last, on a charge of aiding and procuring the desertion of American soldiers, by carrying them in a skiff across the river from Port Huron to this place. On this charge he was lodged in the St. Clair county jail, and bail being refused, was ultimately conveyed to Detroit. Here he was kept in confinement pending the sitting of the U. S. District Court, at which he was tried for the offence. The trial took place last week, and resulted in a verdict of "guilty." He was sentenced to pay $10 fine, and to receive one year's imprisonment in Wayne county gaol. Sarnia Observer.

A CURE FOR WHOOPING COUGH.

St. Hyacinthe, Canada E., Aug. 21, 1863.

Messrs. Seth W. Fowle & Co.:

GENTLEMEN:—Several months since a little daughter of mine, ten years of age, was taken with Whooping Cough in a very aggravated form, and nothing we could do for her seemed in any way to relieve her suffering. We at length decided to try a bottle of your Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry. In three hours after she had commenced using it, she was greatly relieved, and in less than three days was entirely cured, and is now well. I have since recommended the Balsam to many of my neighbors, who have used it, and in no case have it fail of effecting a speedy cure.

You are at liberty to make any use of the above you think proper. If it shall relieve any body to use your Balsam I shall be glad, for I have great confidence in it.

Yours,
F. GUITTE,
Proprietor of the Courier de St. Hyacinthe.

RELIEF IN TEN MINUTES.

BRYANT'S

PULMONIC WAFERS.

The most certain and speedy remedy ever discovered for all Diseases of the Chest and Lungs, Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Consumption, Bronchitis, Influenza, Hoarseness, Difficult breathing, Sore throat &c., &c., &c.

THESE WAFERS give the most instantaneous and perfect relief and when persevered with according to directions, never fail to effect a rapid and lasting cure. Thousands have been restored to perfect health who have tried other means in vain. To all climes and all constitutions they are equally a blessing and a cure—none need despair, no matter how long the disease may have existed, or however severe it may be, provided the organic structure of the vital organs is not hopelessly decayed. Every one afflicted should give them an impartial trial.

To Vocalists and Public Speakers, these Wafers are peculiarly valuable; they will in one day remove the most severe contracted hoarseness; and their regular use for a few days will, at all times, increase the power and flexibility of the voice, greatly improving its tone, compass and clearness, for which purpose they are regularly used by many professional vocalists and public speakers.

The corporation of the County of Peterboro' hereby enacts:—That the Warden of this County be and he is hereby authorized to issue Fifteen Debentures, for the sum of One Thousand Dollars each; two of which shall be made payable on the first day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five; and two on the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-six; and two on the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven; and two on the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight; and two on the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine; and two on the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy; and two on the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one; and two on the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two; and two on the first day of January, in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three; the said Debentures to bear interest at the rate of six per cent per annum, to be paid half-yearly on the first day of July and the first day of January in each and every year.

And be it enacted, that the aforesaid Debentures, and interest on such Debentures as aforesaid, shall be payable at the office of the Treasurer of the County of Peterborough.

County Council Chamber,
Peterborough, 21st November, 1863.

The above is a true copy of a proposed By-Law to be taken into consideration by the Municipality of the County of Peterborough, at the County Council Chamber, in the Town of Peterborough, on TUESDAY, the 22nd day of MARCH, 1864, at the hour of twelve o'clock, noon, at which time those favorable to the passing of the Council are hereby required to attend for the purpose aforesaid.

PROSPECTUS

OF THE

Canada Farmer

A NEW

OF

Agriculture, Horticulture

AND

RURAL AFFAIRS.

THE [illegible] at present whether a [illegible] tural Journal can be sustained [illegible] proposed to issue early [illegible] first [illegible] of The Canada Farmer, which contains the publication [illegible] tain sixteen pages quarto of closely printed matter. It will be printed on fine paper, from an entirely new font of type. The services of an able agricultural writer as Editor-in-Chief have been secured, and he will be assisted by an efficient staff of writers, reporters and correspondents. First-class artists and engravers have also been retained to prepare illustrations for the paper. No exertion or expenditure will be spared to render the new Journal a worthy representative and advocate of the Agricultural interests of Canada.

In the conduct of The Canada Farmer, the following ends will be assiduously labored for:—

1.—To arouse public attention, by frank and temperate discussion, to all questions scientific, commercial, legislative or otherwise, specially affecting the farming interest.

2.—To stimulate the Agriculturists of our country to adopt an improved system of husbandry, by blending the lessons of modern science with the practical experience of the Canadian Farmer.

3.—To bring under the attention of our Farmers all improvements at home or abroad, worthy of adoption, affecting the management of Field Crops—the Barn-yard—the Stable—the Dairy—the Orchard—the Poultry Yard—the Apiary—the Kitchen Garden—and the Flower Garden; and to excite an interest in the progress of Rural Architecture and Landscape Gardening, and in all that concerns the Domestic Economy of the Farmhouse.

4.—To mark and report all improvements in Agricultural Machinery—foster new inventions—and promote the adoption of all labour-saving machines in the work of the farm and garden.

5.—To keep prominently under attention all that specially concerns the Dairy-farmer and the Grazier; the best breeds of cattle—the best systems of feeding—the most approved processes of cheese and butter making—the best mode of packing—and the best markets to sell in.

6.—To keep prominently in view whatever is specially interesting to the Sheep-raiser and Wool-grower—the breeds best adapted to our climate—the best systems of winter and summer management—and the varying prospects of the wool market.

7.—To afford the Farmers of Canada an ever-open medium for addressing their brother Agriculturists throughout the Province, suggesting matters of common interest and advantage, and eliciting information or advice on practical questions of difficulty or doubt.

8.—To report carefully the Proceedings at Agricultural Shows, Fairs and Sales through out the Province—note the condition and progress of the Herds and Flocks of prominent Stock-breeders; record the importation of Thorough-bred stock from abroad, and publish Engravings of First Class Prize Animals.

9.—To watch and report carefully and promptly the actual state and probable prospects of the Produce Markets at home and abroad; and specially promote all movements designed to secure the best prices in the best markets for Canadian Farm Produce.

10.—To afford the Farmers of Canada a common medium where all who have for sale Live Stock, or Seed Grain, or Land, or who may wish to buy such, can make his desires known directly to the whole farming population of Canada.

☞ The Canada Farmer will be published for ONE DOLLAR per annum, POSTAGE FREE payable strictly in advance.

CLUBS

Will be furnished at the following rates:—

TWELVE COPIES for.....TEN DOLLARS.
TWENTY COPIES for.....FIFTEEN DOLLARS.
FIFTY COPIES for.....TWENTY-FIVE DOLS.
ONE HUNDRED for.....SIXTY DOLLARS.

Communications on Agricultural subjects are invited, addressed to "The Editor of the Canada Farmer," and all orders for the paper will be sent to

GEORGE BROWN,
Proprietor and Publisher.

☞ As FIFTY THOUSAND COPIES of the first number will be printed and circulated, an unequalled opportunity for Advertisers will be presented. The charge will be twenty cents per line.

"PETERBOROUGH EXAMINER"

Only $1 Pet Year in Advance.

What family should be without Godey's Lady's Book? It costs $3.00 a year. We will, however, furnish both the EXAMINER and LADY'S BOOK for $2.75! that is, both for 25 cents less than what you pay for the LADY'S BOOK alone. Or, to every subscriber paying in advance we will, for an extra 75 cents, furnish Madame Demorest's Mirror of Fashions, and Quarterly Journal du Grande Mode, each number of which contains large and magnificent Fashion Plates, splendid Illustrations of all the fashionable and Paris novelties, for Ladies' and Children's Dress, useful information, and the four life-size Patterns, cut ready for use, etc., etc. It should be remembered that each yearly subscriber to Mme. Demorest's Mirror of Fashions is entitled to the selection of 50 cents' worth of extra patterns, or a copy of Mme. Demorest's System for cutting Children's Dresses, or for 50 cents more, the Ladies' System. That is, for 75 cents, we will give to every subscriber of the EXAMINER paying in advance, $1.50 worth. More than this, we will likewise pay the American postage, which is no small item. Those who have paid in advance are entitled to the same privileges. Or, if farmers prefer they can, instead of the above journals, the extra 75 cents, have Judd's celebrated American Agriculturist, which ought to be in the hands of every farmer. Money should be sent in at once.

To any one sending us 6 subscribers we will give Kingsley's Crimean War; 8 subscribers, Alcock's Tycoon Capital; 10 subscribers, Webster's Dictionary; 15 subscribers, Worcester's Largest Dictionary.

The party sending a club can, if he chooses, select any other work of a similar value. The cash must in every instance accompany the order.

A Special Premium will be given to the party sending in the largest number of subscribers by the 1st of March. Names can be sent in at any time, and will be credited as received.

Poetry.

A SHACK IN SCHOOL.

A District School not far away
Mid Berkshire hills, one winter's day,
Was humming with its wonted noise
Of three score mingled girls and boys—
Some few upon their tasks intent,
But more on furtive mischief bent;
While the master's downward look
Was fastened on a copy book—
When loud and clear a rousing smack
As 'twere but a battery of blue
Let off in a tremendous kiss!
"What is that?" the startled master cries,
"That this," a little imp replies,
"Watch William Willitch, if you please—
"I saw him kith Thuthana Peaches!"
With frown to make a statute thrift,
The master thundered "hither Will!"
Like wretch o'er taken on his track
With stolen chattels on his back.
Will hung his head in fear and shame,
And to the awful presence came—
A great grave bashful simpleton,
The butt of all good natured fun.
With smile suppress'd and birch upraised
The threatener faltered—"I'm amazed,
That you, my biggest pupil should
Be guilty of an act so rude!
Before the whole set school to boot—
What evil genius put you to it?"
"'Twas she herself, sir, sobbed the lad,
I didn't mean to be so bad;
But when Susanna shook her curls,
And whispered I was 'frald of girls,
I couldn't stand it, sir, at all!
But up and kissed her on the spot,
I know—boo hoo—I ought to not,
But somehow from her looks—boo hoo,
I thought she kind o' wished me to!"

Varieties.

WANTED.—By the miserable, the leaf that produces crumbs of comfort.

"Home, sweet home," as the bee said when it entered its hive.

"I see through it," as the old lady said when the bottom of her tub fell out.

"Rents are enormous," as the poor fellow said when he looked at his garment.

A LEGAL OPINION.—"It is not libellous to call a man who has kicked you down stairs a free-hoster.

Mr. Lowe feels sheepish about his name just now. For every friend a man loses for truth's sake, he gains a better.

Why is a man's chin the most unlucky part of his body? Because it is constantly getting into scrapes.

What quadrupeds are admitted to balls, operas and dinner-parties? White kids; sometimes the gotes themselves go with them.

Why is a drunkard hesitating to sign the pledge like a sceptic Hindoo? Because he doubts whether to give up the worship of Jug-er-not.

LIVING ON SMALL MEANS.—For breakfast, eat three dried apples, without drink; for dinner, drink a quart of water to swell the apples; take tea with a friend."

"Mamma," said a little girl, "can a door speak?" "Certainly not, my love." "Then why did you tell me again to answer the door this morning?"

"There's sweet music in dreams," said an old gentleman. "Yes there may be," said his wife; "but I hear nothing of it except a snore."

I am astonished, my dear girl, at your sentiments, you make me start." "Well, sir, I have been waiting you to start for the last hour."

A YOUNG LADY'S SENTIMENTS.—If it was not good for Adam to live single when there was not a woman on earth, how very criminally guilty are old bachelors, with the world full of pretty girls!

A mathematician, being asked by a stout fellow—"If two pigs way twenty pounds, how much will a large hog weigh?" Jump into the scales, and I will tell you immediately."

"My son, hern't I told you three times to go and shut that gate?" said a father to a four-year-old. "Yes, and hare't I told you three times that I wouldn't do it. You must be stupid."

I never did see such a wind and such a storm, said a man in a coffee room. 'And pray, sir,' inquired a would be wit, 'since you saw the wind and the storm, what color might they be?' 'The wind blue, and the storm rose,' was the ready rejoinder.

An English writer says, in his advice to a young married woman, that their mother Eve married a gardner. Some one wittily remarked that it might be added that the gardner, in consequence of the match, lost his situation.

A Lady paying a visit to her daughter, who was a young widow, asked her "why she wore the widow's garb so long?"

"Dear mamma," replied the daughter, "it saves me the expense of advertising for a husband, as every gentleman can see for himself that I am for sale by a private contract."

A son of the Emerland Isle, meeting a countryman whose face was not perfectly remembered, after saluting him cordially, inquired his name. "Walsh," was the answer. "Walsh! Walsh!" responded Paddy, "are you from Dublin? I knew two old maids there of that name—was either of them yer mother?"

"My son," said a doting father, who was about taking his son into business, "what shall be the style of the new firm?" "Well, governor," said the one-and-twenty youth, looking up to find an answer, "I don't know; but suppose we have it John H. Sanspin and Father." The old gentleman was struck by the originality of the idea, but could not adopt it.

A SPICY PARAGRAPH.—"What is the use of living?" asked Jack Simmonds, the other day. "We are flogged for crying when we are babies; flogged because the master is cross when we are boys; obliged to toil sick or well, or starve, when we are men; to work still harder when we are husbands; and after exhausting life and strength in the service of other people, die and leave our children to quarrel about the possession of father's watch, and our wives to catch somebody else."

LATENT POWER IN THE CHURCHES.—Dr. Guthrie well remarks, that "it is impossible to over-estimate the power that lies latent in our churches. We talk of the power latent in steam—latent till Watt evoked its spirit from the waters, and set the giant to turn the iron arms of machinery. We talk of the power that was latent in the skies till science climbed their heights and, seizing the spirit of thunder, chained it to our surface—abolished distance, outstripping the wings of time, and flashing our thoughts across rolling seas to distant continents. Yet what are these to the moral power that lies asleep in the congregation of our country and of the Christian world?" And after all, it may be a serious question, whether a great deal of what is reckoned as "latent power" in our churches, may not in the end prove to have been only "the form," with no power at it.

MONEY EASILY MADE,
By either Gentlemen or Ladies.

I AM in possession of a beautiful French Art, which has been introduced in this Country only to a limited extent, and that in New York City It is something which every person stands in great need of, consequently will be extensively patronised. Persons can make money with it at home or abroad Thousands in France have made small fortunes at it, and are still doing so. I would state what it is, but persons purchasing the knowledge of it do not desire it made public. One Dollar sent to the undersigned will ensure the immediate return of a circular giving full information in the Art, and the requisite instructions to pursue it. It is strictly genteel, and the best and only thing ever introduced which every person can make money at. NO LETTERS NOTICED, except those containing. he required amount for instructions.

MANHOOD
AND THE
VIGOR OF YOUTH RESTORED
IN FOUR WEEKS,
By Dr. Sicotte's Essence of Life.

DR. SICOTTE, (OF PARIS) after years of earnest solicitation, has at length acceded to the urgent request of the American public, and appointed an agent in Toronto for the sale of his valued and highly prized Essence of Life. This wonderful agent will restore Manhood to the most shattered constitutions, whether arising from excesses, the effects of climate, or natural causes. The time required to cure the most inveterate case is four weeks; and if used according to printed instructions, which are very simple, failure is impossible. This life-restoring remedy should be taken by all about to marry, as its effects are permanent It is acknowledged by the medical press to be the greatest discovery ever made. Its developing powers are miraculous. Success in every case is as certain as that science overthrows ignorance.

Dr. Sicotte's Essence of Life is sold in cases, with full instructions for use, at $3, or four quantities in one for $9, and will be sent to any part, carefully packed, on receipt of remittance, to his accredit agent.

TWENTY-SIXTH BIRTHDAY
OF THE
STAR PAPER OF AMERICA!
January 1, 1864.

The New York Mercury
FOR THE
COMING YEAR.

AFTER more than a quarter of a century of uninterrupted success, The New York Mercury—standing first on the muster-roll of the Literature Press in this country—points proudly to its past career as a guarantee of new triumphs in the future.

Heretofore, it has eclipsed all rivalry; but it proposes to make the coming year memorable by eclipsing its own past history, and looming up before the world as the most marvel ous specimen of a fascinating, brilliant, amusing, and comprehensive Literary Newspaper that has ever been published in either hemisphere.

THE GENIUS OF EUROPE

will be laid under contribution to give brilliancy to its columns, and side by side with original productions of the most popular romancists of the Old Word. will be placed the chef d'œuvres of the most eminent story-writers of the New.

MISS M. E. BRADDON,

Authoress of "Aurora Floyd," "Lady Audley's Secret," "John Marchmont's Legacy," etc., etc., who has suddenly risen, like

A STAR OF THE FIRST MAGNITUDE

in the literary horizon of Great Britain, has been specially engaged to supply The New York Mercury from time to time with the wonderful creations of her genius, at a cost which no other weekly in America could venture to incur.

☞ Among the multitude of distinguished writers and artists who have become familiar to the masses through the vast circulation of the STAR WEEKLY OF AMERICA, may be mentioned the following, all of whom are still upon its staff:

Dr. J. H. Robinson,	Cousin May Carelton,
Margaret Blount,	W. O. Eaton,
Ned Huntline,	George Martial,
Arthur M. Grainger,	Julia S. Ingraham,
Grace Gardner,	Edward Willett,
Feliz O. C. Darley,	Mary Chester,
Miss M. E Braddon,	George Albany.

Scores of other distinguished literati, under various nom de plume, contribute to its columns, while its pictorial illustrations are from the inimitable pencil of Feliz O. C. Darley, Esq., the best draughtsman of the age.

The War, which has given the coup de grace to so many pretensious publications, and half destroyed those that still survive, had added thousands to the circulation of The New York Mercury.

Its heart-stirring short stori s, its military historiettes, its matchless serial romances, its racy burlesques, its general wit and humor, its delicious gossip, its fairy tales for little folks, its rare poetry, its fresh and vigorous editorials the infinite variety of its contents, and the large amount of reading matter that it comprises, render it welcome everywhere, and to classes of society. Containing, as is done,

FORTY COLUMNS

of closely-printed matter, it may safely be pronounced the cheapest, as well as the best Literary Newspaper extant.

Three favorite writers, Doctor J. H. Robinson Cousin May Carleton, and Ned Huntline, are now preparing three stories for The New York Mercury. One of these productions will be commenced in the Opening Number of the New Year. The authors being aware of this fact, are engaged in an emulative contest for precedence, and the result will unquestionably be that the most effective story ever penned by any of the three, will commence in the

NEW YEAR'S NUMBER

of the great REPRESENTATIVE WEEKLY of the Western World.

The New York Weekly is sold by all newsman and periodical dealers in America. To subscribers, it is regularly mailed every Saturday morning. For $3 a year; three copies for $8; six copies for $5; eight copies for $12, with an extra copy, free, to the getter-up of the club. Six months' subscriptions received. Always write plainly the name of your Post office County and State. We take the notes of all solvent banks at par. Payment must invariably be made in advance.

ATTENTION is directed to the rate of premiums adopted by this Company, which will compare favorably with that of any other institution in Canada. Investments of Company's funds to the large amount of nearly five hundred thousand dollars have been completed in Canada; and as all business transactions are finally disposed of in the Province, the Scottish Provincial offers all the facilities presented by a purely local Company, while it possesses the additional advantage of a large capital, and an influential and responsible body of shareholders in Great Britain.

Policies effected on or before 31st January next will receive a full year's bonus over those effected thereafter.

SOLDIERS in the ARMY!
AND OUR PEOPLE AT HOME,

Are now offered an opportunity by which they can obtain a

GOOD AND DURABLE TIME-PIECE,
At a very Low Figure.

OUR WATCHES are warranted to keep time one year, and the buyer is allowed the privilege of examination before the payment is required.

Improved Duplex in full Ruby Actions.

A first-class Hunting Time-Piece of silver material, over which is electro-find plated 18 k. gold, most durably wrought, making the imitation so faultless that it cannot be detected from the solid material by the most experienced Judge; acids will not affect it. Lendon made movement. Improved Duplex in full Ruby Actions has sweep seconds, and is not to be excelled in general appearance. This decidedly the one of the best articles ever offered for traders and speculators. Engineers, emigrants and persons travelling will find them superior to any other; alteration of climate will not affect their accuracy. Price, packed in good shape and good running order, only $35, or case of 5 for $200.

Silver Double Time Hunting Levers,

Best quality silver cases, over which electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, similar to our Improved Duplex, and superior adjusted movements with "stop," to be used in timing horses, ect.; has four ladeges for Washington and Greenwich time, sweep second, and all the improvements. All in all, taking its beautiful and faultless appearance and its superior movement into consideration, we regard it as decidedly the cheapest article of the kind in the market. Price, in good running order, $35, or case of 6 for $200.

☞ We ask no pay in advance, but will forward either of them to responsible parties, to any part of the loyal States, with bill payable to the express-man when the Good are delivered, giving the buyer the privilege of examination, and, if not satisfactory, the watch can be returned at our expense.

The express companies refuse making collections on soldiers, and other parties in the disloyal States, consequently all such orders must be accompanied by the cash to insure attention We make a deduction on either Watch when the payment is forwarded in advance.

Money may be sent by express at our expense

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK,
For 1864.

GREAT ENTERPRISE AT SIXTEEN YEAR.

THE PUBLISHER of Godey's Lady's Book, thankful to that public which has enabled him to publish a Magazine for the last thirty-four years of a larger circulation than any in America, has made an arrangement with the most popular authoress in this country,

MARION HARLAND,
Authoress of "Alone," "Hidden Path," "Moss," "Miriam Bell," and "Miserable."

Who will furnish Stories for the Lady's Book for 1864. This alone will place the Lady's Book in a literary point of view far ahead of any other Magazine. One other favourite writer will all continue to furnish contributions during the year.

The best Lady's Magazine in the world and the Cheapest.

THE LITERATURE

Is of that kind that can be read aloud in the family circle, and the clergy in numerous instances are subscribers for the Book.

THE MUSIC

Is all original, and would cost 25 cents, (the price of the Book) in the music stores; but most of it is copyrighted, and cannot be obtained except in Godey's.

OUR STEEL ENGRAVINGS.

All efforts to rival us in this have ceased, and we now stand alone in this department, giving as we do many more and infinitely better engravings than are published in any other work. Godey's immense double sheet Fashion-Plates, containing from five to seven full length colored Fashions on each plate—other Magazines give only two—are far ahead of any Fashions in Europe or America. The publication of these Plates cost $10,000 more than the Fashion Plates of the old style, and nothing but our wonderfully large circulation enables us to give them. Other Magazines cannot afford it. We never spare money when the public can be benefited.

These Fashions may be relied on. Dresses may be made after them, and the wearer will not subject herself to ridicule, as she would be if she visited the large cities dressed after the style of the plates in some of our so-called Fashion Magazines.

OUR WOOD ENGRAVINGS,

Of which we give twice or three times as many as any other Magazine, are often mistaken for steel; they are so far superior to any cheap.

IMITATIONS.

Beware of them. Remember that the Lady's Book is the original publication and the cheapest. If you take Godey, you want no other Magazine. Everything that is useful or ornamental in a house will be found in Godey.

DRAWING LESSONS.

No other Magazine gives them, and we have given enough to fill several large volumes.

OUR RECEIPTS

Are such as can be found nowhere else. Cooking in all its varieties — Confectionary — the Nursery—the Toilet—the Laundry—the Kitchen Receipts upon all subjects are to be found in the pages of the Lady's Book. We originally started this department, and have peculiar facilities for making it most perfect. This department alone is worth the price of the book.

LADIES' WORK TABLE.

This department comprises engravings and descriptions of every article that a lady wears.

MODEL COTTAGES.

No other Magazine has this department.

To Canada Subscribers in the British Provinces:

One copy one year, $3; two copies one year, $5; three copies one year $7.

Five copies one year, and a $5 gold piece to the person sending the club, making 6 copies for $11.50.

Special Clubbing with other Magazines.

Godey's Lady's Book and Arthur's Magazine, one year, $4.

Godey and Harper, one year, $5.

Godey, Harper, and Arthur, one year, $7.

At these prices subscribers in the Provinces will have only the British postage to pay.

Treasury notes and notes of all solvent banks taken at par.

Be careful and pay the postage on your letter.

Herrick's Sugar Coated Pills,
CHILDREN CRY FOR THEM!

THIS remarkable American remedy is carrying the world by storm. Over five million boxes are sold annually. Composed entirely of Flowers, Roots, Balsams, and Extracts,—their effect on the human system is pleasant, salutary, and successful.—Acting directly on the blood, glands, solids and fluids of the body, their use is attended with the happiest effects. In such diseases of diseases, one or two doses almost always cures. In old standing cases of sickness, small doses repeated frequently—do cleanse the system that good health is the result. No change in employment or diet is necessary. They never cause sore mouth, swelled joints, aching limbs, etc., as do many other kinds. They are warranted to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded. They are considered cheaper, safer, prettier, and at all respects superior to any pill ever put in the world

☞ The discoverer of casting a pill with sugar is associated with Dr. Herrick. All others are counterfeits, and if used, will do harm, and disappoint the sick. Herrick's pills are elegantly put up. 50 in a box, with a large sheet of directions, and sell for 25 cents a box; 6 boxes for $1.

Herrick's Kid Strengthening Plaster.

THE GREAT STRENGTHENER AND PAIN DESTROYER. THE BEST AND CHEAPEST HOUSEHOLD REMEDY IN THE WORLD.

These renowned Plasters cure pains, weakness and distress in the back, side and breast, in five hours. Indeed, so certain are they to do this, that the proprietor warrants them. Spread from tissue, linnenes and grass, on beautiful kid leather, renders them peculiarly adapted to the wants of females and children. Their application is universal—equally to the strong man, the feeble woman, and the delicate infant. To each and all they will prove a balm and a blessing. They are agreeable and without annoyance or trouble. Each Plaster will wear from one to four months, and in rheumatic complaints, spasms and bruises, frequently effect cures where all other remedies fail Full directions will be found on the back of each. Public speakers, vocalists, ministers of the gospel, and others, will strengthen their lungs and improve their voices by wearing them on their breast. Price 25 cents.

The above articles are sold by all the dealers in Canada, and by druggists throughout the United States and South America, at wholesale by all large druggists in the principal cities.

Original Poetry.

For the Examiner.

THE SNOW COVERED GRAVE.

Let one wander away to the spot 'neath the pines,
To look on the mound's, all I crave,
For the silence of night, while the silver moon shines,
Light up to my gaze the snow covered grave.

When I gaze on the spot so linked to my heart,
I forget the dread surging of life's heaving wave:
For my treasures are there, and 'twas a pang for to part;
Then still let me gaze on the snow covered grave.

The tears streaming thickly and coursing my cheek,
And knowing I had not the power for to save,
I dare not repine; then may I be meek
While gazing intent on the snow covered grave,

Though my heart were an adamant encased in a rock,
And broken asunder my pathway to pave,
It could not but melt, nor could it e'er mock
When I'm musing alone at the snow covered grave.

In recalling the past of my short wedded life,
All mingled with sunshine, and blessings to save;
No thoughts of remorse, nor of heart galling strife,
While gazing forlorn on the snow covered grave.

The Lord in His mercy came forth with his rod,
To bless me He wills it, and not to deprave,
To draw me much nearer to Jesus my God;
Still let me but gaze on the snow covered grave.

But why should I murmur at God's holy will,
Or why should I sink in oblivion's wave;
For though He should slay me I'll trust in Him still,
And wander to gaze on the snow covered grave.

But time may roll on, and season's fly past,
And life may be always containing a wave,
Yet still I'll remember through each thrilling blast
The moments I look on the snow covered grave.

A SUPPRESSED PRINCESS.

THE PAINFUL STORY OF AN EXCLUDED MEMBER OF THE ROYAL FAMILY.

(From the Newcastle Chronicle.)

There is more authentic romance in the streets of London than in any novel. In the quiet, half genteel, stucco-ye, and prosaic streets of Camden Town there lives, in indigence and neglect, a lady of the noblest descent, who has the blood of two Royal families in her veins, being descended from the last King of Poland and the great uncle of the present Queen of England. This lady bears the name of Lavinia Jannetta Horton Ryves, her proper rank and title being the Princess of Cumberland and Duchess of Lancaster. Age, suffering, and obscurity have accumulated upon her, but there is no documentary doubt of her being what she professes to be—an actual Princess of Cumberland. In 1850, when her children (she had three sons and three daughters), were languishing in sickness and want, she wrote to the Queen for aid. She was the appointed companion of the Queen when her Majesty was a little girl. Yet her Majesty sent no subsidy. The father of the Queen told Mrs. Ryves that "she could never ask anything of the Queen or her Royal mother that would be refused by either." Yet when the Princess of Cumberland asked, in her old age and utmost need, she was refused. The conduct of the Queen was very unusual, and must have proceeded from misapprehension or non-acquaintance with the facts. The refusal was unexpected and requires explanation. Mrs. Ryves history is very remarkable. We have known many people with a romantic grievance, in which fact and litigation were so blended that the interest left one had to struggle against want of proof. In this lady's case the proof is clear, systematic, curiously authentic, and complete. There can be no doubt of its truth, if definite and confirmed documents go for anything. The strange story was once given to the world by the lady herself, assisted probably by advisers. Since 1820 it has from time to time challenged public attention, in odd unexpected ways in Law Courts, in Parliament, and lastly under the form of "An Appeal for Royalty." Mr. Coningham, M. P., has taken great interest in it; Sir Fitzroy Kelly, whose eminence is a guarantee of the reality of the case, is, we understand, engaged in drawing up a petition concerning it with a view to Parliamentary action if need be.

The story of the Suppressed Princess sets forth that the Duke of Cumberland, born in 1745, who was the fourth brother to George III., had two wives. His first marriage was a secret to the public. His second marriage, which occurred in 1772, was the one known. His second wife was Lady Anne Horton, who, though bearing the title of Duchess of Cumberland, was never received at Court, nor recognised by the King. Her exclusion from Court continued unto the time of her death in 1808. The reason was, that the King (George III.) knew of the previous marriage of his brother, the Duke of Cumberland, and disapproved of this, and carried his disapprobation so far that he caused the passing of the Royal Marriage Act, still in force, to prevent these unequal marriages in future. Though not their origin it historically assigned of this Act, it is also referable to these circumstances.

When the Duke of Cumberland was a young man, there was a gentleman about the Court of George III.—one Rev. Dr. James Wilmot. His ancestor was a De Wilmot, who came over with the Conqueror. Heraldry in England came over with the Conqueror: however, Dr. Wilmot was undoubtedly a man of "good family," and, what is more to the purpose had married the Princess of Poland, daughter of Stanislaus, last King of that century. Of this Polish marriage one daughter was the issue—Miss Wilmot, a lady of great accomplishments, and of yet more remarkable beauty. Being much about Court, the Duke of Cumberland became enamored of her, and made her an offer of marriage, which was accepted; and they were married on the 4th of March, 1767, when the Duke was 22 years of age. There was nothing doubtful or mysterious about this marriage. It was done with deliberation, witnessed and authenticated in an unusually careful way. The position of Miss Wilmot's father at Court admitted of the highest cognizance of his family alliances. The Royal Marriage Act, which required the previous consent of the King to establish the legality of the marriage, was not then in existence; but this condition was fulfilled. George III. was present at Miss Wilmot's marriage, which was "solemnized" at Lord Archer's, Grosvernor Square. The Rev. Dr. Wilmot was the officiating clergyman; the Earl of Chatham (the William Pitt of oratorical memory), the Earl of Warwick, Lord Archer, and the King were present as friends of the bride. The first certificate of this marriage runs thus:—

"I hereby certify that I married Henry Frederick, Duke of Cumberland, to Olive Wilmot, March 4, 1767, such marriage having been duly solemnized according to the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England.

(Signed) "J. WILMOT."

If this were the only document in existence, this would not go for much, as the certificates of the bride's father might be ascribed to interested motives; but a second certificate exists, which says:

"I hereby certify that I married Henry Frederick, Duke of Cumberland, to Olive Wilmot, March 4, 1767, such marriage having been duly solemnized according to the rites of the Church of England.

(Signed) "J. WILMOT.
(Signed) "GEORGE R.
"CHAUHAM.

"I witnessed such marriage.

(Signed) "WARWICK"

Plainly, there could be no intention on the part of the King, or advisers of the King, to ignore or disown the reality of the marriage. George III. and the Earl of Chatham knew the value of their written certificates, and would never have given it, unless they intended them to be used, if required. But it would seem that Dr. Wilmot had lived long enough in the atmosphere of courts to be aware that one could never make too sure of the Royal word, and therefore, within seven months of the marriage of his daughter, the Duchess of Cumberland, he put in possession of this certificate:—

"Lord Chatham and Archer solemnly protest that the marriage of Henry Frederick, Duke of Cumberland, and Olive my daughter, the said Duke's present Duchess, was solemnized legally at the latter nobleman's residence, Grosvernor square, London, by myself, March 4, 1767.

(Signed) "J. WILMOT.
(Signed) "CHANTAM.
"ARCHER.

"3d Nov. 1757."

The evidence of the nobleman in whose house the marriage took place puts the matter beyond all doubt when coupled again with the Earl of Chatham's corroboration. The King must have approved of the marriage and wished it to remain valid, and these noblemen must have known it or they would not have thus accumulated proofs of the fact in Dr. Wilmot's hands. Here was a beautiful woman, of good family and unquestioned personal character, married to the Duke of Cumberland. Were this a mere marriage of honor or a marriage of law, the case would be poor, for everybody has not yet learned to expect that royalty is not scrupulously bound by the obligation of its word, or that these personages would necessarily respect a marriage of honor. But Miss Wilmot's marriage is manifestly a lawful marriage. In the third certificate, the one signed by Lords Archer and Chatham, she is specifically styled 'the Duchess,' and was recognized as such by those Lords. There was reason for Dr. Wilmot's precautions. The Brunswick family were as curious a family as ever an inscrutable destiny placed upon the throne of a sensible nation. Within four year's after the Duke of Cumberland's marriage with the Polish beauty, he went and married a Devonshire widow, his first wife being then alive. This time he selected Lady Anne Horton, daughter of Simon, first Earl of Carlampton, and relict of Christopher Horton, Esq., of Campton Hall, in the County of Derby. The second marriage took place on the 2d of October, 1771. The Duke of Cumberland was evidently greatly in advance of his age, and was suited by nature and grace to be a bright and particular star in some Mormon settlement. His Royal Highness had a daughter born by his first Duchess in April, 1772, whose birth was attested by Dunning, the Solicitor General of George III. (afterwards Lord Ashburton), and by Chatham. To make assurance doubly sure, two certificates of the baptism of "Olive, the infant daughter of the Duke of Cumberland," were made, and the second bears the attestation of Lord Warwick.

It has never been explained how it was or why it was that the marriage of the Duke with Miss Olive Wilmot was not proved previous to his second marriage. Had the fact of the existence of the Duchess of Cumberland been publicly known, the second union with Lady Anne Horton would have been difficult or impossible. The King knew it, and, to the credit of George III., he appears to have acted with kindness and with a feeling of justice towards the Princess Olive, and never recognized the second and colourless wife, Lady Anne of Cotton Hall, and kept her from Court all her life.

It appears, however, that when the King became aware of his brother the Duke of Cumberland's second marriage, he did all he could to protect the reputation of the first and lawful Duchess, and to protect his brother from either the legal consequences of bigamy or the scandal of it. George III. wrote a command to Lord Chatham that "on no pretence be he attempted to Olive Wilmot." Another certificate was then made by the clergyman of the solemnization, setting forth why it was done. That there was no intention to abolish or deny the infant is proved by another declaration signed by Lord Warwick, setting forth that "the infant child of the Duke of Cumberland" was received into his protection. In another certificate Dunning, the Solicitor-General, declares "the Duke's marriage with Olive Wilmot to be legal, by command of the King." Dunning must have known that the marriage was valid or he would have advised his royal master against the explicit declaration of it. Aware of the equivocal position that both mother and child were placed in by the subaction, the King had commanded and was honorably anxious to do them justice. Chatham and Warwick in another document certified that "Olive was the only child of Frederick, Duke of Cumberland, and Olive his wife," and to this the King attached his own sign manual "George R." More than this, he issued an order to Lord Chatham to pay yearly £500 to the "Duke's daughter" during her life. Chatham's and the King's signatures are to this document. Documents proof so circumstantial and exact hardly ever existed of similar facts. Two other written orders were made, one saying: "We declare the birth of Olive, the infant of the Duke of Cumberland, by Olive his Duchess, to be legitimate, who is condemned to privacy by the act of bigamy committed by her Royal father." This is a plain statement of fact, which nobody, not insane, would attempt to forge. Chatham, Dunning and the King signed this. Afterwards the King (Lord Warwick witnessing) "consents £5,000 to be applied to the benefit of Olive, the infant of our brother." Not content with these documentary precautions, George III. executed a yet more striking one, in which, "in the face of Almighty God," he solemnly certified, that he gave his Royal command that the "legitimate" Olive should be reberthed, as her father had "committed an act of bigamy by marrying Anne Horton." Dunning, the Solicitor-General, also, attests this emphatic document. Thus legitimatized and protected by Royal acknowledgement, the little Princess, when scarcely a year old, was "created Duchess of Lancaster," and authorized "to bear the arms and use the arms of Lancaster." This order was given at the palace of St. James's, May 21, 1773, and attested by Chatham and Dunning. In the lapse of time these documents which all still exist, might be disputed. Even this point is met by a declaration made by the Earl of Warwick in 1816, that the late Lord Chatham informed him that the "Lancaster creation" was "a conscientious act of his Majesty," and the patent in due course came into his possession, and that he was aware that "Olive, Princess of Cumberland, was called "Olive Serres." About the same time the Earl of Warwick and Edward, Duke of Kent, father of the present Queen, jointly testified that the patent of her creation and certificate of birth were duly delivered to Mrs. Serres. The means of attesting the truth of the Duke of Kent's signature exist still, and it appears that its genuineness has never been denied. Why, then, should her Majesty hesitate to believe her father's word. How corroborated this word we shall see.

What is also very curious, as disclosed by Mrs. Ryve's documents, George III. himself had two wives living at the same time; the first and true wife, Hannah Lightfoot, he deserted, and she died in secret. Queen Hannah and her three children were suppressed. The Lightfoot bigamy is neither curious nor unknown, but it has hitherto rested on rumor; the really curious part of the business is that Mrs. Ryves now furnishes the documents of the marriages. The Lightfoot marriage union is denied by those only who have not examined the documents. Dr. Wilmot was the clergyman who married the King in 1759, and William Pitt was a witness; and the desire to prevent this bigamy of his own coming up as a parallel to the Duke of Cumberland's double marriage is assumed to have influenced the King in the re-baptizement of the young Princess Olive. Queen Hannah lived several years after the King's marriage with Queen Charlotte. However, as regards Mrs. Ryves's claim, the King in a paper signed in 1773, undertook that the Princess Olive should be acknowledged after his death.

There is no doubt of the interest felt in the welfare of the Princess by the King. Her mother, abandoned by the Duke, died of a broken heart in France two years after the birth of her child (1776). Her daughter the Princess of Cumberland and Duchess of Lancaster, was brought up in a private station, and in ignorance of her rank. She displayed artistic talent, and married Mr. Serres a celebrated marine painter and had four children; her daughter Leonora, born in 1797 is the present Duchess, who claims the title. George III. was aware of Mrs. Serres's marriage and has left a certificate that the Princess Olive was living in 1803 as "Olive Serres."

It does appear that our long-delayed day of justice is arriving. The law courts have at length commenced their tardy recognition. In 1861, Mrs. Ryves appeared in the [illegible] Bellaire for Cromwell Cromwell [illegible] her legitimacy. She proved that her parents were married on the 1st September, 1719, at the parish church, Buttermere-the-Heath, in the county of Warwick—that she was born at Liverpool, on the 16th of March, 1797, that was the eldest surviving issue of the marriage—that she was baptized in that parish church of St. Nicholas, on the 31st August, 1797, and married to Anthony Thomas Ryves, at the parish church of St. George-the-Martyr, Southwark. The curate of St. Nicholas's parochial chapel of Liverpool, the Rev. John Welsh, was subpœnaed by the Court, and produced the original record of the baptism of Mrs. Ryves. Her father, Mr. Serres, was shown to have been the gentleman who established, at 2 Berners Street, London, the first British School of Art in England, with the exception of the Royal Academy, and that he was professionally engaged by the Admiralty at the battle of Trafalgar. He was the son of Dominic Serres, who was a Frenchman, and the first foreigner who obtained the distinction of admission to the membership of the Royal Academy, which has long allowed his grand-daughter, Mrs. Ryves an annuity. Mrs. Ryves addressed the Court on this occasion herself, in a very lucid, succinct manner, and displayed a memory of remarkable accuracy. Mr. Welsby, on the part of the Crown, watched the application of Mrs. Ryves for a decree of legitimacy. Sir C. Cresswell, after availing himself of the attendance of other judges, and the assistance of his learned brother, Justice Willes, said: "We think the case is established. Mrs. Ryves, the petitioner, has proved her three propositions, namely that her father and mother were lawfully married, that she was their lawful daughter, and that she was a natural born subject of these realms." He accordingly made a decree to that effect. Mrs. Ryves thanked the Court for the trouble they had taken in investigating the case. Sir C. Cresswell in the dignified language of an English judge of these days, said that "nobody owed the Court any thanks for anything it did, as it was merely its duty." Let us hope that in the able and influential hands of Sir Fitzroy Kelley other courts will no less do their duty—in former years postponed.

When her present Majesty's royal father was dying, he wrote:—

"Should I not recover, I command my dear cousin Olive [Mrs. Ryves' Mother] to my wife [our Queen's-mother] who will for my sake, love and serve her until she recovers her royal rights. I solemnly command my daughter [the present Queen] to restore the Princess Olive of Cumberland for my sake. If this paper meets my dear Alexandra's eye [that of her present Majesty] my dear cousin Olive will present it, whom my daughter will, for my sake, I hope, love and serve, should I depart this life."

Never were words more honorable, more conscientious, more anxious, more kind, or more touching than those dying words of the Queen's father. What can be the secret of that sad silence which has followed them? No subject of the Queen can read them without a feeling of painful wonder. Looking at an injunction so solemn and so undisputed, and at the unhappy fate of the Lady Olive, and the prolonged privation and suffering of her unfortunate daughter, Mrs. Ryves, there remains a great wrong which the people should see redressed, or a greater mystery which it should be a point of royal honor to unravel.

JUST GROUNDS FOR A DIVORCE.

In New York, a short time ago, Mr. X. on rising in the morning, performed his ablution as usual in the conjugal washbowl. His wife, from some cause, refused to use the same article of crockery, and ringing the bell, ordered the servant to bring another. The husband objected, and when the bowl was brought, dashed it upon the floor, breaking it into a thousand pieces. His irate spouse declared he was a brute. The husband coolly locked the chamber door, and informed her that he expected her to make use of the wash-bowl upon the stand in the room. She declared that she would do no such a thing "if she went dirty-faced for a week." A matrimonial storm ensued, which lasted till near noon. The obstinate woman refused to "give in."—Her "lord and master" filled the bowl with water, and, using sufficient force for the purpose—washed her face for her. After Mr. X. had left the house, the spouse sought her parients, and finally resolved to be divorced. Mr. X. does not like the scandal, but as his wife is determined on the matter, proceedings have been commenced, eminent counsel being engaged on both sides.

A ROMANTIC STORY IF TRUE.

A few days ago we made mention of the marriage of the drum-major sergeant of a Massachusetts regiment, Plunkett, to Miss Nelly Lorriner. The wedding took place in Worcester, though the parties belong in Leicester. We have now an additional fact of interest connected with the incident. When he left for the wars Plunkett was engaged to a Miss Lorriner. Upon his return, he considered his helpless condition, and offered a release to his betrothed, which was readily accepted. Her sister was so indignant at this that she said she would marry the brave man herself if he was agreeable, and agreeable he was, and they married. Thanks to the generosity of the brokers' boards of Boston and New York, and of the people he has met since his return, Plunkett, the hero is in independent circumstances pecuniarily.—Hartford Post.

PARTY.

Liberty of thought and expression is the invariable characteristic of a free and intelligent people. A consequence, however, is the great diversity of opinion that exist among them. Every man holds opinions of his own liking. It is a prerogative of his and one that he likes to make use of. But where all have the privilege of holding different views, it is not much to be wondered at if some of them are crude, far-fetched, or even erroneous. Few in even the best educated communities are capable of originating opinions; the majority must be content to adopt the sentiments of others, as they find them best suited to their judgments, or most in accordance with the views their own reflection or experience has suggested. When once adopted they, no doubt, become as dear as their own offspring, and strongly defended and advocated as if they were. But, unfortunately, there is such a thing as "jumping at conclusions," very prevalent among those who, instead of taking the trouble to think for themselves, are perfectly willing to iterate with all the profundity of assumed wisdom some trite saying or stale opinion that common sense and experience have alike proved to be absurd and without foundation. For instance, listen to the cant that prevails about "party" among those who ought to know better than they apparently do. Party by them is denounced in no measured terms. Indeed, no terms that WEBSTER or WORCESTER affords are too opprobrious or strong for it. It is held as the cause of all the evils, imaginary or real, that affect the body social or politic. Upon its back is laid the cause of every social grievance or political disaster. The country, it is declared, would be better off, would be happier, &c., if partyism was no more. Now all this is the veriest fudge. It is as absurd as it is untrue. Party in a country far from being an evil is a great benefit. The trouble is, people are apt to confound party with faction. Now, there is a vast difference between the two.—"Party," says BURKE, "is a body of men united for promoting by their joint endeavors the national interest upon some particular principle upon which they are all agreed." BOLINGBROKE, on the other hand, says that "the characteristic of faction is that the national interests would be sometimes sacrificed and always made subordinate to personal interests." It will be observed that the objects of the two are totally at variance with each other. The conduct of the Opposition last Session of Parliament gave a very good idea of what may be called faction.

Party is a most important element in a nation's composition. It exercises a wonderful influence upon its people. To prove this we need not turn to the histories of Rome and Greece; the histories of Britain and of our Province are full of proof and illustration. What has not party been able to effect? It has dominated over the ostensible authorities of the state; supported the king and aristocracy against the people; dethroned kings and humbled the highborn, overthrown parliament and rulers, changed constitutions and dynasties, and established the rights and privileges of the people upon a firm and lasting foundation. Some of the proudest boons which we now as Britons and Canadians enjoy, never would have been ours had it not been for the all-powerful agency of party. The Habeas Corpus Act wrung reluctantly from the STUART; the Settlement and Succession Acts; the repeal of the Corn Laws; the Catholic Emancipation Act; the great Reform Bill, &c., owe their existence to the untiring efforts and dogged perseverance of party. Indeed Britain would not be the free, powerful and prosperous nation that she is to-day had it not been the influences that party originated and set to work. So in Canada, we owe the great difference that exists between our own times and those in which the old Family Compact (of which the Corruptionists, on the whole, are very worthy successors) ruled and lorded it over to their hearts content over this goodly land, to the influence of the Reform party. At first this party was insignificant in influence and point of numbers, but it increased in strength until it was able to oust the Family Compact oligue and obtain for itself and its fellow colonists responsible government, which, with all its defects, has conferred upon Canada benefits and privileges that make its inhabitants among the most favored people upon earth. We might dilate but time and space forbid. We think, however, that enough has been said to show absurdity of denouncing party, as is sometimes done. In fact, we would soon find that if there was no party, there would be no freedom. A government without party is absolutism, and rulers without opposition may be despots. It is true that parties contend, but from the strife are generally evolved some great principles, which though ignored for the time, a few years may after may see practically recognised. Without party there could be no public opinion. By its agency argument and discussion are promoted—and these truth discovered, public opinion expressed, and a free people trained to self-government. It is likewise essential to representative institutions. In a word, we contend as we are, with our hopes and fears, we could not prosper or exist with out party. How important, then, each individual should consider the matter in this light, and follow out the right thought that was suggested sometimes by a whisper, and thinking for himself. If he does he will find the party has a deeper significance in itself and stronger claims upon him than before suspicioned. He will see that the individuals who frequently mention, from personal, lucky issues, or the like, party unworthy, should shape about them nothing as regards to the political tendencies and questions that agitate the country, is a contemptible heart, and ought his forbearance what he is afraid to them. Coming to the point: every man among us should support one or other of the great parties that obtain among us. There are only two parties: the Reform and Corruptionist. If he wishes to plunge his country over head and ears in debt, to press down its energies by feeding and fattening hosts of human leeches, &c., he should support the latter; but if he is in favor of retrenchment, and honest and strenuous efforts to rescue the country from its present position, and to develope its resources and enlarge its usefulness, he should feel it his duty to lend a helping hand to those now in power. The past is before him to judge for himself. The party last in power, after a long and patient trial, was weighed in the balances and found wanting. The party now in power has not had this same charge. Much of the blame, it must be confessed, must be laid upon its members. The Government would have been strong enough to defy all opposition if its professed supporters had only done their duty. The neglect in one or two counties to return the right man, when the right man might just as easily as not have been returned, has done all the damage. The skirts of Peterborough Reformers are not free from guilt. They cannot help the past, but they can (if they will) profit by it to improve the future. If there were another election next week in what better condition would they be for it than they were for the last? That is the question. Ponder it.

MONAGHAN GRAVEL ROAD.

We are glad to learn that the Peterborough and Monaghan Gravel Road, under the new directors, is likely to recover somewhat from the ruin into which it was rapidly drifting. The tolls have been reduced to something like reasonable rates, and efforts are being made to remove the hostile feeling that exists against the Company. At present the road has but a very small share of the travel which rightfully belongs to it; but it is probable that under a liberal policy much of the travel may yet be restored. But leaving aside the interests of the stockholders, the high charges on this road had an injurious effect on the town. Many farmers who would have made Peterborough their market, were induced to sell their produce in Millbrook, where they obtained as high a price for their grain, with the use of good gravel roads through Cavan free of Market rates and Toll rates. Latterly the town has not suffered so much in this respect, owing to the opposition road opened in the Tenth Concession of Monaghan by the inhabitants of North Monaghan and the North-western part of Cavan, which is now principally travelled, and by which they have again free access to Peterborough. Still we think that the inhabitants of these townships and others when they find that the Company is willing to deal with them in a liberal manner and upon business principles, asking barely an equivalent for the use of the road, that a better feeling will be created—and that instead of opposing the road they will endeavor to encourage the directors in their efforts to make it popular and prosperous.

The Western toll gate is to be removed at once to the West of the Quarter Line, running through Dr. BELL'S property.

EUROPEAN NEWS.

The Scotia, from Liverpool January 2, arrived here yesterday noon, bringing eight days later news. The Richmond correspondent of the Times combats the reports of famine in the South, and contends that the Confederates will be able to maintain the struggle for years. La France publishes the letter of Jefferson Davis, addressed to the Pope. The pontifical reply, dated the 3d December, addresses Mr. Davis as illustrious President, and hopes for friendship between the two. The usual reception of the diplomatic corps was held at the Tuileries on New Year's day. The Emperors remarks were of a pacific character, and in addressing Mr. Dayton he expressed a hope that the year 1864 would be one of peace and reconciliation for the United States. The London Times says the year opens with threatenings and gloom on all sides, and there is not a quarter of the world free from war or imminent danger of war. The London Times publishes a letter from the city of Mexico, showing that the ecclesiastical party are treating the French ungratefully. The Duke of Augustenburg had arrived at Kiel, and been declared Duke of Schleswig-Holstein. Danish troops evacuated Rendsburg on the 31st December, and five thousand Saxons immediately entered the town and were enthusiastically received by the inhabitants. The London Morning Herald says that England has protested against the occupation of Schelswig. The Polish insurgents were showing renewed activity. The national government had issued a decree dividing all the forces into four commands.

AMERICAN NEWS.

Some activity prevails in East Tennessee. On Sunday last a severe cavalry fight occurred near Strawberry plains, the confederates being repulsed with serious loss. Gen. Longstreet has been heavily reinforced from the armies of General Lee and Johnston. His headquarters are now at Red Bridge, and the reinforcements from Johnston are south of the Holsten river. Longstreet occupies a fine position and his army has been largely increased by conscripts. General Johnston occupies a bold front at Tunnel Hill and Dalton. General Grant is making a circuit of the entire department. The weather is still intensely cold but there is little sickness. The Tribune's army of the despatch states that 200 Confederate cavalry attacked the Federal picket of the 1st Rhode Island Cavalry at Three Mile Station on Thursday evening. After a fight of half an hour, the Confederates retreated. There are rumours afloat of the re-organization and consolidation of the army into three separate corps. Also, it is rumored, that an independent command of 50,000 men is to be given to one of the best fighting Generals, who will be authorized to take Richmond in his own way.

We direct attention to Mr. EVERIST'S new advertisement. It shows what the papers think. Gus, however, has only to say his "glasses" to know that Evarist is a No. 1 in his profession. Give him a call.

MONAGHAN COUNCIL.

MONAGHAN, Jan. 18th, 1864.

The members of the new Council met at 12 o'clock, when they took the oath of office, were severally qualified, and took their seats as members of the Council.

The Clerk then read the oath and called upon them to elect their Reeve.

Moved by Mr. Lockie, seconded by Mr. Leary that JOHN W. GILMOUR, Esq., be Reeve for the current year.—Carried.

The Reeve then called the Council to order for the discharge of public business.

His notes of last meeting read and sustained in his official capacity. The Reeve appointed Robt. Laing, Jr., Esq., as Auditor, and the Council, on the motion of Mr. Lockie seconded by Mr. Collins, appointed E. Chamberlain, Esq.

Moved by Mr. Collins seconded by Mr. Leary —That the Clerk be directed to give notice of Non-resident owners of property in this Township through the columns of the Review and Examiner, requesting them to have accurate descriptions of their lands forwarded to his office on or before the 15th Feb., next.—Carried.

Messrs. Collins and Campbell were appointed a committee to draft a by-law to lay before the next meeting of Council, in which should be consolidated all matters connected with the granting of Tavern Licenses for the present year, as well as the duties of the Inspector.

A By-law to enable the Trustees of No. 1 School Section to borrow the sum of $400, for the erection of a School-house in the said Section, was read a third time.

A communication from Mr. John Brown, of Emily, claiming $3 for attending as witness in Peterborough a Township matter, was ordered to lie over for the present.

Orders were given on the Treasurer for the sum of $1 to each of the Returning Officers for the late Township election.

On the motion of Mr. Collins seconded by Mr. Leary, the Council adjourned till the first Monday in February at 10 o'clock, then to meet for the purpose of appointing Township Officers for the current year.—Com.

OTONABEE COUNCIL.

MONDAY, January 18th, 1864.

The members elect for the Township of Otonabee met at the Council Chamber, Keene, at 12 o'clock noon.

The Council was called to order by the Clerk, and the necessary declarations on such occasions were made and subscribed to.

It was then moved by Mr. Blizard and seconded by Mr. Carlow, that W. E. Ingram be re-elected Reeve, which was carried unanimously.

Mr. Blizard was then elected Deputy Reeve.

Mr. Ingram after taking the declaration of office as Reeve, then took the chair, and returned thanks to the Council for the position they had placed him in, by a few well timed remarks.

The Council then proceeded to business after the minutes of the previous meeting were read, by appointing Thomas Chambers and R. C. Humphries, Esqs., as Auditors, and reappointing Mr. Robert Weir as Assessor for the current year.

After the transaction of some other business, the Council adjourned to the third Monday in February.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The newly elected Councillors for the present year met on Monday last, and made the necessary declarations of qualification of office.

Messrs Wm. Eastland and Charles Cameron were appointed Auditors for the present year.

A special committe was appointed to strike the standing committees for the present year.

William Cumming, made application for the office of Chief Constable.

The Mayor was authorised to correspond with the proper persons in Toronto having a certain bell for sale.

The Council then adjourned till next Monday night at 7 p.m.

Peterboro winning by 13 shots.

JAPAN.

News up to 1st Dec. last has been received. Kanagawa was still guarded by men from the fleets, the French fortifying the heights and daily expecting the arrival of two regiments of infantry from Hong Kong. It was the general belief that a peaceful solution would be found for all the troubles between foreign Governments and the Tycoon, although civil war between the latter and the Daimios was already progressing. The Tycoon's Ministers had waited on the American Minister, offering to pay the indemnity demanded for the attack on the steamer Pembroke in June last, during the passage through the Island Sea. The British Parliament had orderhd an expedition under Sir John Mitabell to rendezvous at Hong Kong, preparatory to sailing for Japan. Five European regiments had been ordered from India for that purpose. No further action of any importance had taken place between the rebels and Government forces.

MEXICO.

The French troops entered Morelia on the 30th of November without opposition. Gen. Berthier had occupied Accamboro. Gen. Bazaine was at Celieya, where Gen. Cotenofort was assassinated. Gen. Mejia occupied San Miguel. Juarez and his Ministers are said to have left for Durango. Gen Bazaine had concentrated 12,000 French troops at Celieya, and Gen. Doui was at Salamanca, sixteen leagues from Guanajuato. It is stated that the Governments of Holland and of Spain have recognized the new Mexican Government. Gen. Negrette has succeeded Gen. Comonfort as Minister of War of Juarez.

OBITUARY.

Died, of cold, cracked head and grief, for his dear departed Council friends, on the evening of Saturday last, the Town Bell.

It has "called its last chime."

LITTLE LAKE CEMETERY.

At a meeting of the Stockholders of the Little Lake Cemetery, held in the Town Hall, Peterboro', on the following persons were nominated as Trustees for the ensuing year: Sheriff [illegible], Rev. Mr. [illegible], Mr. Gilmour, Wm. Landy, Ed. Healy and the Mayor [illegible].

The following is the Secretary's Report:

To the Directors and Stockholders of the Little Lake Cemetery Company.

GENTLEMEN.—Your Secretary begs leave to report that he has sold during the past Twenty-two Lots, amounting to.....$215 00
Eight Single Graves,..... 8 00
And collected, Accounts,..... 56 00
$279 00

There are accounts due to the Company from various parties, which can be collected, to the amount of $102.00; also, bad and doubtful debts, amounting to $130.00. There has been fifty-three deaths during the year and interred in the Little Lake Cemetery,—thirty-five males and eighteen females.—Fourteen have died under the age of 12 years, five between the age of 12 and 20; seven between 20 and 30, five between 30 and 40, eleven between 40 and 50, nine between 60 and 80, and two over that age. The residence of those who have been buried are as follows:—Town of Peterborough, 29; Ashburnham, 5; and 19 from the surrounding country.

There has also been 24 bodies removed from the old burying ground and interred in the Little Lake Cemetery.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

A. STEWART,
Secretary.

Peterboro', January, 1864.

The Treasurer also presented his report, which shows a balance still due on the new Lodge and other improvements in the Cemetery of $181 18.

DEATH OF MR. THACKERY.

The steamer brought the news of the death of the celebrated novelist, THACKERY. He was found dead in his bed. He was taken ill only the day before, but nothing serious was apprehended. He was in his 53rd year. As a novelist and a lecturer he occupied the foremost rank. In depicting the traits and peculiar humours of different characters he was unrivalled. He has left a daughter who seems to inherit the father's genius, and who has recently distinguished herself in a novel called "Elizabeth." Sic mundi gloria transit.

THE NEW STEAMSHIP COMPANY.

The Montreal Herald of Friday makes the following announcement:—

"We are glad to announce that the organization of the North American Steamship Company has been completed, and at a meeting of the Provisional Board, held yesterday, the Honorable John Young has been named the Managing Director of the Company."

FIRE.

On the evening of Saturday last a fire broke out in the paint shop of Fitzgerald & Bro. The shop was destroyed, and, we regret to learn, a very fine carriage worth some $300.

The old Town Council is dead; peace to its manes. It met seldom, and if it had met seldomer perhaps there would have been no harm done. It, literally, committed suicide, as only four of the old members have been returned. The others, it seems, a people grateful for past services, have allowed to stay at home. It is to be hoped that the new Council will be more popular. The Fire Engine business must be attended to; it killed the old Council. Their fall should be pregnant with instructive lessons to the present one. We hope it will, and we think it will. The people don't grudge money when it is well spent; but they want to know how it is spent. They are not very wrong in this. The new Council have several very important reforms to inaugurate, and some very important duties before them to discharge. If the people would only attend the meetings a little more frequently and watch the proceeding for themselves, the Council, no doubt, would take a greater interest in their duties, and things would progress more smoothly. It is only natural to expect this to be the case.

THE DISTRESS IN THE COTTON DISTRICTS. During the period of greatest distress, "the maximum week in December, 1862," Manchester, which in a year of prosperity has about 6,000 paupers, returned the large number of 41,692, as relieved by the whole charity, Ashton-under-Lyne relieved 35,000 and Preston and Blackburn 24,000 each. This year, in consequence of the increased importation of cotton from India, Manchester relieves weekly but 17,000 paupers, Ashton-under-Lyne 15,000, Preston 14,000, and Blackburn 6,4000. And in twelve months down to the first week in December, the pauperism in all the districts reported has diminished more than one-half, there remaining at the date of the last report 186,750 out of a population of 2,980,000. The proportion is still sufficiently serious, but it no longer threatens that unmanageable mass of suffering and evil which made all England anxious a year ago.

OUR SONS NEED GOOD READING.—"I wish that my son had more of a taste for useful reading and study." Such is the father's frequent thought and observation. To interest their children in things that are beneficial, thus to save them from bad company and pernicious habits, is the constant aim of every true parent. One excellent means to this end consists in making the Scientific American a regular visitor at your dwelling. Let it be in sight on your book-case or table, and notice how quickly it attracts the young. Its pages are full of the most interesting, varied and useful information, the study of which insensibly excites the mind with a desire for more; and this desire, once fairly kindled, endures through life, expanding and ennobling the intellect. January 1, 1864, commences a new volume of the Scientific American: subscribe for your son, if not for yourself.

THE NEW OUTBREAK IN INDIA.—The new insurrection that has broken out in India, among the warlike tribes of the mountains of the northwestern Provinces, has assumed alarming proportions. The insurgents have had several engagements with the British troops, and the English accounts state that our troops have suffered severe losses. Sharp fights took place on the 30th October, 9th, 11th, 13th and 19th of November, and another is reported by telegram from Lahore, under date the 24th November. The British had in these engagements 13 officers killed and 12 wounded, and in killed and wounded nearly 900 men. The Bombay Gazette says that we are now no longer engaged with a few fanatics in an insignificant raid, but in a war with numerous tribes, strong, numerical strength, in an almost inaccessible country, it is difficult to calculate.

THE MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATURE.—You are often annoyed by coughing of others, or yourself, in the House, and we therefore advise you to try Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers—cure a cough in five minutes, a sore throat in an hour, and a cold in a single day. Sold by all Druggists.

WHAT IS BEST TO BE DONE.—If you are suffering from rheumatism, lame back, sprains, strains or bruises, sick head ache, tooth ache, cholic, bowel complaints, burns, frost bites, &c.: decidedly the best thing to get is a bottle of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer. The cost is trifling, and its effects certain. It is a never failing remedy, and and no family should be without it. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

....By the Statutes of Missouri the State Canvassers are required, within twenty days after a State election, to count and make returns of the votes given. It is now almost two months since an election was held for Judges of the Supreme Court, and yet no certificates of election have been issued. It is conjectured that the reason is because the Canvassers mean to reject the soldiers' votes and are apprehensive that the State Senate —now in session—may reverse their action. By adding till the Legislature shall have adjourned, there will be no redress for a fraudulent return.

ACCIDENT.—Quite a serious accident occurred on the Lake Huron Railroad last week. The baggage car and passenger coach were thrown from the track, about seven miles from Port Erie, by the breaking of a pin. The passenger car was badly smashed, and eight or nine persons injured—two of them quite seriously. The passengers were pleased that no lives are said to be lost. One woman, who was severely hurt, was immediately sent to the General Hospital in that city. It is thought that some of her ribs are broken.

As a specimen of the administration of justice to petty offenders in New York the Commercial Advertiser relates the following:

"But a few days since in an up-town court, a Police Justice used the following language to a keeper of a dance house who was before him: 'Without meaning any disrespect to Mr. McM——, I would say that, as he is well aware, houses like the one he keeps are a source of trouble.'"

In Montreal, a couple of ardent sympathisers with each of the contending parties [illegible] $5,000 that Grant would never take Atlanta; $2,500 that Charleston would not fall; $5,000 that Richmond would never be taken; $10,000 that the South would never be conquered.

A Protestant church has been opened in Mexico, a French clergyman officiating. According to report there was great opposition on the part of the regency, on its legal, one of its members, but General Bazaine insisted, and carried his point.

THE PAPER DUTY.—A proposition to repeal the duty on paper is before the Ways and Means Committee of the U. S. Legislature. It has more friends than a similar measure had last session.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—I am much pleased with your paper, and with the way in which you deal with affairs of the town and country. In politics, of course, you are just the thing; and I only hope you may succeed in pursuading the Reform party here to adopt your suggestions and follow your example. In former times the people did not want to be reminded of their duty, but they set about it with a will and they accomplished their work—and they did this without fear, favor or hope of reward. But the people now-a-days do not appear to be made of the same good stuff as were their predecessors; and the consequence is that the Reform party in this County is in a kind of sleepy, non-existing state which renders it almost useless for all purposes of the party. My advice to you, however, is to persevere until you accomplish your object, and when you get the people properly to understand that they have a duty to discharge to their country, you will probably succeed in getting an organization such as you recommend. Until this is done the Reformers of this County will accomplish but little; but with proper organization they could do as they liked. So much for politics. Now for something else.

Mr. Editor, I think you will agree with me that the Town of Peterborough is behind no other town in Canada in the enterprise of its inhabitants, and in its general business and prosperity. And it is a source of pride for us to know this, and to know, also, that it is a growth and prosperity which is real and which is likely to increase. And it is our duty to add to this in every way in our power. In one respect, however, we are sadly deficient, and that is in the want of a good Town Hall. All towns in Canada except ours, and almost every village of any pretensions has its public building (including a Town Hall); and it is not at all to our credit that we should, in this respect, be so far behind our neighbors. We have the land upon which to place it, and provision has been made for its erection; and it is needless to say that its erection would not only be a source of profit and credit to the town, but it would directly be the means of a large addition to our revenue by the consequent leasing of the remainder of the Market Block fronting on George Street, and by the taxes derived from the rental of the new stores which would then be erected thereon. It is time, Mr. Editor, that you turned your attention to this subject, and I hope you will now do so; and although there are some persons so selfish and narrow minded as to wish to retard the growth and prosperity of the town because they cannot have every thing done round their corners, still I believe the people; generally, do not share in this feeling, but desire that what is for the general good should be done. I think that this year we have got a Council that will work, and not waste all its time in talking; and I am sure that it will not be influenced by any selfish, narrow minded feeling or prejudice, but that it will do whatever is for the good of the town at large. If the erection of the new Town Hall were gone into this year, the money spent would be spent in the town and mechanics and laboring men and others would have the good of it. And as it would undoubtedly lead to the building of stores in the remainder of the Market Block fronting on George Street, they would also give employment to the people, and a large amount would thus be paid out which otherwise would not be expended.

I trust, Mr. Editor, that you will give this matter your favorable consideration.

A.

Peterborough, Jan. 16th, 1864.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

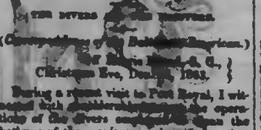
SIR,—The Town of Peterborough deservedly stands high as a thriving and prosperous place in the estimation of the business public and of travellers; and it also merits commendation for the public spirit of its inhabitants. I can speak for myself, and say that among all the towns which I have lately visited I have nowhere been so much gratified as with the Town of Peterborough. But you must excuse me for saying that in one very important particular you are far behind your neighbors, and that is in the want of a good public building and Hall suitable to the growing wants and importance of your rapidly rising town. And I have heard the same remark made by others. In this day and generation people are considered behind the age who do not provide such a useful and indispensable building. You cannot tell how the absence of such a building is received and commented on by strangers visiting your town, and what an unfavorable effect it has. I understand that provision has been made for its erection, and if I were a resident here I certainly would strive hard to have this want supplied. I should think that the pride which your people ought to feel in the appearance of their fine town would stimulate them to lose no more time in having this eye-sore removed. It appears to me that with proper management your town must, in the course of a few years become one of the foremost towns in the Province. And if it do not the fault will be your own.

VISITOR.

Peterborough, Jan. 19, 1864.

UNION OF THE FREE AND UNITED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCHES.—The joint committee of the Free and United Presbyterian Churches on union met yesterday. A large number of members were present; and, after full discussion, it was ascertained that a very gratifying harmony of opinion existed in regard to the province of the civil magistrate on the subject of religion generally, and also on his duty in regard to such matters as the law of marriage, the Sabbath, and the appointment of days of humiliation and thanksgiving. The only other subject under this head which remains to be considered is the national endowment of the Church, which will be taken up at next meeting.—Witness.

LIFE UNDER WATER.



THE DIVERS AT WORK UNDERWATER.

(Correspondence of the Buffalo Commercial.)

CHRISTMAS EVE, December, 1863.

During a recent visit to Fort Royal, I witnessed with considerable interest the operations of the divers employed upon the bottoms of the monitors, and performing other operations under the water. Messrs. Joseph H. Smith and James B. Phelps have a contract with the Government for the performance of this work, and have been of great use here. Their principal diver—appropriately named Waters—is so used to this work that he has become almost amphibious—remaining for five or six hours at a time under water.

Water has his own ideas of a joke, and when he has a serious audience will move his scraper about as he "bobs around" with the air of a veritable river god. One of his best jokes—the better for being a veritable fact—occurred last summer. Whilst he was employed scraping the hull of one of the monitors, a negro from one of the up-river plantations came alongside with a boat load of water-melons. Whilst busy selling his melons the diver came up and rested on the side of the boat. The negro thus started at the extraordinary appearance thus suddenly coming out of the water with alarmed wonder, but when the diver seized one of the best melons in the boat and disappeared under the water, the gurgling of the air from the helmet mixing with his muffled laughter the fright of the negro reached a climax. Hastily seizing his oars, without waiting to be paid for his melons, he put off at his best speed, and has not been seen in the vicinity of Station Creek since. He cannot be tempted beyond the bound of his plantation, and believes that the Yankees have brought river devils to aid them in making water.

The diver, when clothed in his armour, is is weighed with one hundred and eighty five pounds. Besides this armour he has two leaden pads, fitted to his breast and back. The soals of his feet are of lead, an inch and a half thick. All this weight is needed to overcome the buoyancy given by the mass of air forced into the armour and dress, the latter of india rubber, worn by the diver. When below the surface he can instantly bring himself up by closing momentarily the aperture in the helmet for the escape of the air. His buoyancy is immediately increased and he pops up like a cork and floats at will upon the surface.

The work of scraping the bottoms of the monitors is very arduous. The diver sits upon a spar, lashed athwart the bottom of the vessel, so arranged as to be moved as the work progresses, and with a scraper fixed to a long handle works on both sides of himself as far as he can reach. The mass of oysters that become attached to the iron hulls of one of the monitors even during one summer here, is immense. By actual measurement it was estimated that two hundred and fifty bushels of oysters, shells and seagrass were taken from the bottom of the Montauk alone. The captains of the monitors have sometimes indulged in the novelty of a mess of oysters raised on the hulls of their own vessels.

Besides cleaning the monitors the divers perform other important services. They have ransacked the interior of the Keokuk, attached buoys to lost anchors, and made under water examinations of the rebel obstructions. Waters recently examined the sunken Weehawken and met an unusual danger for even his perilous calling. The sea was so violent that he was twice thrown from the deck of the monitor. Finally getting hold of the iron ladder he climbed to the top of the turret, when a heavy sea cast him inside the turret between the guns. Fearing that his air hose would become entangled, he made his way out with all possible speed, and was forced to give up his investigations until calmer weather offered a more favorable opportunity.

NEW SOUTH WALES.—The whole of the interior is many districts is still very unsatisfactory. Since our last monthly summary several crimes of a very atrocious character have been perpetrated in the Southern and Western districts. One of the worst of these cases was the murder of Mr. Barnes, a storekeeper in the surrangong district. This gentleman (formerly in business in Broadstreet, Cheapside, London), was attacked on the highroad by bushrangers, and on endeavoring to escape by flight was chased by the scoundrels and fired at, until his body was almost riddled with shot. He fell from his horse, and when found shortly afterwards was quite dead. His murderers got clear off, and although rumors of their arrest have since reached Sydney, nothing definite had been ascertained. Another atrocious crime recently perpetrated is the attempted murder of Mr. Baylis, a magistrate. This gentleman was shot while out on an expedition after bushrangers. He had gone out on hearing footsteps outside a hut where he was watching, and was shot almost immediately afterwards, without having seen his intended murderer. His wound did not prove mortal, and he is now said to be in a fair way of recovery. Another victim was a shepherd; and a fourth, a youth named Cummins, who, having been taken by the police after a desperate resistance, was shot, it is supposed, by his own brother, who, it is believed, intended the bullet for his captors. The brother has since been taken and committed for trial. The notorious bushranger Lowry was traced by the police to a small public house in the Goulburn district, kept by a man named Vardy. In a conflict which ensued, Lowry was shot in the throat, and the next day died of his wound. He proved to be one of the robbers of the Mudgee mail at the time the £6,000 in bank notes were taken. His companion in that robbery, named Foley, has since been tried at Bathurst, and sentenced to fifteen years hard labor.—Sydney Times.

FRANCE AND THE UNITED STATES.—The Emperor of France is a long-headed man; he does not send ten thousand men by driblets—anxious only keeping alive the spark of Mexican invasion—for nothing. He has a keen sight and a determined purpose ahead. He plans, during the difficulties of this nation, a serious effort to arrest the march of self government, and the astute head on a throne is our determined enemy. Now, I would not answer France solely with bugle-note and rifle-shot on the banks of the Rio del Norte. Oh, no! This continent is consecrated by the ages to the full and free experiment of self government. This is our claim—our just claim. Europe is trying the experiment of thrones. Let her. She has a right to try it without our interference. But if France plants the germ of aristocracy and thrones in the soil of the American continent, my answer to her is, this reconstructed Union, holding out its right hand, with fifty millions of dollars for Garibaldi, saying, take possession of Rome: and one hundred millions for the republicans of Paris, saying, make Napoleon sit easy; and one hundred millions for Germany, saying, make kings tremble. I would meet Napoleon with his own weapons—retaliation as well as resistance. If Europe leaves America to republicanism, well. If she interferes, we interfere—(applause)—and the right hand of our resistance is clasped in brotherhood with the radicals of Europe to upset every throne on the continent. (Applause.) This is my foreign policy, and one far more within our control than that of Europe. On the sea we are equal. She must send men here to carry out her plans on land; but all her navies could not bring enough to endanger us. While in a box one foot square, we can send all European radicals need—money.—Wendell Phillips' Last Speech.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN PRESTON.—We learn by telegraph from Galt that yesterday morning the woollen factory in Preston, owned by Messrs. Hespeler & Elliott, was totally destroyed by fire, together with all the valuable machinery it contained. The outhouses, in which a quantity of wool and manufactured cloth was stored, were fortunately saved. The entire loss, it is supposed, will amount to $30,000, and it is only partially covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is not known.—Leader, Jan. 19th.

GREAT SALE!

OF

REAL ESTATE.

THE undersigned has been instructed to sell by Public Auction, on Wednesday the 14th day of April, 1864, the whole of that desirable and very valuable property known as the

BEAVER MEAD FARM,

Containing in all about 480 acres.

That portion of property set off for the Farm contains 127 acres, on which stands the residence of the late Judge Hall, a large and commodious Cottage, an extensive and well-built stone Barn and Stables, fitted up in the best manner, together with an excellent young Orchard just beginning to bear, and a good Garden. The Meadow covers an area of about 60 acres, and produces an abundant crop of very fine hay. The Farm is in good order, productive and within one mile of the Town of Peterborough.

The remainder of the property is now being surveyed into lots varying in size from one to ten acres, and will be sold either at private sale or Public Auction, in lots to suit purchasers.

TERMS.—One-eighth down, the remainder in seven equal annual payments, with interest at seven per cent. payable half-yearly

PROSPECTUS OF THE

Canada Farmer

A NEW

OF

Agriculture, Horticulture

AND

RURAL AFFAIRS.

THE Subscriber has determined to make the experiment whether a first-class Agricultural Journal can be sustained in Canada. He proposes to issue early in January, 1864, the first number of The Canada Farmer, and to continue the publication on the 1st and 15th days of each month. Each number will contain sixteen pages quarto of closely printed matter. It will be printed on fine paper, from an entirely new font of type. The services of an able agricultural writer as Editor-in-Chief have been secured, and he will be assisted by an efficient staff of writers, reporters and correspondents. First-class artists and engravers have also been retained to prepare illustrations for the paper. No exertion or expenditure will be spared to render the new Journal a worthy representative and advocate of the Agricultural interests of Canada.

In the conduct of The Canada Farmer, the following ends will be zealously labored for:—

1.—To arouse public attention, by frank and temperate discussion, to all questions scientific, commercial, legislative or otherwise, specially affecting the farming interest.

2.—To stimulate the Agriculturists of our country to adopt an improved system of husbandry, by blending the lessons of modern science with the practical experience of the Canadian Farmer.

3.—To bring under the attention of our Farmers all improvements at home or abroad, worthy of adoption, affecting the management of Field Crops—the Barn-yard—the Stable—the Dairy—the Orchard—the Poultry Yard—the Apiary—the Kitchen Garden—and the Flower Garden; and to excite an interest in the progress of Rural Architecture and Landscape Gardening, and in all that concerns the Domestic Economy of the Farmhouse.

4.—To mark and report all improvements in Agricultural Machinery—foster new inventions—and promote the adoption of all labour-saving machines in the work of the farm and garden.

5.—To keep prominently under attention all that specially concerns the Dairy-farmer and the Grazier; the best breeds of cattle—the best systems of feeding—the most approved processes of cheese and butter making—the best mode of packing—and the best markets to sell in.

6.—To keep prominently in view whatever is specially interesting to the Sheep-raiser and Wool-grower—the Breeds best adapted to our climate—the best systems of winter and summer management—and the varying prospects of the wool market.

7.—To afford the Farmers of Canada an ever-open medium for addressing their brother Agriculturists throughout the Province, suggesting matters of common interest and advantage, and eliciting information or advice on practical questions of difficulty or doubt.

8.—To report concisely the Proceedings at Agricultural Shows, Fairs and Sales through out the Province—note the condition and progress of the Herds and Flocks of prominent Stock-breeders; record the importation of Thorough-bred stock from abroad, and publish Engravings of First Class Prize Animals.

9.—To watch and report carefully and promptly the actual state and probable prospects of the Produce Markets at home and abroad; and specially promote all movements designed to secure the best prices in the best markets for Canadian Farm Produce.

10.—To afford the Farmers of Canada a common medium where all who have for sale Live Stock, or Seed Grain, or Land, or who may wish to buy such, can make his desires known directly to the whole farming population of Canada.

☞ The Canada Farmer will be published for ONE DOLLAR per annum, POSTAGE FREE payable strictly in advance.

CLUBS

Will be furnished at the following rates:—

TWELVE COPIES for.....TEN DOLLARS.
TWENTY COPIES for.....FIFTEEN DOLLARS.
FIFTY COPIES for.....THIRTY-FIVE DOLS.
ONE HUNDRED for.....SIXTY DOLLARS.

Communications on Agricultural subjects are invited, addressed to "The Editor of the Canada Farmer," and all orders for the paper will be sent to

GEORGE BROWN,
Proprietor and Publisher.

☞ As FIFTY THOUSAND COPIES of the first number will be printed and circulated, an unequalled opportunity for Advertisers will be presented. The charge will be twenty cents per line.

LAYING DOWN TO DIE.

The body of a man was found near the Bute Mines, British Columbia, wrapped in a blanket, and the head pillowed on a log. Near at hand lay a tin cup, on which was scratched—"Donald Manson; lost in the woods; is from Inverness, Scotland; born June, 1800." Finding death inevitable, the deserted, before laying down to die, had scrawled this record, probably with a pin. An English lady has written the following lines on the strange and melancholy incident.

No friendly hand was near to close
His eyelids for that last repose;
Upon his brow the death-damp lay,
But no one wip'd it thence away.
Remov'd from every human eye,
The wanderer laid him down to die,
The track was lost, and never more
Would he the fore-t depths explore;
Too late had strangers pass'd the spot,
And learned the weary traveller's lot.
How hard a couch his limbs had prass'd,
Ere the worn spirit sank to rest!
With tearful eyes and soften'd tone,
They spoke of him who died alone!
But was no record left for those,
Who knew him once as friends or foes?
No proof of where his thought did fly,
Before he heav'd his latest sigh?
Yes; one he clos'd his life of care;
He thought of home and lov'd ones there;
And, in his dying hour would trace
The story of his name and race.
Strange—a rude cup the record bore—
Monroe's life pilgrimage is o'er!
Alas! what tempted him to roam
From his own mountain land and home?
Perchance a widow'd mother's prayer
Still rose for him who slumber'd there;
Or wife still yearning for his caress,
Whose grave is in the wilderness.
But vain the attempt to penetrate
The history of the wanderer's fate;
Nor deem because he died alone,
He suffering reap'd for errors sown.
Bright angels may have linger'd near,
His awful solitude to cheer;
Perhaps like Jacob he descried
The gate of Heaven before he died.
The dust which sleeps 'neath foreign skies
May vet a glorious body rise;
And kindred spirits, round the throne,
The wanderer greet who died alone.

THE WAR IN NEW ZEALAND.

The London Gazette of the 22nd ult. contains copies of a despatch from New Zealand, dated the 5th of October last, from Lieut-General Cameron. He states that the force under his command continued to occupy the same position as at the date of the last despatch. The boats fitting to carry guns were ready to enter the Waikato river, and he only awaited the arrival of the iron steamers from Sydney, previously referred to, before commencing active operations. Several engagements had taken place, in which, with one exception, very serious loss had been inflicted on the enemy. It appears that, with the view of relieving the troops as much as possible during the inclement weather, General Cameron made arrangements that supplies should be brought round from Auckland in a vessel which was to anchor inside the Waikato Heads, whence her cargo was to be conveyed up the river to the Queen Redoubt in canoes manned by friendly natives. The natives being on good terms both with the English and the enemy it was considered the stores would be safe in their charge. Mr. Armitage resident magistrate of the district, who had resided a great many years among the natives, was appointed by the government to superintend this service. As the natives employed it is belonging to two different tribes, each of which would not work beyond a certain part of the river, it became necessary to establish a small intermediate depot for the temporary reception of stores, and for this purpose Cameron Town was favorably situate, particularly as Mr. Armitage himself lived there and a small number of friendly natives inhabited a pah on the spot. This pah was suddenly attacked by a large body of the enemy, the friendly natives were driven out, Mr. Armitage was killed, and the stores were destroyed. On the 7th September, Captain Swift, commanding the redoubt at Tuakon, received intelligence of what had happened. He started at one o'clock the same day with 50 men to scour the bush. He and his men had not long entered the bush when they observed tracks of natives in large numbers. A little further on they heard their enemies in loud debate. Captain Swift ordered his men to lie down in the bush, and not to fire until he gave the word of command. Finding, however, that the enemy were not advancing, Color-Sergeant McKenna crept up to within twelve yards of them. He listened to their conversation, and concluded from what he heard that they were under the influence of liquor. On learning this Captain Swift ordered his fix bayonets and charge. They then advanced to within six yards of the natives, who opened a terrible fire. It was returned in good style, but Captain Swift fell mortally wounded. Lieutenant Butler, the only other commissioned officer present, shot down a native on his right and another on his left as he sank on his knees wounded. Captain Swift handed his revolver to Sergeant M'Kenna, and ordered him to lead the men. A few men were left in charge of Captain Swift and Lieutenant Butler. The others, with one loud huzzard, "charged like demons, burning to avenge their officers." They found themselves in an open clearing of a few yards, with the natives under cover in their front and left, opening fire upon them, and afterwards, at 6 o'clock, that the enemy had cut off their retreat in the direction they had come. Sergeant M'Kenna ordered another charge, but it was met by a volley that killed three men.—Finding it hopeless to return, the sergeant determined to retreat by a hill covered with fern, and sending on the wounded, he threw out a line of skirmishers and ordered the front rank to fire and retire. In this order they proceeded down the hill steadily. The natives came out of the bush and poured down a shower of bullets upon them, but darkness was coming on, and, although the enemy were within 100 or 150 yards, not a man of the English party was hit. When night came on they lost their track, and halted in the bush, strict orders that not a word should be spoken or a pipe lighted. At a quarter to five in the morning they began to search for a track out of the bush, and at 8 they found one. They were met half way to the redoubt by Captain Murray with a party sent by General Cameron to their support. They reached the camp exhausted at 11 o'clock. Lance-Corporal Ryan [Privates W. Bulford, J. Talbot, J. Cole, and B. Thomas, who were left with the wounded officers, manifested great devotion. They remained with Captain Swift till he died at half-past seven in the evening. They then hid his body in the bush, took Lieut. Butler in their arms, and set out on their return, and they were fortunate enough to meet Captain Murry and his party. In this conflict Privates R. Bolringer, Michael Bryan, and S. Grace were killed; and Private Waittle, Powell, and McLean badly wounded.

An attack made on the 14th of September on the Pukekohe Stockade by the natives, Lieut. Butler were gallantly charged and driven into the bush by Captain Inman, 2nd battalion, and the forces under his command. Captain A. Saltmarsh, 70th Regt., and eight privates were wounded.

MONEY EASILY MADE,
By either Gentlemen or Ladies.

I AM in possession of a beautiful French Art, which has been introduced in this Country only to a limited extent, and that in New York City. It is something which every person stands in great need of, consequently will be extensively patronized. Persons can make money with it at home or abroad. Thousands in France have made small fortunes at it, and are still doing so. I would state what it is, but persons purchasing the knowledge of it do not desire it made public. One Dollar sent to the undersigned will ensure the immediate return of a circular giving full information in the Art, and the requisite instructions to pursue it. It is strictly genteel, and the best and only thing ever introduced which every person can make money at. NO LETTERS NOTICED, except those containing the required amount for instructions.

Address, ABEL J. WILLARD,
79 Nassau Street, N. Y.

MANHOOD
AND THE
VIGOR OF YOUTH RESTORED
IN FOUR WEEKS,
By Dr. Sicotte's Essence of Life.

DR. SICOTTE, (OF PARIS) after years of earnest solicitation, has at length acceded to the urgent request of the American public, and appointed an agent in Toronto for the sale of his valued and highly prized Essence of Life. This wonderful agent will restore Manhood to the most shattered constitutions, whether arising from excesses, the effects of climate, or natural causes. The time required to cure the most inveterate case is four weeks; and if used according to printed instructions, which are very simple, failure is impossible. This life-restoring remedy should be taken by all about to marry, as its effects are permanent. It is acknowledged by the medical press to be the greatest discovery ever made. Its developing powers are miraculous. Success in every case is as certain as that science overthrows ignorance.

Dr. Sicotte's Essence of Life is sold in cases, with full instructions for use, at $3, or four quantities in one for $9, and will be sent to any part, carefully packed, on receipt of remittance to his accredit agent.

TWENTY-SIXTH BIRTHDAY
OF THE
STAR PAPER OF AMERICA!
January 1, 1864.

The New York Mercury
FOR THE
COMING YEAR.

AFTER more than a quarter of a century of uninterrupted success, The New York Mercury—standing first on the muster-roll of the Literature Press in this country—points proudly to its past career as a guarantee of new triumphs in the future.

Heretofore, it has eclipsed all rivalry; but it proposes to make the coming year memorable by eclipsing its own past history, and looming up before the world as the most marvelous specimen of a fascinating, brilliant, amusing, and comprehensive Literary Newspaper that has ever been published in either hemisphere.

THE GENIUS OF EUROPE

will be laid under contribution to give brilliancy to its columns, and side by side with original productions of the most popular romancists of the Old Word, will be placed the chef d'œuvres of the most eminent story-writers of the New.

MISS M. E. BRADDON,

Authoress of "Aurora Floyd," "Lady Audley's Secret," "John Marchmont's Legacy," etc., etc., who has suddenly risen, like

A STAR OF THE FIRST MAGNITUDE

in the literary horizon of Great Britain, has been specially engaged to supply The New York Mercury from time to time with the wonderful creations of her genius, at a cost which no other weekly in America could venture to incur.

☞ Among the multitude of distinguished writers and artists who have become familiar to the masses through the vast circulation of the STAR WEEKLY OF AMERICA, may be mentioned the following, all of whom are still upon its staff:

Dr. J. H. Robinson, Margaret Bloomfield, Ned Buntline, Arthur M. Grainger, Horace Gardner, Felix O. C. Darley, Miss M. E. Braddon, Cousin May Carelton, W. O. Eaton, George Martial, Julia S. Graham, Edward Willett, Mary Chief, George Albany.

Scores of other distinguished literati, under various nons de plume, contribute to its columns, while its pictorial illustrations are from the inimitable pencil of Felix O. C. Darley, Esq., the best draughtsman of the age.

The War, which has given the coup de grace to so many pretentious publications, and half destroyed those that still survive, had added thousands to the circulation of The New York Mercury.

Its heart-stirring short stories, its military historieties, its matchless serial romances, its racy buel iques, its general wit and humor, its delicious gossip, its fairy tales for little folks, its rare poetry, its fresh and vigorous editorials the infinite variety of its contents, and the large amount of reading matter that it comprises, render it welcome everywhere, and to classes of society. Containing, as it does, of closely-printed matter, it may safely be pronounced the cheapest, as well as the best Literary Newspaper extant.

FORTY COLUMNS

Three favorite writers, Doctor J. H. Robinson, Cousin May Carleton, and Ned Buntline, are now preparing three stories for The New York Mercury. One of those productions will be commenced in the Opening Number of the New Year. The authors being aware of this fact, are engaged in an emulative contest for precedence, and the result will unquestionably be that the most attractive story ever penned by any of the three, will commence in the

NEW YEAR'S NUMBER

of the great REPRESENTATIVE WEEKLY of the Western World.

The New York Weekly is sold by all newsmen and periodical dealers in America. To subscribers, it is regularly mailed every Saturday morning, for $2 a year; three copies for $5; six copies for $9; eight copies for $12, with an extra copy, free, to the getter-up of the club. Six months' subscriptions received. Always write plainly the name of your Post office County and State. We take the notes of all solvent banks at par. Payment must invariably be made in advance.

☞ Specimen copies sent to all applicants.

SOLDIERS in the ARMY!
AND OUR PEOPLE AT HOME,
Are now offered an opportunity by which they can obtain a
GOOD AND DURABLE TIME-PIECE,
At a very Low Figure.

OUR WATCHES are warranted to keep time one year, and the buyer is allowed the privilege of examination before the payment is required.

Improved Duplex in full Ruby Actions.

A first-class Hunting Time-Piece of silver material, over which is electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, most durably wrought, making the imitation so faultless that it cannot be detected from the solid material by the most experienced Judges; acids will not affect it. London made movement. Improved Duplex in full Ruby Actions has sweep seconds, and is not to be excelled in general appearance. This decidedly the one of the best articles ever offered for traders and speculators. Engineers, emigrants and persons travelling will find them superior to any other; alteration of climate will not affect their accuracy. Price, packed in good shape and good running order, only $35, or case of 3 for $100.

Silver Double Time Hunting Levers,

Best quality silver cases, over which electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, similar to our improved Duplex, and superior adjusted movements with "stop," to be used in timing horses, ect.: has four ludexes for Washington and Greenwich time, sweep second, and all the improvements. All in all, taking its beautiful and faultless appearance and its superior movement into consideration, we regard it as decidedly the cheapest article of the kind in the market. Price, in good running order, $35, or case of 6 for $200.

☞ We ask no pay in advance, but will forward either of them to responsible parties, to any part of the loyal States, with bill payable to the express-man when the Good are delivered, giving the buyer the privilege of examination, and, if not satisfactory, the watch can be returned at our expense.

The express companies refuse making collections on soldiers, and other parties in the disloyal States, consequently all such orders must be accompanied by the cash to insure attention. We make a deduction on either Watch when the payment is forwarded in advance.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK,
For 1864.
GREAT LITERARY & PICTORIAL YEAR.

THE PUBLISHER of Godey's Lady's Book, thankful for that public which has enabled him to publish a Magazine for the last thirty-four years of a larger circulation than any in America, has made an arrangement with the most popular authoress in this country—

MARION HARLAND,
Author of "Alone," "Hidden Path," "Miriam," "Moss Side," and "Nemona,"

Who will furnish Stories for the Lady's Book for 1864. This alone will place the Lady's Book in a literary point of view fare ahead of any other Magazine. One other favourite writer will all continue to furnish articles throughout the year.

The best Lady's Magazine in the world and the Cheapest.

THE LITERATURE

Is of that kind that can be read aloud in the family circle, and the clergy in numerous numbers are subscribers for the Book.

THE MUSIC

Is all original, and would cost 25 cents, (the price of the Book) in the music stores; but most of it is copyrighted, and cannot be obtained except in Godey.

OUR STEEL ENGRAVINGS.

All efforts to rival us in this have ceased, and we now stand alone in this department, giving as we do many more and infinitely better engravings than are published in any other work. Godey's immense double sheet Fashion-Plates, containing from five to seven full length colored Fashions on each plate—other Magazines give only two—are far ahead of any Fashions in Europe or America. The publication of these Plates cost $10,000 more than the Fashion Plates of the old style, and nothing but our wonderfully large circulation enables us to give them. Other Magazines cannot afford it. We never spare money when the public can be benefited.

These Fashions may be relied on. Dresses may be made after them, and the wearer will not subject herself to ridicule, as she would be if she visited the large cities dressed after the style of the plates in some of our so-called Fashion Magazines.

OUR WOOD ENGRAVINGS,

Of which we give twice or three times as many as any other Magazine, are often mistaken for steel; they are so far superior to any others.

IMITATIONS.

Beware of them. Remember that the Lady's Book is the original publication and the cheapest. If you take Godey, you want no other Magazine. Everything that is useful or ornamental in a house will be found in Godey.

DRAWING LESSONS.

No other Magazine gives them, and we have given enough to fill several large volumes.

OUR RECEIPTS

Are such as can be found nowhere else. Cooking in all its varieties—Confectionary—the Nursery—the Toilet—the Laundry—the Kitchen Receipts upon all subjects are to be found in the pages of the Lady's Book. We originally started this department, and have peculiar facilities for making it most perfect. This department alone is worth the price of the book.

LADIES' WORK TABLE.

This department comprises engravings and descriptions of every article that a lady wears.

MODEL COTTAGES.

No other Magazine has this department.

Terms to Subscribers in the British Provinces:

One copy one year, $3; two copies one year, $5; three copies one year, $7.

Five copies one year, and an extra copy to the person sending the club, making six copies for $11.50.

Special Clubbing with other Magazines.

Godey's Lady's Book and Arthur's Magazine, one year, $4.

Godey and Harper, one year, $5.

Godey, Harper, and Arthur, one year, $7.

At these prices subscribers in the Provinces will have only the British postage to pay.

Treasury notes and notes of all solvent banks taken at par.

THE BENEFACTOR OF HIS RACE
THE GREAT HEALER OF MANKIND,
The Whole World United!
SICK PEOPLE THINK!
AFTER WHICH, ACT.
Herrick's Sugar Coated Pills,
CHILDREN CRY FOR THEM!

THIS remarkable American remedy is carrying the world by storm. Over five million boxes are sold annually. Composed entirely of Flowers, Roots, Balsams, and Extracts,—their effect on the human system is pleasant, satisfactory, and successful.—Acting directly on the blood, glands, solids and fluids of the body, their use is attended with the happiest effects. In such dreadful attacks of diseases, one or two doses almost always cures. In old standing cases of sickness, small doses—repeated frequently—so cleanse the system that good health is the result. No change in employment or diet is necessary. They never cause sore mouths, swelled joints, aching limbs, etc., as do many other kinds. They are warranted to give satisfaction, or the money will be refunded. They are considered cheaper, safer, prettier, and in all respects superior to any purgatives put in the world.

☞ The discovery of coating a pill with sugar emanated with Dr. Herrick. All others are counterfeits and if used, will do harm, and disappoint the sick. Herrick's pills are elegantly put up. 25 in a box, with a large sheet of directions, and sold for 25 cents a box; 5 boxes for $1.

☞ We ask no pay in advance, but will forward either of them to responsible parties, to any part of the loyal States, with bill payable to the express-man when the Good are delivered, giving the buyer the privilege of examination, and, if not satisfactory, the watch can be returned at our expense.

The express companies refuse making collections on soldiers, and other parties in the disloyal States, consequently all such orders must be accompanied by the cash to insure attention. We make a deduction on either Watch when the payment is forwarded in advance.

Herrick's Kid Strengthening Plaster.

THE GREAT STRENGTHENER AND PAIN DESTROYER. THE BEST AND CHEAPEST HOUSEHOLD REMEDY IN THE WORLD.

These renowned Plasters cure pains, weakness and distress in the back, sides and breast, in five hours. Indeed, so certain are they to do this, that the proprietor warrants them. Spread from rennet, calamus and gums, on beautiful kid leather, renders them peculiarly adapted to the wants of females and others. Their application is universal—equally to the strong man, the feeble woman, and the delicate infant. To each and all they prove a balm and a blessing. Their use is agreeable, and without annoyance or trouble.—Each Plaster will wear from one to four months, and in rheumatic complaints, spasms and bruises frequently, effects cures where all other remedies fail. Full directions will be found on the back of each. Besides spasms, weakness, pleurisies of the pungal Lungs, they will strengthen their lungs and improve their voices by wearing them on their breasts. Price 25 cents.

The above articles are sold by all the dealers in Canada, and by druggists throughout the United States and South America, at wholesale by all large druggists in the principal cities.

THE DYING STUDENT.

Pale and careworn on his pallet,
Lone the dying student lay,
No kind friend to soothe his sorrow—
Those he loved were far away;
Led from home by wild ambition,
Sighing for the wreath of fame,
Worn by toil, he sinks in anguish,
Yet no honors crown his name.

Parched with fever, lost to reason,
On a bed of pain he tossed—
A mother's only hope and comfort,
Wrecked upon ambition's coast;
See, he wakens from his slumber,
And from all his painful dreams,
And, like lightning 'mid the darkness,
Reason on his memory gleams!

And he hears the wintry tempest
Round his dwelling howling loud,
And he knows that ere the morrow,
Death will wrap him in his shroud;
Now his reason sinks forever,
And strange fancies cloud his brain,
And he thinks he sees his sister
And his mother once again!

And he tells, in mournful sadness,
How his end is drawing near,
And how much his heart is smitten
Leaving friends he loves so dear;
Oh my sister, 'tis a sad thing
Thus to sink in early bloom,
Can no friend in pity save me
From the cold and lothesome tomb?

"Hark! it is the voice of summer,
Come, we'll spend the sunny hours,
Wandering by the lisping river,
Talking to the sweet wild flowers;
No, no, I cannot leave these scenes—
Hark! the throstle's gladsome song,
Hark! the winds soft singing murmurs,
As it sweeps the trees along.

"List! those strains with harp strings
Stealing sweetly on mine ear—
Mother, sister, hark! their echoes,
Falling still more sweet and clear;
Come, my sister, let me kiss thee
On thy bright and blooming cheek,
Why, my mother, art thou silent
Will you not unto me speak?

"Remove that dark veil from mine eyes,
Do not let me hear you weep,
Dark, and darker grows my vision,
Fare thee well, I now must sleep."
Now his toil and trouble's over,
Calmly he slumbers on that bed,
Bright the sun shall rise to-morrow,
But it will not wake the dead!

Miscellaneous.

THE ENGLISH MIND.

(From the Saturday Review.)

An article which we published some weeks back on "The Scotch Mind" was fortunate enough to attract the attention of its ablest organs—namely, the Scotsman newspaper. After many interesting remarks on our article, our courteous critic undertook to give the true reasons why the Scotch mind finds it difficult to sympathise with the English neighbor; and in doing so, he took occasion to make some observations on the English mind which are more commonly made on the continent than in these islands. We English, so runs the charge, are the most insular of all human beings—as insular morally as we are geographically. As between us and the Scotch, by the way, the reproach of geographical insularity is rather curious, but let that pass. We dislike and condemn everything, without appeal or inquiry, it seems, if it is proved to be foreign. We are perfectly ignorant of foreign customs, as was shown among other things, by certain misapprehensions of the technical language of Scotch law, charged against us in the Saturday Review, and by the criticisms of the Times on the Scotch criminal procedure in the case of Jessie M'Lachlan. Above all, we are notorious all over Europe for our narrow and special way of viewing things. We know nothing of general language or broad principles, and take every opportunity of scoffing at them in others. This, of course is the well known continental view. It is just what is said by every French newspaper and pamphlet. It is the appropriate remark to make when the dispatches of Lord Russel are compared with those of the French minister. For years and years we have got to view its repetition as a matter of course; but from a critic who must excuse us from considering him as a countryman, such remarks are not quite commonplace, and when they are made they deserve a rather more careful criticism than they usually get.

First, then, is their either truth or justice in the pet phrase which describes us as an "insular" people? To treat the fact that we live in an island or rather in part of one, as raising any sort of presumption that we are cut off from the rest of the world, is to fall into the miserable fallacy of Horace about the oceanus dissociabilis. Through out the history of Europe the sea has been the great connector of nations. Till railways were invented, water carriage was much the easiest way of travelling for all purposes; and it is so far from being the case that we are cut off from other nations by our insular position that, in all probability, there was no nation in Europe which had so much intercourse with foreigners. In the year 1066, this country was conquered by a foreign army, composed partly of Normans-Frenchmen, partly of adventurers from all parts of Europe. From the conquest down to the time of Henry III., England formed only part of the dominions of its own kings, and often not the most important part. Till the reign of Edward III., our laws were made and our legal documents were drawn up in a foreign language. In later times we have been far more intimately connected with the politics of France and Spain than either of those countries has been with the affairs of the other, and for the last two centuries we have been the greatest colonizers in the world. Of the subjects of Queen Victoria, those who speak the English language form to the shy the minority, and not a very large one. In a word, no nation in the world has had so much business of every kind with so many different sorts of foreigners as the English nation, which is said to be so completely isolated and wrapt up in itself. It is but common candour to own that if we are narrow-minded and self-conceited, we sin against a greater amount of light and knowledge than any other people, for no nation ever had such varied experience her men's ways of thinking and habits of life. The fact that we inherit an island, and that the island is great Britain, is so far from being an explanation, that it ought to be put forward as an aggravation of our faults. "These people live," it should be said, "on the greatest highway in the world. Within their own bounds there are three separate nations: they are close to France, near to Spain, opposite Belgium, within call of Germany and all the Scandinavian nations; their harbours are the points of departure for all intercourse between Europe and America, and they have stations for war and commerce all round the world. They have an enormous empire, and a still wider sphere of influence, in the East, and yet they are so narrow, so bigoted, so ignorant, that they judge everything by their own petty standard, and have no notion that any feelings or opinions except their own are to be found in the whole world."

The existence of such invincible bigotry is, a priori, so unlikely that it appears probable that, after all, there is some mistake about the matter; and there are some grounds for supposing that this is actually the case. It would be difficult to find any nation which has done so much in the way of reforming its institutions as England in the course of the last generation. Every sort of opinion has been put forward and made the basis of proposals for reform, more or less successfully, and it is altogether incorrect to say that we have, as a rule, refused to be guided by or to attend to the experience of other countries. For instance, when the present system of subsidizing schools was set on foot, the first step taken was to examine into foreign systems of popular education, and to take such parts of them as were considered suitable to our own circumstances. When it was supposed that our military system had broken down in the Crimean campaign, there was a universal anxiety to see how the French managed their army, and to learn from their example. When the French sent La Gloire to sea, we immediately began to build iron-plated ships. Nearly the whole of our law has been re-cast with living memory. Any one who undertakes the subject will admit that, in directing the operation, great attention has in many instances been paid to the practice of other countries. For example, the reports of the criminal law commissioners are full of reference to foreign codes. When the question where public prosecutors ought to be established was considered, some years ago before a committee of the House of Commons, evidence was collected as to the practice of a number of foreign countries on that point. It would be no difficult matter to show that, at every period of English legal history, from the time of Fraction downwards, Roman law has exercised a considerable influence over judicial decisions, although it has not with us that binding force which attaches it in many parts of Europe; and for a length of time American decisions have been freely quoted in our courts. Indeed, it would be about as rational to assert that English people never travel as to say that we confine ourselves to our own experience, and know and care nothing for what is passing in foreign countries. Would the Scotsman assert, for instance, that our scientific men are cut off from the world? That Sir C. Lyell recognises no continental feuds, that Mr. Owen never heard of Custer, that Mr. Tyndall's notions of glaciers are taken exclusively from snows on the hills of North Wales, that English mathematicians are unknown on the continent, and that the British association has no foreign members? When it is asserted that the first characteristic of an Englishman is narrow, local exclusiveness, and that Dr. Johnson ought to be regarded as the type of the English genius, it is as well to ask such questions. With great submission to the Scotch or other foreigners, we are not altogether a nation of unlicked cubs. There are people amongst us who can and do read other languages than their own, and who achieve a wider audience than is to be found within the four seas.

The truth appears to be that the writer in the Scotsman, like many other critics of this country, takes for a characteristic of the national mind what is very little more than a matter of literary style, or at most an accidental and temporary peculiarity. It is perfectly true that there is on the continent and especially in France, a form of line writing which we English cordially dislike, and which is not badly exemplified by the platitudes and counter-platitudes to be found in the French and Russian state papers about the Congress. The reason of our dislike is not that we are averse to general truths but that we consider such language affected nonsense, and not truth at all. General propositions are in their proper place in speculative writings, and plenty of them will be found in English works on subjects to which they are appropriate. What, for instance, can be more general and abstract than Ricardo's theory of rent, or Bentham's theory of morals, or Mr. Mills' theory of the functions of the spiritual? In writings meant for a temporary or practical purpose, generalities are almost out of place. Practical discussions assume that the parties do not differ upon first principles. It is not to be supposed that a leading article or a despatch will change the fundamental principles of those for whom it is intended. Hence the education of general principles in such a composition must be more matter of vanity. When the Emperor of Russia talks to the Emperor of the French about recording history, the inglorious legacy of the past, with progress, the law of the present and future, and when the King of Italy says that the principles of nationality and liberty are the essence of the life of modern nations, they are not really thinking but only bragging—just as much as Louis Napoleon himself bragged when he swaggered about being a parvenu, and having learnt moderation in adversity. The reason why we English do not brag in this particular form—for we have, no doubt, ways of our own of showing our opinion of ourselves is not difficult to assign. We are an extremely proud people, and do not at all like to be made to look foolish. We are also intensely critical. There is no nation in the world in which there is such entire freedom of speech and writing, and in which, on the whole, the class who speak and write are so fastidious, and so highly educated. English criticism has kicked into mediocrity a great number of extravagant persons, and anything like extravagance or pretension in the language of public men would be so unmercifully ridiculed in the country that no one dares to resort to it. The plainness of our usual language is, in reality, a measure of the severity of the standard which prevails amongst us. To inquire why the standard is so severe would lead us too far for the limits of an article, but many reasons will suggest themselves to a fair observer which do not assume the strange conclusion that a nation, which, at events may claim to be one of the great nations of the world, is incurably narrow and stupid. In politics, where our alleged narrowness is most observable, we have outlived the period of generalities. There was a time when we used them freely. If any one wants to know what they were, and what was their value, he has only got to look over Bentham's "Book of Fallacies" from which he may learn how far well-sounding phrases are to be trusted as guide to truth. The generalities on which the American Declaration of Independence was grounded were of English growth, and so were the speculations which led to them. We do not use such phrases now, because they do not suit us, and they do not suit us because experience shows that they are not true. The experience which shows that they are not true is that of nearly two generations spent in practical reforms of unequalled extent and importance.

Other causes might be assigned for our plainness of speech, but our critics really should try to find them out, instead of assuming that all we have done in the world is the work of narrow and stupid selfishness.

HEALTHFULNESS OF WOOLENS.

The most suitable clothing for our variable climate is a subject of much importance to all. In the last report of the National Agricultural Department, there is an essay upon this topic, some parts of which we condense with comments. Wool being an excellent non-conductor of heat, it is very suitable as a material for clothing. Surgeons universally recommend it. Dr. Hall in his Journal of Health says:—"In winter and summer nothing can be better worn next the skin than a loose, red woolen shirt; loose, for it has room to move on the skin thus causing a titillation which draws the blood to the surface and keeps it there, as when this is the case no one can take cold. Cotton would merely absorb the moisture from the surface of the body, while woolen flannel conveys it from the skin and deposits it in drops outside of the shirt, and by the exposure to the air it is soon dried without injury to the body. Having these properties, red woolen flannel is worn by sailors even in the mid-summer of the warmest countries. The common observation of all nations leads them to give the preference to woolen flannel shirts for all latitudes as the best equalizers of heat for the body."

In the French 'Annales d'Hygiene' the following remarks occur;—"Diseases of the chest are early contracted by exposure to the cold without sufficient clothing. The greater portion of the children, from one to fifteen months old who die in winter are killed by the cold or diseases resulting from cold. The use of woolen clothing in winter is necessary for all, at least about the upper parts of the body; and even in summer the man who from his profession is compelled to work in damp places, and is exposed to draft, should not wear light clothes. Woolen socks should everywhere be adopted, cold feet are almost always the cause of catching cold (catarrh) an obstinate cough is known to cease from the exclusive use of this sort of clothing.

We have heard some persons say that their feet have been kept as warm with cotton as woolen stockings; and there are some persons who cannot wear woolen flannel next the skin without suffering from cutaneous irritation. There are exceptions to all general rules but undoubtedly woolen flannel affords the best clothing to be worn next the skin in our variable climate for at least nine months in the year. But white flannel is just as good for shirts as colored flannel. The cause of flannel falling and becoming thick is owing to the rubbing which it receives in washing, and flannels of all colors full up (felt) under similar treatment. All broadcloth dyed in the wool is fulled after it is colored. Flannels should never be rubbed upon a wash-board The best way to wash flannels is to steep them in some strong soap-suds for about half an hour, then squeeze them between the hands for a short period, rinse thoroughly in warm water and hang them out to dry without ringing. Scottish American.

BOYS OUT AT NIGHTS.—The practice of allowing boys to spend their evenings in the street is one of the most ruinous, dangerous, mischievous, and fatal things possible. It speedily and surely marks their case downward. They acquire under cover of the night, an unhealthy state of mind, vulgar and profane language, obscene practices, criminal sentiments, and a fearless and criminal bearing. Indeed, it is in the streets after night fall, that the boys generally acquire the education and capacity for becoming rowdys, dissolute, criminal men. Parents, do you realize the fact? An awful responsibility rests upon you. You are much more to blame than your children. The profanity and rowdyism to be heard and seen in the streets of many a town after night-fall, is sad indeed, and in a majority of cases the contaminating influences received in the streets at night by the boys is very apt to stain the future character of the man.

HINTS TO MOTHERS.

BE WHAT YOU SEEM.

"Walk in Mrs. Jones," said a mother, as she ushered a visitor into the family room where her three daughters were seated. "It seems an age since you were here. You have quite neglected us. I really felt quite unhappy about it, and wondered what kept you away so long." And so the lady ran on, enlarging upon the happiness at seeing her friend once more. The lady was pleased with her appreciation of her society, and after a pleasant visit of a reasonable length prepared to go. Then followed an urgent request that she should not longer, succeeded by a pressing invitation to call again.

The acquaintance passed on down the street, and the mother turned to the three young ladies, as she re-sumed the work which had been laid aside for the caller, with the pettish remark, "I wonder how people find so much time to run about the streets and trouble their neighbors."

This mother was a professing Christian, and but a short time before had expressed her deep concern to her pastor for the souls of her daughters. "I talk with them, and pray and labour for their conversion, but it all seems to do no good."

Alas, could they possibly have confidence in a religion which was thus represented? would not the mother's insincerity make a deeper impression on their hearts than all her precepts?

Remember mother, there are sharp eyes watching you every hour. "There's a chiel among them taking notes," when you least suspect it. You may sometime "get on the blind side" of older people, but seldom on that of the keen, honest-hearted children. And oh, what fatal consequences may result from your inconsistency with your high profession as Christian mothers. When once a child loses faith in mother, one of the great anchor cables of his life is severed, and fearful indeed may be the shipwreck. Be what you seem to all the world, mother, if you would have your children believe in your truth. No authority can command their respect for a hypocritical mother. They will in heart despise her character, though unmeaning natural affection, which they share in common with the lower orders of animal life, may bind their hearts to her. Still it is weak as a spider's web, compared with the might of that motherly influence, who can command the unsullied respect and perfect confidence of her children.

RULES ON HOME EDUCATION.

1. From your children's earliest infancy inculcate the necessity of instant obedience.

2. Unite firmness with gentleness. Let your children always understand that what you say you mean.

3. Never promise them anything unless you are quite sure you can give them what you promise.

4. If you tell a little child to do something, show him how to do it, and see that it is done.

5. Always punish your children for wilfully disobeying you, but never punish them in anger.

6. Never let them perceive that they vex you, or make you lose your self-command.

7. If they give way to petulence and temper, wait till they are calm, and then gently reason with them on the impropriety of their conduct.

8. Remember that a little present punishment when the occasion arises is much more effectual than the threatening of a greater punishment should the fault be renewed.

9. Never give your children anything because they cry for it.

10. On no account allow them to do at one time what you have forbidden, under like circumstances, at another.

11. Teach them that the only sure and easy way to appear good is to be good.

12. Accustom them to make their little recitals with perfect truth.

13. Never allow tale-bearing.

14. Teach them that self-denial, not self-indulgence of an angry and resentful spirit, will make them happy.

CUSTOMS OF NORWAY.—In Norway the mode of living is simple and uniform in every family or party. You are invited by a list carried round on horseback, and opposite to your name, you put down that you accept or decline. You are expected about four o'clock, long after dinner, for which twelve or one is the usual time. The stranger who will take the trouble to come early will be much gratified, for there is nothing on the Continent so pretty as the arrival of a sledge party. The distant jingling of the bells is heard, before anything can be seen through the dusk and the snow; and sound rapidly approaching is one of the most pleasing impressions on our senses. Then one sledge seems to break, as it were, through the cloud, and is followed by a team of twenty or thirty, sweeping over the snow. The spirited action of the little horses, with their long manes and tails, the light and elegant form of the sledges appearing on the white ground, the ladies wrapt in their furs and shawls, the gentleman standing behind, driving in their wolf-skin pelisses, the master of the house and the servants at the door with candles, form a scene particularly novel and pleasing.—Coffee and tea are handed round to each person on their arrival; and the company walk round the room and converse. There are never any of those dismal, awkward pauses in company, nor of that reliance on one or two good talkers, or hackneyed subjects, such as wind, weather and news, which characterise society in England and Scotland; everybody seems to have something to say, and to say it, and conversation do a not flag. This arises, probably, from the temperament of the people, and the total absence of pretence in their character; that is, of wishing to appear more or less important, more or less rich, more or less learned, or more of anything than they really are.—Paper.

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, JANUARY 28TH, 1864.

Supposing the discontented in Parliament, at its opening, are able by their combined but fleetless conduct to oust the present Ministry, what then? What better condition would the country be in, either for the time being or prospectively? We confess we cannot see. It may be our obtuseness; but if it is, obtuseness seem to be the general failing of the Opposition journals; for however loud their wail of woe, or strong their denunciation of the Ministry for inefficiency, want of policy, &c., it is remarkable that neither they nor the leaders of their party have indicated in the slightest degree any policy they would pursue if in power. In fact, so far as we can see, they have no policy. The only aim of the Oppositionists seems to be to wheel those in power out, and themselves in. Don't they wish they could do it? They don't find fault with what the present Government has done, but with what it has not done. Who are to blame for this—who obstructed the business of last session in a manner most shameful and only to be equalled by some of the earlier sessions of the English parliament under the GEORGES? Our Opposition friends can best answer these questions, and perhaps at the same time they will tell us whether or not such conduct was dictated solely by principle or from a regard to the best interest of the Province. But there is no use of them telling; people can see for themselves and deduce their own conclusions. If the motives of the Opposition members were proper, all we have got to say about the matter is, there was a tremendous gulf of inconsistency and incongruity between motives and action. We do not wish to impugn motives, but one can hardly help it in this case. It, indeed, sometimes happens that persons with the best of motives are, by circumstances or influence, led into excesses and to do acts which in their hearts and during the moments of calm reflection they disapprove of; but in these cases there is generally something wrong about the "upper story." They are weak-minded, or vacillating, or easily led by those who, from their superior tact or knowledge of human nature, know well how to lead and use them. This may be the case with our Opposition friends; and humiliating as it is, it would better be so than that conduct should have for its mainspring motives of a selfish or unworthy character. But when it is evident that any change of Government at the present time cannot be otherwise attended than with very serious injury to the best interests of the Province, we think that patriotism should rise superior to petty personal, or party claims. The Ministry ought to have a fair trial. This is what the people of Upper Canada want, and those members who prove themselves recreant to their promises and the wishes of their constituents in attempting to prevent this, will assuredly suffer the penalty of their pig-headed stubbornness—to say nothing worse—when the day of reckoning comes. It is gratifying, however, to know that notwithstanding the efforts of that loving pair—John A. and D'Arcy—who, though they a short time ago fought like cats, are now (in more senses than one,) boon companions—that the majority of the Ministry during the coming Session, will be much larger than during the last. We hope it will; for we again ask, in what better condition would the country be if the present Ministry were defeated? Who would—who could succeed? Do the people wish to incur the expenses of a general election.

NEXT PRESIDENT.

The question that now seems to be agitating the political world, among our neighbors is who is to be the next President? There are many, no doubt, who would like to fill the presidential chair. The Democrats anxious to get hold of the reins of power once more, are moving heaven and earth as it were to vivify and strengthen their party, which reverses of late years have so shattered and torn to pieces. Their nominee is Gen. GEO. B. MCLELLAN in whose abilities and grasp of intellect they profess to have the most unbounded confidence, & whom the Democratic papers laud sky high, and declare him to be a regular NAPOLEON, in that warlike genius, and that singular combination of good qualities essential to make a successful general. Perhaps he is all they say; but all dont believe it. At any rate he is the most available man, and that is reason enough, apart from any other consideration why he should be the nominee of his party. Availibility is the best qualification a man can have on the other side. The Democrats, however, judging from past defeats and present appearances, do not seem to have much chance in the presidential race. They are too far behind. The Republican party, which now is in the ascendancy and which embraces in itself, it must be confessed, elements of a most heterogeneous nature, appears not to have everything its own way. A party in power has always many appliances at hand for perpetuating that power. This is true in ordinary times; but in times like the present, in the United States, when the war excitement is at its height, and when the interests of thousands would be materially affected by any change in their chief rulers, the means and appliances at hand of retaining power, become greatly augmented and of a most formidable character. This very fact would ensure the Republicans a lease for the next four years. They are not ignorant of this, and look forward to it as almost an absolute necessity. As yet the Republicans have nominated no candidate. Although a number of probable candidates have been mentioned, it appears to be a current opinion that the present chief ruler will be re-nominated. There are many reasons for this. His party as a whole, are satisfied with Mr. LINCOLN'S administration. Not that they are convinced, that he is perfect, but they have confidence in his honesty, his shrewd sense, and his patriotism. The manner in which he has discharged his onerous duties, amid the embarrassments that have environed him on every side, have won for him the confidence and support of the loyal and industrious. They are sure that in his hands, the reins of power and the constitution are safe, and that he will strain every effort and make any sacrifice to benefit his country, in its present deplorable condition. He appears to be just the man for the position and the times. The people as a whole believe this, and hence, in the different States from California to Maine, steps have been taken by the Legislature leaders to secure his re-nomination. There seems, therefore, but little doubt that he will be re-elected. He has been denounced by his opponents as a tyrant for suspending the Habeas Corpus act, and other seemingly arbitrary proceedings, but if properly examined, it will be found that his conducts justified by circumstances and sustained by precedents. By reference to the political history of England it will be found that even so short a time back as the reign of the 3rd GEORGE that acts of similar description, of equally a despotic nature, under much less justifiable circumstances, were done in our constitutional England. It is an old adage that circumstances alter cases; and it is a true one. The American people have learned this by experience, and hence, not only their acquiescence in, but approval of acts which they would under more favorable circumstances have denounced as despotic and illegal in the extreme.

Gen. GRANT who now is the military darling and idol of the nation is spoken of by many as a probable candidate; but we believe he is perfectly contented with his present condition. Whatever his genius as a military commander, we have very much doubt whether he would shine equally as well in the Presidents chair. A good general does not necessarily make a successful ruler. Of the bad policy of giving successful Generals too much power, we say nothing. History has enough on that point. On the whole then we think "Old Abe," as he is familiarly called, may consider himself "safe and secure" for the second four years.

WARDEN.

The County Parliament met on Tuesday last. The election is over, and MR. PEARCE occupies the throne for another year. We say occupy, because MR. PEARCE does not literally fill it. We mean, as a matter of course, corporally. We don't wish to say a word against the choice. The election was perfectly fair this year. MR. PEARCE deserves credit for the manner in which he brought his followers to the scratch. It was a tight shave, however, after all. When a vote stands 8 to 7 there is not much to boast of. But the old adage says, a miss is as good as a mile. And MR. PEARCE is just as much Warden, as if he had 6 of a majority. We have nothing to say against MR. PEARCE. He always seems bustling and busy, and we sincerely hope that he will succeed in the duties before him. His competitor may have been the strongest man that could be brought against him; but we hardly think so. It was an honor MR. GILMOUR did not covet, and we think it would have been better to have declined standing. A man of more experience in country matters than MR. GILMOUR is required for the Wardens chair. This we have no doubt, induced more than one to cast their votes for MR. PEARCE.

GRAND WEDDING.

A grand wedding took place in the First Presbyterian Church, of this Town, yesterday, at "high noon." It was an imposing and interesting spectacle. The happy couple were ALEXANDER SMITH, ESQUIRE, the Agent of the Toronto Bank in this place, and Miss ELIZA ROGER HALL, daughter of JAMES HALL, ESQUIRE, Sheriff of the County.

Long before the time a large crowd had assembled in front o' the church waiting for the unlocking of doors to admit them. The church was packed—many not being able to get even a glimpse of the ceremony. The aisles were carpeted to the doors. The REV. MR. ROGER, the pastor of the church, officiated, which he did in an unusually impressive and solemn manner.

The Bride was given away by her father. The Bride as well as her six Bridesmaids, were superbly dressed, and in the distance, where we were standing among the hoi polloi, looked charmingly beautiful. Indeed, we heard one old gent. standing in frogt of us enthusiastically declare—"they looked like angels."

The six Groomsmen reflected no small honor upon the "sex," for the gallant bearing they presented under the "trying circumstances." Wonder if they don't wish they——? we wont—our readers must guess the rest.

After the ceremony was over, the "twain that had been made one," received the warm felicitations of their friends—the bride, as it seemed to us, being peculiarly fortunate in this respect.

The marriage party, on leaving the church, repaired to the residence of the bride's father, where, after partaking of a dejeuner that had been prepared, the happy couple started on a honeymoon tour through the States.

SMITH is a capital fellow, and has got a host of friends in Peterborough. We, therefore, heartily congratulate him on his having arrived at the "dignity of true manhood," and wish him and his fair bride every happiness in the new relations into which they have entered under so many fortunate auspices.

We omitted to say that both on the party arriving at and leaving the church, a cannon salute was fired.

The bridesmaids were the Misses L. Ball, J. Roger, Dennistoun, Ferguson, Wallis and Gilbert. They all looked beautiful; but we know which one we thought the best looking—but we don't like to say. Editors are, proverbially bashful men; but we have our opinion, anyway.

The groomsmen were Messrs. Loucks, Hall, Gilbert, Higginson, Roger and Raikes.

GOOD TEMPLARS' ANNIVERSARY.

The seventh Anniversary of the Independent Order of Good Templars, was held in their hall, on the 20th inst., MR. JOHN ROBINSON, Worthy Chief, occupied the chair.

In consequence of the Missionary Meeting of the First Presbyterian Church coming off on the same evening, there was a disappointment in not having some of the speakers present who were exected.

The music under the superintendance of BROS. PENTLAND and COLEMAN, was all that could be desired.

MR. STRATTON, of Ashburnham, Son of Temperance, delivered a very elegant address on the evils of moderate drinking.

The whole came off in a most satisfactory manner, and was closed by singing God save the Queen.

We are happy to state that the Temple is in a more flourishing condition than it has been for some time past.

SMITH COUNCIL.

SMITH, 23rd Jan., 1864.

The first meeting of said Council for 1864 was held on Monday the 18th inst.

The persons duly elected Councillors to represent the several Wards for the current year according to the certified returns of the Returning Officers appointed to hold the elections, are as follows, viz: John Walton for Ward No. 1, Marcus S. Dean for Ward No. 2, George Fitzgerald for Ward No. 3, Isaac Garbutt for Ward No. 4, and Jno. Galvin for Ward No. 5.

Each of the Councillors having made and subscribed the declaratories of qualification and of office, proceeded to elect the Reeve and Deputy Reeve.

Moved by Mr. Garbutt and seconded by Mr. Galvin,—That Jno. Walton, Esq., be Reeve of this Council for the present year. —Carried.

Moved by Mr. Galvin, seconded by Mr. Walton,—That Geo. Fitzgerald, Esq., be Deputy Reeve of this Council for the present year.—Carried.

The Reeve and Deputy Reeve having made and subscribed the declaration of office the Reeve took the chair, and nominated A. Tully one of the Auditors for the current year.

Moved by Mr. Garbutt, seconded by Mr. Dean,—That Lewis Davies be appointed one of the Auditors for the current year.—Carried.

A petition was presented and read from Wm. L. Scobell and others, praying that certain lots in S. S. No. 2 be attached to S. S. No. 3. Petition laid over.

The Reeve was directed to issue his order on the Treasurer in favor of Francis Staples for the sum of $5.

The resolution passed by this Council on the 16th day of November last, directing the Reeve to issue his order on the Treasurer for the sum of $100 in favor of Mr. Isaac Garbutt as compensation for site of road through part of Lot No. 25 in the 9th Concession of Smith, was rescinded at a subsequent meeting of the Council. It was then Moved by Mr. Garbutt and seconded by Mr. Dean,—That the By-law authorizing the opening of said Road should be repealed. The motion was lost. Arbitrators were then chosen to determine the compensation due Mr. Garbutt, and they awarded him $100. Mr. Galvin proposed that the said sum should be paid out of the general funds of the Municipality, which proposition was not assented to.

The Council then adjourned until the 4th day of February next, then to meet to appoint Overseers of Highways, Poundkeepers and Fence Viewers.

THE QUEEN A GRANDMOTHER.

THE PRINCESS OF WALES gave birth to a fine boy at Frogmore, on the 8th instant. Mother and child are doing well

In to-days issue, there will be found letters both for, and against a new Town Hall. We commend them both to the perusal and earnest consideration of the ratepayers of the Town. They are the parties particularly interested. Both sides seem plausible, and consequently they must judge for themselves.—All admit that we must some time or other have a new Town Hall. The question is what time? Shortly, or years hence? We propose shortly to give a statement of the pros. and cons. to our readers, which we trust and hope they will find an impartial one, and one upon which they can rely. We will make it a point to collate figures and facts for that purpose. In the mean time the subject can be agitated and discussed in our columns, as no doubt much useful information will be elicited thereby. Both sides of the question ought to be heard. It is the peoples matter.

CURLING.—In the Review of last week under the head of "Curliana," there is a statement that the match played on Monday the 17th inst between Peterborough and Ashburnham was the first the former have been "able to wrest from their village rivals since the organization of the clubs." By referring to the Review of April 3rd, 1863, we find an account of a match played by the same clubs, the result being: Peterborough 19, Ashburnham 17. How is this, Mr. Review? People should post themselves in what they write. So we say.

WE are happy to see that MR. J. WALLIS, son of Captain WALLIS the popular owner of the steamer Ogemah passed a creditable examination at Osgood Hall last week. He has been for some time under instruction of the present principal of the Grammar and Union School. Every student MR. DUNN has sent to Toronto has passed. One wants to know how to teach, as well as what to teach.

WE call attention to the advertisement of STETHAM & Co., who have lately gone into the Hardware business, in COULTER'S old stand; MR. STETHEM is well known to our citizens for his gentlemanly manner of doing business, and if he only succeeds in giving as good satisfaction as principal, as he did when as Clerk, we think there is no danger of the firm getting their share of public patronage.

EVERYBODY knows WARD. Well WARD has moved. Where? His advertisement tells, read it. He says he has the cheapest groceries in town, try. We think farmers and others will find his "hot coffee and tea" much better than alchoholic beverages. We go for the coffee.

BY advertisement it will be seen that G. W. Robinson is about to leave Peterborough to locate in the rising village of Lakefield. He thinks he can can do better there. Mr. Robinson is too well known here for us saying anything with regard to him. He leaves many friends here, who will always rejoice to learn of his prosperity.

WE would call the attention of those receiving certain little notes from us to the propriety of answering them as soon as possible.

SOME original articles unavoidably crowded out.

HOW THE PRINCE STOOD IT.—Almost every body wondered, and so did we; but there will be no more wondering what is best for coughs and colds, or for the cure of rheumatism, pleurisy, neuralgia, tooth-ache, sprains, strains, bruises, bowel complaint, &c. The "Canadian Pain Destroyer" now takes the lead everywhere, for such complaints, and is entirely eclipsing all other preparations of the kind.

DON'T ANNOY US!—We don't like to be annoyed in church by people barking and coughing, when by putting one of Bryan's Wafers in their mouths they may cease the annoyance. Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers cost 25 cents a box, at all Druggists.

THE TRIAL OF BISHOP COLENSO.

The following are the charges preferred against the Bishop of Natal at Cape Town, and under investigation at the date of the latest advices:

1. That he (Colenso) maintains that our blessed Lord did not die in man's stead, or bear the punishment or penalty of our sins; and that God is not reconciled to us by the death of His Son; and thus impugns and contradicts the catholic faith as expressed in articles and formularies quoted.

2. That he maintains that justification is a consciousness of being accounted righteous; and that all men, even without such consciousness, are treated by God and counted righteous; and that all men, as members of the great human family, are dead unto sin, and risen again unto righteousness; and thus denies that men are justified by faith.

3. That he maintains that all men have the true birth unto righteousness in their very birth hour—that is to say, are regenerated when born into the world, as members of the great human family; and also that all men are at all times partaking of the body and blood of Christ, and thus denies that the holy sacraments are generally necessary unto salvation, and that they convey any special grace; and, further, denies that faith is the means whereby the body and blood of Christ is received and eaten, and that faith is necessary in order that the grace bestowed by God in sacraments may have a whole-some effect and operation.

4. That he maintains that he cannot any longer maintain or give utterance to the doctrine of the endlessness of future punishments.

5. That he maintains that the Holy Scriptures contain the Word of God, but are not the Word of God.

6. That in certain passages of his works the Holy Scriptures are spoken of and treated as a merely human book, not inspired only in such a manner as other books may be inspired, and that so to speak of the Holy Scriptures is to impugn and contradict the catholic faith.

7. That in certain extracts the authenticity, genuineness, and truth of certain books of Holy Scriptures are in part or in whole denied, and that by this denial the authority and canonicity of these books, in whole or in part, are called in question and denied.

8. That he maintains that our blessed Lord was ignorant and in error upon the subject of the authorship and age of the different portions of the Pantateuch, and denies the doctrine that our blessed Lord is God and man in one person.

9. That in certain extracts the Bishop of Natal is depraving, impugning, and otherwise bringing into disrepute, the Book of Common Prayer, particularly portions of the ordinal and baptismal services, and in so doing is violating the law of the United Church of England and Ireland, as contained in the 36th of the constitutions and canons ecclesiastical.

EPICUREAN DISHES.

Ants are eaten in many countries. In Brazil the largest species are prepared with a sauce of resin. In Africa they stew them with butter. In the East Indies they are caught in pits, carefully roasted like coffee and eaten by mouthfuls afterwards. Mr. Smeatman says: "I have eaten them several times, dressed in this way, and I think them delicate, nourishing, and wholesome. They are something sweeter though not so fat and clogging as the caterpillar or maggot of the palm-tree anoni-beetle which is served up at all the luxurious tables of the West Indian epicures, particularly the French, as the greatest dainty of the Western world." A curry of ant's eggs is a very costly luxury in Siam; and in Mexico the people have, from time immemorial, eaten the eggs of a water insect which prevails in the lagunes of the city. The Cevlonese, ungrateful wretches, eat the bees after robbing them of their honey. The African bushman eat all the catterpillers they find. A bushman would be a valuable acquisition to a market gardener's cabbage field. The Australians are notorious as maggot eaters: and the Chinese, who waste nothing, eat the chrysalis of the silk-worms after they have wound the silk from its cocoon. It is said that the North American Indians used to eat locusts. The African bushman and the savages of new Caledonia are very fond of spiders roasted. This singular taste is not unknown even in Europe. Reaumer tells of a young lady who, when walking in the garden used to eat all the spiders she could catch. Lalande, the French astronomer, was equally fond of them; and a German, immortalized by Rousel, used to spread them on his bread instead of butter.—The International Magazine.

ASSAULT ON A COLORED CLERGYMAN.—We find the following in the Pittsburg (Pa.) Gazette:—"On Friday, a colored minister residing in Barnesville, Ohio, procured a ticket and took a seat in the train for Wellsville, Ohio. He had not been seated long when some soldiers, on their way home to Michigan, entered the car. One of them ordered the colored man to leave his seat, which he refused to do, remarking that he had paid his fare. The soldier then drew a knife and stabbed the unoffending man in the breast, inflicting a painful but not dangerous wound. He was taken to the office of Dr. Duke, where his wound was properly dressed. The name of the soldier is unknown, but he had been put out of the subsistence room, the previous day, for disorderly conduct. His arrest has been ordered by telegraph.

Communications.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

SIR,—I am glad to find that the erection of the new Town Hall is beginning to engage public attention. It is high time that it did so. Our town has been long enough disgraced with the want of that building. It has often been a matter of surprise to me that the people did not sooner demand that something should be done towards carrying out the required designs of improving the property of the town by the erection of the new Town Hall, because this would not only serve a useful purpose by supplying the wants of the town, but it would also lend directly to the leasing of the remainder of the Market Block—and thus add to the revenue of the town revenue. Besides such a building would show strangers that Peterborough is not altogether behind the age. Where will you find a town of the importance and growing prosperity of ours that cannot show you its large and commodious public building. It is a fact that we do not possess a room capable of accommodating the most ordinary wants. No hall for large public meetings or lectures except a miserable old room in a miserable old house used for the sale of meat. This certainly is not to their honor and credit of the Town of Peterborough—a town that is growing so fast and that stands so well throughout the country. How often I have heard strangers make the remark that it was strange the people of Peterborough did not provide a suitable public building for their growing town. How often I have heard the question asked: "Where is your Town Hall?" and then the wonder expressed that it should have been neglected so long. The fact is, Mr. Editor, besides the more immediate convenience to ourselves, the existence of such a building would more than doubly compensate us for the cost of it by the advantage it would be to the town in the estimation of strangers—for it would show them that we are what they had heard we were: an enterprising and public spirited people. Now, when they visit us, having heard so much about our town, judge of their surprise when they find that this wonderfully prosperous Town of Peterborough about which they have heard so much, does not posess the first requisite of the most ordinary village: a good Town Hall.

By the Act consolidating the town debt, provision has been made for this building, whenever the By-law for its erection shall have received the sanction of the ratepayers. And now that we have a Council composed of practical men—men who will do and not waste all their time in talking nonsense—it is to be hoped that they will not long delay in passing the requisite By-law, and lay the same before the people for their sanction. No Council, even such a Council as we were afflicted with last year, can refuse to do this much. Ask the rate-payers to say whether they want such a building or not. That is the least it can do. And to refuse this would be to refuse the people the priviledge of deciding for themselves. I trust that some Councillor will soon introduce such a By-law and I am sure that there is not one single member of the Council for this year who will say that he will not allow his constituents the privilege of deciding upon the matter for themselves. To refuse would be in effect saying that he knew better for his constituents what was for their good than they did themselves—would be in effect to say that the people were nobody, and that he was their tyrant and master. There is not one such a man in the present Council. I should like to see some correspondent show the advantages of the new Town Hall; more particularly in a pecuniary point of view.

A RATEPAYER.

Peterborough, Jan. 26th, 1864.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—As it was expected when a certain wily gentleman went into the Town Council for the present year, there was a selfish object to be gained—some scheme to be prosecuted—and we now see the ball thus early set in motion. We have within one week no less than three communications in the Examiner and Review new-papers over the signatures of "A," "Mechanic," and "Visitor," all in reference to this darling and long cherished scheme: the new Town Hall. These letters would not have appeared if the expense of this undertaking could have been incurred without the consent of the ratepayers, given by a majority of votes in the town. Therefore, we have the letter of "Visitor," (to make two such visits would require a life time) rating us for the want of energy, exhibited by the dullards of so prosperous a town, for not incurring a large debt, burdening ourselves with a heavy annual additional tax, and for not sacrificing a large amount of money by forcing off our valuable debentures at a discount of from 15 to 20 per cent. to ornament the town and enhance the value of the property of your correspondent "A" and the small clique who own property in the vicinity of the Market Square. "A." must have been studying the style of advertising by the vendors of quack medicines. He begins with an essay on politics, and goes on with a good deal of soft solder for yourself, sir. You, Mr. Editor, are the man for Galway!—you are the white headed boy—you are, indeed Real Grit, but if you write a syllable against the Town Hall you will be the greatest blackguard that ever filled an editorial chair. He finishes his essay with, "so much for politics. Now "for something else. "Mr. Editor, I think "you will agree with me" that there is nothing like leather, "and it is time, Mr. Editor, that you turned your attention to this "subject," and "I hope you will do so," and "I trust, Mr. Editor, you will give this matter your favorable consideration," and "I think that this year we have a Council "that will work." But notwithstanding this we cannot work without the consent of the people; therefore you are so urgently and anxiously solicited to aid in obtaining it. "A" knows that he has the other paper body and soul with him in this matter—their interests being one—and if he can only secure the influence of the Examiner, the work is as good as done. The letter of "Mechanic" which appeared in the Review of last week reminds me of the sailor who was entirely dissatisfied with the general state of affairs, and insisted that the only way to correct the evil was to divide all the money in the world equally every Saturday night. "Mechanic" says: "As the season "for building operations is near at hand, and "as their appears to be but a poor prospect "ahead for mechanics, I think this is the "proper time for enquiring why the erection "of our new Town Hall is not proceeded "with. * * * "I, as a mechanic, have a "personal interest in it; for if the building "is proceeded with, mechanics and laborers "must be employed, and the money spent in "its erection will be spent among ourselves." "Mechanic" wants to make money; probably he is in favor of the reigning power—the Council that will work. But he forgets that many others may not be so fortunate in this respect, and that instead of making money out of it they may have to deprive themselves of some comforts, if not the necessaries of life to be prepared for the tax gatherer and to enable others to enjoy them.

But leaving aside these letters, which are thrown out as feelers, I would caution the ratepayers to be on their guard, as they have to contend with a consummate and persevering person, who will leave nothing undone to carry out his own selfish interests, no matter what the consequences may be to the Town generally.

Let us now, for a moment, look at the undertaking these enterprising gentlemen wish to engage in. The sum fixed by Statute to be expended for the building is $16,000, but to produce this sum in money, debentures to the amount of $18,460 must be issued and sold. The interest on this, at 6 per cent, is $1,104 per annum, to which add insurance on the building $120, making $1,224 per annum, to be provided by direct taxation, loss, the amount the building may produce by rent. But this is not the worst view of the case. If we divide the loss or discount on sales of debentures, $2,460, equally over the next five years, we have, for each year, $492, which, if added to the above, will make a total annual cost of $1,764. If the debentures are drawn out at ten years date, the discount will, in that case, be greater, and the result will probably be the same. But "A." says that the erection of the building would be a source of profit to the town, by the consequent leasing of the remainder of the Market Block for new stores. This is fallacious. The business will only support a certain number of shops, and if that number is exceeded some will remain closed. If the supply is greater than the demand, the rent or price, like all other commodities, will be lower, and as the assessment is based upon the rental and not upon the value, the Income from this source would not be greater. At present, and it is a prosperous time, there are shops unoccupied in the centre of the business part of the town, and while this is the case it is not likely that persons would be found willing to build at the lower end of the Market Square.

By the exertions of a few business men who, at some sacrifice to themselves, went into the Council last year, we were saved from Chancery suits and law costs; also, from the dangerous and foolish policy of "A" in reference to our Railway matters. Last year, by means of these exertions, the town received in cash $6,000 from the Lessees of the Millbrook Branch for interest, &c., another $1,000 was probably saved in law costs and we shall receive this and every year hereafter $6,000 per annum from the same source. The town, owing to these circumstances, is beginning to lift its head. But the gentlemen who wrought so hard to frustrate this favorable arrangement is the first to endeavor to put another burden on the people. "A." says that other towns in Canada have their Town Halls. This is not denied, but some of them would be glad if both the buildings and their projectors were in the bottom of the lake, if that would save them from the taxes incurred for the cost of their erection.

The debenture debt of the town is now over $180,000, which if divided equally over the 1,055 ratepayers, shows a debt on the head of each of over $170. Surely this is large enough for the present. Still, on the whole, Peterborough has been well handled, and when compared to other towns, occupies an enviable position. But if the Reciprocity Act should be repealed next year, and the general impression is that it will, our circumstances will be greatly changed for the worse, and we may find it difficult to go on with our present indebtedness without increasing it.

Yours truly,

B.

Peterborough, Jan. 26th, 1864.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

SIR,—I was pleased last season to see the revival that was about to take place in our Cricket matters in the good Town of Peterborough. I noticed through the press that a number of Prizes were to be played for during the season; the rules and regulations respecting them were set forth and published in detail. I also noticed that a Cricketer from a neighboring city was spoken of as being instrumental in the getting up of these Prizes—he no doubt fully expecting to be a prominent winner himself; but alas for fickle Fortune, I fear that he has been sadly disappointed. Could you, Mr. Editor, inform me what has become of these Prizes? Have they been distributed? If so, who are the winners? I think it is due to the Members of the Club—and more particularly to those parties who kindly gave them—to say a few words about them publicly, so that they may know what has become of their gifts. It may be that the right parties have not come off victorious; if so, the less that is said the better. But you, Mr. Editor, will admit that fair play is a jewel. Believing this I have no doubt but that you will give me any information in your power. If you cannot, I will consult the Secretary Extraordinary at his office during business hours, and ascertain from him how matters stand meanwhile.

I remain, Mr. Editor, yours &c.,

A MEMBER.

Ashburnham, Jan. 26th, 1864.

A CHAMBER OF HORRORS.

Father Matthew had administered the last rites of religion to a young man, in whom he had a special interest and having received a summons to another part of the hospital, he hurriedly quitted the ward, from which he was absent but a short time. On his return he approached the bed in which he had left the young man alive, but the bed was now unoccupied. "Nurse nurse! What has become of the young man who lay in this bed?" asked Father Matthew. "Dead, sir," was the laconic answer. "Dead! It cannot be. Where is he?" "The corpse is taken to the dead house, sir." "I can't believe he is dead, I must go myself and see," said Father Matthew, and he proceeded to the ghostly chamber to which the dead were borne previous to being taken out for interment. It presented an awful spectacle indeed. At one end was a miserable pile of coffins, the merest shells, made of thin boards, and knocked together with a few nails. Some of these wretched receptacles were on the floor, either with their lids fastened down or open and awaiting their future occupants. On the tables, and also on the floor, lay a number of bodies, in each of which a heart throbbed and a soul dwelt a few hours before. Some lay blue and distorted in the seets in which they had been snatched from the beds on which they died; more were wrapped like mummies in similar sheets which had been covered with pitch or tar, liberally laid on to prevent contagion. Amidst that scene of death in its most appalling aspect there was a horrid bustle of life; coffins being nailed down with noisy clatter, sheets being rapidly covered over with a black and seething substance—bodies being moved from place to place, and tumbled into their last receptacle with the haste and the indifference which a terrible familiarity with death engenders in the minds of a certain class—orders hoarsely given—figures moving or reeling to and fro; for it was necessary that those who performed the horrid and revolting duties of that chamber should be well plied with whiskey; it was the custom of the time and the necessity of the moment. Into this scene of horrors, partly lighted by a few candles, Father Matthew hurriedly entered. Even the strongest might have recoiled at the spectacle which met his sight; but he only thought of the object of his mission. There lay the body and near it were two men preparing the tarred sheet in which they were to wrap it. "Stop, stop!" said Father Matthew, "surely the young man can't be dead." "Dead, your reverence! God forbid you or me would be as dead as that poor fellow—the Lord have mercy on his soul!" said one of the men. "I can't believe it—I was speaking to him one moment before I left the ward. Let me try." "Wisha, try if you plase, your reverence; but he's as dead as a door nail; and sure it does'nt take long to carry a man off in these times—God be between us and harm." There was a momentary suspension of the loathsome work as Father Matthew knelt down beside the body and pressed his hand lightly over the region of the heart. A group such as few, save perhaps those who love to paint the terrible and the hideous, would desire to see near them, clustered round the devoted priest; and not a sound was heard for a time in that chamber of death. There was a suspense for a moment—it seemed an age, when Father Matthew cried out exultingly, "Thank God, he is alive. I feel his heart beat—thank God, thank God." It was quite true—life was extinct; and restoratives having been applied, the young man was removed to another part of the hospital, and in a few days after he was able to pour forth his gratitude to him who through God's mercy, had rescued him from a certain death.

LOVE IN A COUNTRY HOUSE.—From the eve of the 12th of August in the North, and the 1st of September every where else, in hundreds of country houses agreeable frequent parties, many of which are scarcely without visitors till the beginning of the following London season. This custom is mainly confined to the British Isles; for, although it is highly appreciated by the French, Belgians, and others, the law relative to the division of property, will always so dwarf the majority of fortunes as to prevent it from figuring conspicuously as part of their social system; and the amount of wealth and prosperity which it indicates amongst us must be enormous, looking at the style in which things are done. No house where entertainment is the order of the autumn and winter months can be kept going with a less income than £10,000 a year. The different degrees to which things are well or ill done depends chiefly upon whether the host or hostess (whichever happens to reign) is 'understanding' or zealous, or the reverse. The scale aimed at varies but little anywhere. Smaller fortunes or, say, £4,000 or £5,000 a year, simply entertain fewer people, and less often, but everybody gives the same number of dishes for dinner, and champagne each day; everywhere there are carriages to drive people out keepers, in readiness, &c. There are, it is true, exceptional cases, but they are rare. At W——, a bachelor, on going to dress for dinner, beholds himself reflected on every side in vast sheets of looking-glass, by the light of no fewer than eighteen wax candles, and at K—— each married couple has a private sitting room, which is brilliantly illuminated both at the fall of day and again when the party breaks up at night; editions of the principal newspapers are provided for their especial use, and even postage envelopes are not forgotten; but what can astonish at a place where thirteen days first-rate cover-shooting can be had without going over an inch of ground twice?—Cornhill Magazine.

LORD STAMFORD AND THE RASCALITY OF THE TURF.—Lord Stamford recently announced his intention to retire from the turf. A Post article on turf scandals and turf roguery gives an insight into the causes of this wise step:—"The necessity of contending with such roguories, and of coming in contact with such robbers, so long as he patronized the noble pastime of racing, may probably have remotely contributed to the retirement from the turf of one of its most princely supporters—the Earl of Stamford and Warrington. But the immediate cause of his secession is what he asserts to be a vile and treacherous fraud upon himself. It is well known that Lord Stamford runs to win. He is understood generally to back his own horses. For the Cambridgeshire, he entered his mare Limosina. She appeared to be as much a favorite with the public as with her owner. She retained a high place in the betting to the last, and Lord Stamford was understood to have backed her to a very large amount. The day before the race she was in perfect health, and had been tried fit to run for a king's life. The morning of the contest found her in equal form; but in the afternoon, the hour of the race, she was unable to run a yard. She was compelled to be 'rousted' in the first quarter of a mile, then flogged, and abandoned for the race altogether. She was utterly beaten from the very start. Lord Stamford is firmly of opinion that she was drugged. He has expressed that opinion pretty boldly in words, but still more significantly in deeds. He quits the turf in disgust, breaks up his princely racing establishment at Newmarket, and his entire stud will be sold by auction early in next month. Racing is becoming a by-word for roguery, and it behoves the Jockey Club at least to interpose some check to the spreading of the pestilence."

SUDDEN DEATH.

CORONER'S INQUEST.

On Saturday forenoon Coroner Buchanan held an inquest at Reed's tavern, corner of Elm and Elizabeth Streets, on the body of a man, named William Crane, who died suddenly at his own residence, Elizabeth Street, about eleven o'clock on Friday night. It appeared from the evidence that the unfortunate man had taken a lively interest in the elections, and had been frequently intoxicated on those days. On the night of his death, having procured a pint of whiskey, and after drinking the greater part of it, he fell asleep in his chair. His wife was in the room at the time, but having been wearied from watching him for several nights, also fell asleep on a lounge. The son of deceased came home between eleven and twelve o'clock, and upon opening the stove door to add some wood to the fire he was surprised to see his father lying on the floor. He then discovered that he was quite dead. Having aroused his mother, the young man immediately went out for a physician, but the services of that gentleman were not required, as the unfortunate man must have died the moment he fell out of the chair. Constable Magnire was subsequently called upon to summon a jury, and they upon hearing the above facts, returned as their verdict that "deceased came to his death from congestion of the brain brought on by intemperance." The deceased was a carter, and had accumulated considerable property in St. John's ward. He leaves a wife and one son to mourne his untimely end.

A NATION OF PIGMIES.—In the Bay of Bengal, on the very high road of commerce, is a group of islands thickly covered with impenetrable jungle, and swarming with leeches in the rainy, and ticks in the dry, season. Except a species of pig, until recently unknown to science, there are no wild animals that offer any molestation to man; but to make up for this deficiency the human inhabitants are among the most savage and hostile that voyagers have ever encountred. They may truly be termed a nation of pigmies being on average only four feet five inchion high, and weighing from seventy to seventy-five pounds; but they are well proportioned, and display an agility and nimbleness truly wondeful. Their skin is dark though not as black as that of the negro, and their face decidedly ugly. They go entirely naked, shave the hair off their head with a piece of bamboo, or broken bottle, and further increase their unsightly appearance by daubing themselves all over with a mixture of red ocher and oil, or covering their person toward nightfall with a thick coating of soft mud, to serve as a protection against mosquitoes.—Home Journal.

GREAT SALE!

REAL ESTATE.

THE undersigned has been instructed to sell by Public Auction, on Wednesday the 14th day of April, 1864, the whole of that desirable and very valuable property known as the

BEAVER MEAD FARM,

Containing in all about 460 acres.

That portion of property set off for farming purposes contains 247 acres, divided into equal parts having each a frontage upon the Keene Road. On one of these lots stands the residence of the late Judge Hall, a large and commodious Cottage, an extensive and well-built stone Barn and Stables, fitted up in the best manner, together with an excellent young Orchard just beginning to bear, and a good Garden. The Meadow covers an area of about 40 acres, equally divided upon the two lots and produces an abundant crop of very fine hay.

Upon the other lot there are no buildings; has about 40 acres cleared, and 25 or 30 acres of Beaver Meadow, the remainder under wood.

The Farm is in good order, productive, and within one mile of the Town of Peterborough.
